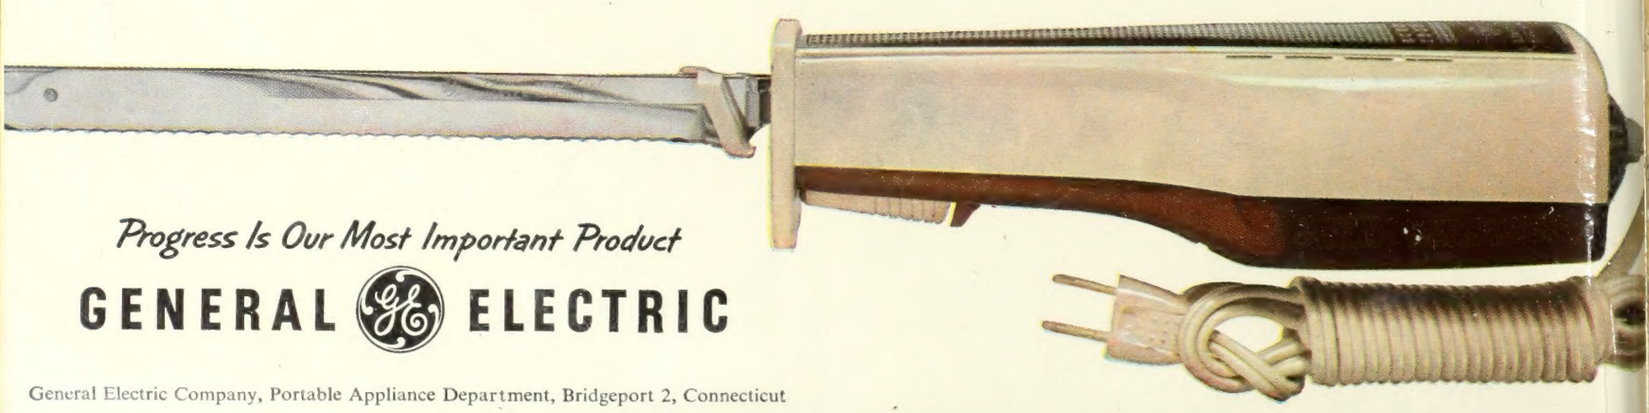
A MAN'S COOK BOOK

General Electric's new Electric Slicing Knife

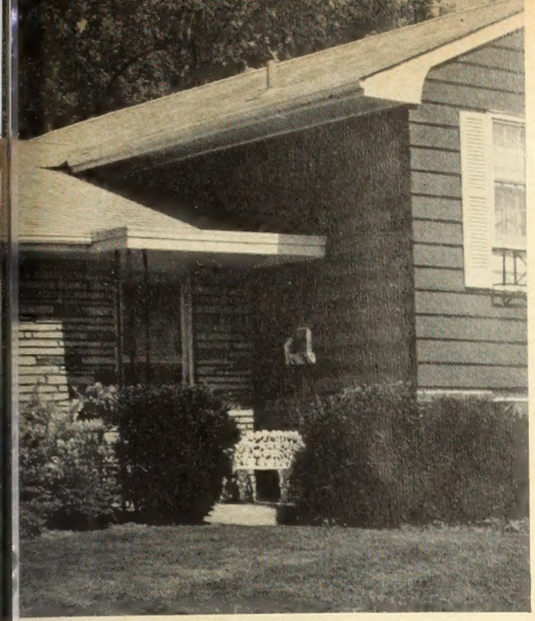
(All you do is guide it!)

asts? All you do is guide it. No tiresome sawing . . . the reciprocating ıdes do all the work. Simply press the switch and guide the knife on ur hot or cold roast beef. Carve thick slices for hearty dinners, slice fer-thin (without shredding!) for party sandwiches. The blades stop tantly when you release the switch.



Turkey? All you do is guide it. See how it travels in and around joints, s smoothly, so swiftly, so effortlessly! You carve like a professional, eve on the most difficult carving jobs. (Roast lamb, for example, as well a poultry.) The blades stay sharp, too. They're tarnish-resistant stainles steel with tough, tungsten-carbide cutting edges.

sorted foods? All you do is guide it. Buy cold cuts by the chunk and ːe them as needed. (They stay fresh longer.) Slice bread, rolls, cake; ˈt foods, like ripe tomatoes; harder foods, like frozen ice cream or sh pineapple. There's no end to the daily uses of General Electric's w Electric Slicing Knife!



Free introductory offer. See that beautiful, all-stainless-steel Carving Fork? It makes a very handsome and useful companion piece to General Electric's new Electric Slicing Knife. And it's yours free when you purchase the knife. (Available at participating dealers only.) But hurry, please. He has limited quantities only.

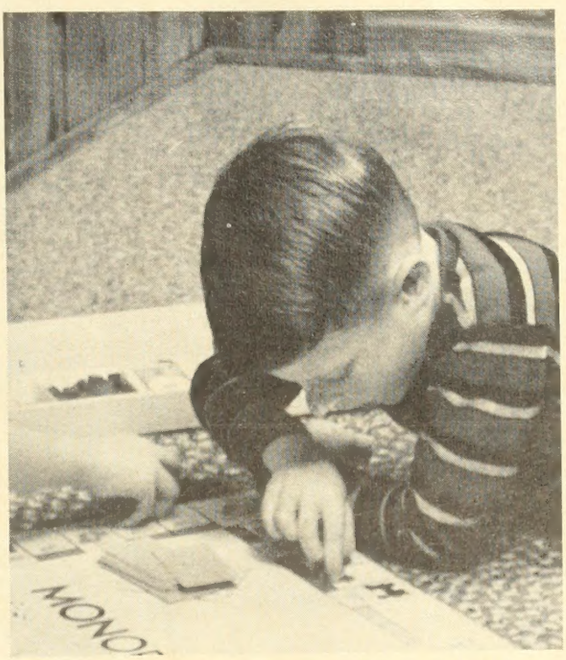
SPLIT LEVEL designs. As warm air rises to upper levels, cooler air moves to lower rooms. This can cause uncomfortable heating or cooling problems.



ROOMS OVER UNHEATED AREAS, such as a garage or excavation, make the floors and walls cold, can make the room too cold to be used.

LARGE GLASS AREAS alter inside temperatu each time sun, wind or outside temperature chang Even true of double-paned windows.

SPREADOUT FLOOR PLAN. The effects of sun, shade and wind in different areas of the home can cause widely different heating or cooling requirements.

FINISHED BASEMENT. Because it is partially below ground level, the temperature needs in a basement are far different from the rest of the house.

SEPARATE LIVING AND SLEEPING AREAS requ different temperatures—warm and relaxing in the livi area—cool and comfortable for sleeping.

How you can prevent these eating or cooling problems in your new home

(or correct them in your existing home)

hat good is the world's most expensive home if it isn't com- table to live in?

One of the best investments you can make in your new home your present one is to take a little time and spend a little extra insuring your comfort—with adequate heating or cooling.

This means Zone Control—dividing your home into two or ore areas that you can keep at different temperatures to suit ur family's needs.

Zoning is simple! In a forced air system, for example, all you ed are a separate thermostat for each zone along with a mper and damper motor to control the air distribution. In hot ater systems, you need thermostats and zone valves to control t water flow. In some cases, two small furnaces or boilers are used. Installations are made quickly and easily.

How you can zone your home. The first step is to decide how you want to divide your home, by zones. Then call your heating or plumbing contractor. Be sure he understands you want to zone and where. He can design a system that will assure you the comfort you need and deserve.

In a new home, he'll lay out a piping or duct system for each zone. If he can do this at the planning stage, you can have Zone Control for very little extra cost. In your present home, it may be as simple as adding a thermostat with its associated controls.

For more information on Zone Control, write for free literature. And, now available to help you in your planning, an informative 48 page booklet "How to get the most out of your heating and cooling dollar"—50¢ postage paid. Write Honeywell, Dept. HG7-49, Minneapolis 8, Minnesota.

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

JULY, 1963 VOL. 124 NO. 1

LEONARD

On the cover: That a woman can please a man and at the same time please herself is beautifully demonstrated in the morning room of the Gardner Cowles' New York apartment in which Mrs. Cowles set out to pamper her husband in a way that every man approves of. Since the morning room is sometimes used for bridge playing, sometimes as an informal dining room where the Cowleses lunch with their young daughter, its arrangement is appropriately flexible. The card table is substantial, the armchairs that surround it comfortably cushioned, and the accompanying floor lamp, conveniently low. Built-in cabinets on each side of the fireplace hold art books and a group of papier-mâché figures the Cowleses collected in India. To make her husband comfortable while perusing his books, Mrs. Cowles chose a deep-cushioned armchair and a daybed (placed against the opposite wall). To please herself, she added touches of pure but unfussy prettiness: a profusion of blooming plants and, for curtains and upholstery, a summery linen print of lemons, strawberries and leaves. Interior designer: Edward Wormley. To see how Mrs. Cowles pleased her husband in the rest of their apartment, turn to page 70.

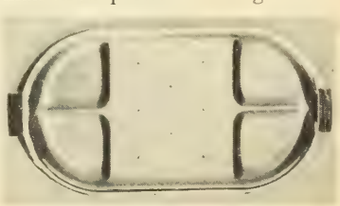
Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

Helpful hints on how a good wife can assure that her man will enjoy playing host in his own castle: When he's expected to carve a roast, be sure the carving knives are as sharp as scalpels, that he can see what he's carving, that he has plenty of elbow room and that he's not handicapped by a too-small platter. During the outdoor season, keep his barbecue equipment spotless, and stock plenty of charcoal always on hand, along with tinder or lighter to start it with. When he's bartender, keep a plentiful supply of ice at his elbow, plus soda, soft drinks, lemons, olives and the like, and—most important—a varied stock of liquor. (Nothing irritates a man more than to offer a guest something only to find that there isn't any on hand.) Also, the corkscrew must function and the ice crusher crush. Adequate, ample and available are the three A's I try to bear in mind when setting the scene of a party.

Don recently was host to a group of his fishing friends to celebrate—and share—his catch of a really mammoth salmon. Somehow, although he put up a great masculine front, the honor of cooking this fish fell to me. I took one look at it and went out to find something to cook it in. Luckily I was able to buy a fish poacher that measures 90 centimeters long (almost a yard). This tin-plated

Grandiose fish poacher



French vessel is especially designed for cooking a fish whole, so that it can be presented in all its glory, head to tail, with no truncations. I managed to fit the poacher onto my range by placing it catty-corner across the burners.

I poached the salmon in court bouillon, skinned it leaving the head and tail intact, and served it cold with cucumber sauce—a marvelous concoction of chopped cucumbers, whipped cream, a dash of vinegar mixed with chopped scallions and chives. To accompany the fish, I prepared steamed asparagus tips sautéed in butter with ground hazel nuts and spiked with lemon. Don asked for the chilled potatoes he's fond of, which are cold riced potatoes mixed with onion, parsley, mustard and a little mayonnaise and mounted in potato half-shells. Instead of biscuits I provided thin bread-and-butter sandwiches (half white, half pumpernickel) and caraway salt sticks.

The twenty-five fishermen guests ate heartily and toasted their modestly triumphant host with ice cold Danish beer.

Somehow the preponderance of magazine pictures of pretty guest rooms gives the impression that only women are ever guests. Actually, at our house we seem to have more male overnight guests than female, since so many of Don's professional and business friends stay with us when they're in town. So I keep the guest bath always stocked with large cakes of soap, big bath towels and shaving equipment. I also have equipped the guest room with a wooden valet to hang a suit on, and an ample desk and working lamp for the man guest who has to get in a few licks of paper work.

Sara Bennett and I were both flattered and surprised when our husbands' all-male golf club asked us to help them find party equipment for their newly organized dining quarters. They had already ordered china and silver, and the kitchen had been professionally designed and equipped. What the men wanted from us was more or less what might be called the finishing extras. What a glorious excuse it was for us to go on a buying spree. The prize of all our purchases was a marvelous carving platter of Chichester stainless steel with staghorn handles and measuring 33 by 17 inches, capacious enough to hold an impressive roast of beef, a suckling pig or king-sized turkey. It was made by Cardel, Ltd., a company that has been in business in England since the fifteenth century. But it wasn't the platter's lineage that impressed Sara and me so much as its proportions, its wieldiness and its simple good looks. The spikes are well placed to hold a roast firmly for easy carving, and the four wells are big enough for serving man-sized portions of vegetables.

King-sized carving platter

What's new, cools you, and doesn't look like an air conditioner?

Clue: it's in the window above . . . it's a bright new idea from Westinghouse. Now you don't have to spoil a pretty window with a piece of machinery. Your Westinghouse Dealer has the first "furniture-designed" line of air conditioners ever made.

If your room is Traditional, choose the cabinet above. If you go for Early American, Provincial or Contemporary, there's a fine, hand-crafted cabinet to match. Just take your pick.

Inside these handsome hardwood cabinets is the most efficient cooling instrument we've ever engineered. From 10 feet . . . 20 feet . . . even 30 feet away you can feel its cooling comfort. It gently spreads cooled, dried, filtered air to the farthest corner of the largest room. Yet this powerful instrument is as quiet as a purring kitten. A few feet away you can barely hear it.

Only your Westinghouse Dealer sells cooling power plus beauty. See the world's first "furniture-designed" air conditioners soon.

We never forget how much you rely on Westinghouse

AMERICAN HERITAGE

AMERICAN HERITAGE

Architect of the Supreme Court, Chief Justice John Marshall by Rembrandt Peale

End of another great train: Lucius Beebe lovingly describes the romantic Overland Limited, shown in her days of glory, double-heading through Colfax in the High Sierra.

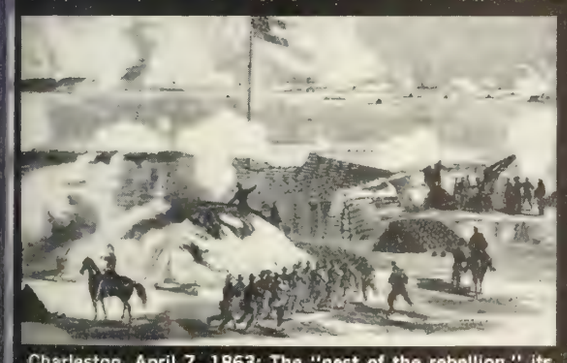
What lay beyond the looming Rockies? Before other pioneers, tough Jedediah Smith probed the deserts and mapped huge unknown areas.

John Paul Jones beats the British 1779: "What d-----d rascals ar them?" Jones bellowed above th battle as crewmen moved to strik his battered flag. "Shoot them!

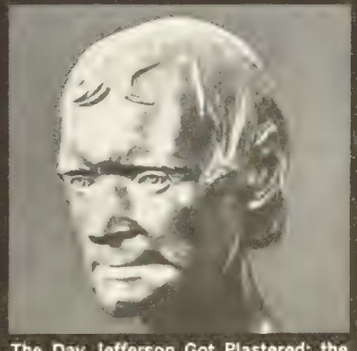
What does make

"The country of America. This is called a balloon." So the Japanese artist gravely described this century-old water color view. He was drawing for his own people, suddenly interested in the United States, which had just opened Japan to the world. His information was second-hand, but his America is no stranger than the Japan of our opera and musical comedy. The view is part of a sixteen-page color portfolio.

VOL. XIV ★ NO. 4



Armageddon revisited: Laurence Stallings, co-author of What Price Glory?, describes a battle in which he fought and was grievously wounded — bloody Belleau Wood. Here, for 19 days in June, 1918, U.S. troops took on the best Germany had to offer — and, at terrible cost, won.



An historic friendship breaks up: Through World War I, Col. Edward House was Woodrow Wilson's alter ego. Abruptly, something came between them. Just before he died, House confided who and what it was to Yale's ex-President Charles Seymour, who reveals the strange story for the first time here.

Americans different from other people?

Charleston, April 7, 1863: The "nest of the rebellion," its harbor sown with floating mines and ringed by bristling forts, prepares a warm welcome for Union Admiral Samuel F. DuPont and his fleet of nine "invincible" ironclad ships.

The Day Jefferson Got Plastered: the patriarch's life mask nearly became a death mask as the plaster hardened.

and in their shoes: Of resorts and those who went to em in the long ago, when the sports wore stiff collars nd dream girls five-piece bathing suits. Our foursome cutting up at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island. It as not as nobby as nearby Newport, but who cared?

Washington's summer of discontent — the controversial story of the Bonus March of 1932. At the depths of the depression, thousands of unemployed veterans descended on a nervous capital. When they refused to leave, the U.S. Army was called in to drive them out.

MOSTLY, say the experts, Americans are different because we're products of a radical experiment, and a most peculiar past. Ours is an amazing history, wherever you probe it — sometimes violent, sometimes funny, frequently inspiring. And we have our horrifying lapses.

We even look different. We come in all colors and assorted sizes. See, for example, the bantam John Paul Jones(at left, viewing a faint-hearted compatriot down the barrel of his pistol). See the lofty Thomas Jefferson (face mask below), a god-like hero who could still get tangled in some very human difficulties; a blundering sculptor almost smothered him in the hardening plaster of that mask.

How well do you know why Americans got this way? True, all of us take a quick horseback tour of our past in school days. Then on soft Memorial Day mornings and over the Fourth of July, we pay due honor to our American legacy.

But that's no way to relish our exciting history, or to profit from the perspective that the past always lends to the present. And ours is too good a story to restrict to the textbooks, or relegate to dry-as-dust writers.

An Innovation: Hard Covers, No Ads

AMERICAN HERITAGE is something utterly new, a magazine designed to put the American story into a form and idiom that fit our times: fast-paced, colorful, dramatic, authoritative. The writers, beginning with Senior Editor Bruce Catton, include the best historians of our day.

Add to that 100 or more authentic, from-the-period illustrations in every issue (a third in fine color); handsome typography on two quality papers; and no advertising pages at all. Put all this between beautiful hard covers, like a fine book, and issue six each year — one every other month. And that's AMERICAN HERITAGE — as different from other magazines as Americans are from other people.

Buy 3 — Get 6

Obviously, all this just doesn't turn up as a free sample; AMERICAN HERITAGE is $3.95 for a single copy, and well worth the tab. No, is it the kind of thing that's left on train seats. Over 96% of our 300,000-plus subscribers save every issue, because these magazines never go out of date. They soon form a handsome, growing history collection.

Here's the way our get-acquainted offer works: after your first issue arrives, pay $3.95; then, each month for the next two send an additional $3.95. These three payments cover the retail cost of three issues. After the first three issues, you'll get three more — but no more bills. You will own six issues for the price of three — i.e., for half what you'd pay if you bought all six singly.

We know AMERICAN HERITAGE is its own best salesman. May we show you? Mail the card inserted here at once, and you'll start with the latest issue, and the stories you see illustrated. If the card is gone, write to AMERICAN HERITAGE Subscription Office, 383 West Center Street, Marion, Ohio.

THE DIFFERENCE IN FLAVOR IS MYERS!

What's the best-known, best-liked rum cooler? Planters' Punch—traditionally made with Myers. To make: 1 tsp. sugar, juice ½ lemon, 2 oz. Myers Rum, dash Angostura, dash grenadine. Shake with ice, add soda to taste in tall glass. Magnificent—thanks to the flavor-magic of Myers!

THIS COLUMN IS DEVOTED TO QUESTIONS ABOUT OLD THINGS. NO ATTEMPT AT EVALUATING THE ANTIQUES WILL BE MADE. LETTERS WILL EITHER BE ANSWERED ON THIS PAGE OR BY MAIL, AND MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY A STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. ONLY ONE QUESTION TO EACH LETTER, PLEASE. MAIL ALL LETTERS TO HOUSE & GARDEN, 420 LEXINGTON AVENUE, NEW YORK 17, N. Y.

AMERICAN HOODED CRADLE

This cradle was purchased as an antique. I would like to know if you can tell me its approximate age and probable origin.

R. P.—Mamaroneck, N. Y.

It is an American hooded cradle and might date as early as 1760 or as late as 1820. If it is made of maple or some other soft wood, it was probably the work of a country cabinetmaker. It appears to be a New England piece.

IRON BOX STOVE

My wood-burning stove has the name Jefferson Furnace across the top. Where was Jefferson Furnace and how old is the stove? L. R., Jr.—Richwood, N. J.

Jefferson Furnace was an iron foundry specializing in stoves at Jefferson, N. J. Your stove is typical of those made between 1820 and 1835.

BONN PORCELAIN

I have five dessert dishes bearing this mark. Can you tell me their age and what the 1755 in the mark means?

H. E. W.—Millheim, Pa.

Your dishes were made at the porcelain factory of F. A. Mehlem, Bonn, Germany, after 1891. The date 1755 was the year porcelain was first made at Bonn.

FRENCH CANDELABRA

These heavy brass candelabra are marked Barbedienne, Paris, 1869. Is Barbedienne the name of the designer?

E. S.—Walla Walla, Wash.

Yes, Barbedienne was a well-known Parisian maker of fine brass ornaments about 1860–1890. His work won him various medals and the Legion of Honor.

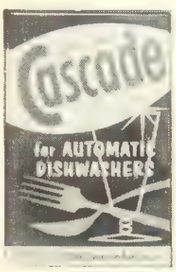
Dishwasher giving you spots? Look!



This amazing "sheeting action" shows how

Cascade eliminates drops that spot!

Nothing beats Cascade at getting dishes clean. Its remarkable "sheeting action" even eliminates the drops that cause ugly spots. Water ripples right off—thanks to Cascade's exclusive Chlorosheen formula. Dishes, glassware and silver come from your dishwasher as spotless and sparkling as possible.

Even water drops like these can cause spots

Cascade is rated safe for china patterns. The makers of Castleton, Flintridge, Franciscan, Lenox and Syracuse china—through the American Fine China Guild—have verified Cascade's unsurpassed safety to delicate patterns.

Every leading dishwasher maker recommends Cascade. So do women everywhere. They've made it America's favorite dishwasher detergent by far!

Give your dishwasher the best—Cascade—it's got "sheeting action"

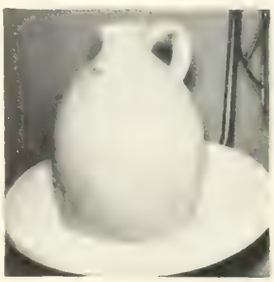
TALL POST BED

Could you tell me when and by whom this mahogany bed was made? I recently bought it at an antique shop.
R. W. P.—Mt. Vernon, Ill.

Your bed is late American Empire or very early Victorian. It was probably made to order by an excellent cabinetmaker. Tall post beds of this type were commonly used in southern plantation mansions about 1835–1850.

NODDING FIGURINES

These nodding head figurines are English. Can you trace their origin more specifically? B. C. L.—Woodbury, N. J.

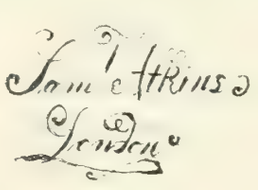


They were made by some Staffordshire pottery between 1830 and 1850. Being unmarked, they cannot be traced further.

CHINESE CABINET

We would appreciate any information about this hand-carved teakwood chest which we purchased two years ago.
E. J. S.—Old Tappan, N. Y.

This is a Chinese side-wall cabinet made by a native craftsman probably in a seaport city during the second half of the nineteenth century. Such cabinets were used to display jade, ivory, lacquered objects.



WHISKEY JUG

What sort of jug is this? It is marked "From Park & Tilford, Grocers, 921-923 Boadway, N. Y." L. P.—Baldwin, N. Y.

It is a stoneware whiskey jug dating between 1865 and 1890 when Park & Tilford was the quality grocery of New York City.

ENGLISH BRACKET CLOCK

Enclosed with the snapshot of my English bracket clock is a freehand facsimile of the name engraved on the face and on the back plate of the works. Can you date this clock? J. D. R.—Alexandria, Va.

Samuel Atkins (1697–1768) was an eminent London watch and clockmaker. He worked at his trade about 1733–1765. His bracket clocks, such as this one, are well known to collectors.

Going places, finding things in

Switzerland

BY DOONE BEAL

EDITOR'S NOTE: Doone Beal, a lively and indefatigable traveler, reports frequently on the international scene for House & Garden. She has a special interest in national dishes which she samples on her sojourns and adapts back home in London.

Switzerland, to most of us, stands for splendid Alpine isolation and somewhat sanatory cleanliness; for canned foods, chocolates, soup mixes, cheese, watches and cameras; for quality of finish rather than dash of design. Among the more sophisticated, the country is also known for winter sports and for its tax-evasion potential. It has become a convention for both the well-traveled and those who have never crossed an ocean to call Switzerland "dull," and certainly the three K's—kinder, küche and kirche (children, kitchen and church)—predominate in this land which elevates the domestic arts into status symbols of their own.

The very neutrality of Switzerland's background, however, has germinated and housed, over the past century and a half, a diverse and colorful collection of people. Although Lenin left it in a sealed train, without comment, Zurich was, to James Joyce, second only to Dublin as a city of intellectual stimulus. He lived there in the late Nineteen Thirties, at the same time as Einstein, Jung and Stravinsky. Paul Klee, one of whose early exhibitions was refused by the local council, nevertheless dwelt happily enough just outside Locarno. Dickens reveled in Lausanne, and Madame de Staël summered with her personal entourage at Rolle. Wagner divided his time between Lucerne and a private island on Lake Zurich. Byron complained poetically in a villa on the shores of Lake Geneva (it now belongs to a Swiss plastics millionaire). Stendhal and Flaubert both traveled the country widely, but the latter echoed the thoughts of many when he said of the Alpine landscape: "I would give all the glaciers for the Vatican museum . . . the Alps are too big to be any use to us."

Certainly the beauty of the Swiss landscape, like a wood full of bluebells in the spring, is so spectacular as to seem at times almost banal. The view from the mountain slope, accompanied by the clanging of bells borne by innocent, fudge-colored cows, is pure sensation, even further enhanced by the light and height, the smell of the air. It can be enjoyed to the point of ecstasy but never reproduced, for its elements derive from too many different senses.

One of the chief charms of Switzerland for the time-bedeviled vacationer is its cozy compactness. In two or three weeks, without haste, you can cover the French, German and Italian regions, each with its distinctive architecture and ambiance, and sample at leisure the cities, the mountain resorts and the lakeside towns with their varied delights. (If you make part of the tour by train, cut your luggage to a minimum and forward the bulk to your next destination. Porters are scarce—and extremely independent.)

Start with Geneva

A perfect place to start is cosmopolitan Geneva, a city built on water rather in the manner of Stockholm, with a sheer, eupeptic sense of well-being. Debouching from the lake on which the city lies like a sickle moon, the Rhône flows through Geneva in a moving staircase of water, pouring swiftly and inexorably over the weirs. The buildings that line the waterfronts are visions of nineteenth-century propriety and solidarity, but a few paces up the steep cobbled streets on the south bank will take you into the old city, where the print and antique shops smack of Left-bank Paris. The Place du Bourg, with its delightful flower-decked fountain, is the landmark of this vieille ville. The streets house expensive antique shops, browse-worthy junk shops, one or two galleries that show contemporary painting and delightful restaurants.

The famous fondues

Haunts of the young and chic are the Orangerie, the Chandelier and the Café des Armures. The oldest and most traditional is the Café du Palais de Justice, an erstwhile bistro that was the hangout of inter-war politicians. It is here, too, that you will get the best fondue. The advantages of fondue for informal entertaining need hardly be stressed. What is better than a bowl of creamy, kirsch-scented cheese kept warm over a slow spirit stove for guests to dip into with pieces of crusty bread? If you should want to serve it at home, there is an imported package Swiss-made fondue that can hardly be improved upon. Serve it with liberal quantities of dry white wine—in Switzerland, always the wine of the Valais, Fendant.

Another type of Swiss fondue is the meat variety, fondue Bourguignonne. This consists of small cubes of raw steak speared on long forks and cooked in a pan full of hot oil. The flavor is in the accompanying dips: horseradish sauce, or chopped onions lightly bound with olive oil; mayonnaise laced with chopped pimientos and a drop of chili sauce; and at least two kinds of mustard, one sharp and one sweet. You can buy special long ebony-handled fondue forks at any hardware store or gift shop in Switzerland and, if weight is no problem, you might buy a cheese fondue set complete with six small plates and a heatproof porcelain cooking dish.

Some of the best Swiss-international food, biased toward the French, you will find in Geneva's great hotel restaurants: the Bergues, the Richemond and the Beau-Rivage—also at the Auberge à la Mère Royaume, a rustic looking restaurant of great repute.

Geneva is encircled on three sides by French territory. Driving around the northern, Swiss shore of the lake, you encounter first Lausanne of the finishing schools, then Montreux, a sort of Monte Carlo of hotels and casino, which was built for and enjoyed by the generations between 1870 and 1914. One notable restaurant between the two cities is that of the Hotel du Monde at Grandvaux, high up on the corniche road. I noted there the addition of a touch of curry powder to the salad dressing, also a particularly good dessert: peeled sliced oranges and finely shredded orange peel, soaked in syrup with a dash of absinthe, and piled on billows of rich whipped cream.

How unbelievably different is this corner of French Switzerland from the simple gemütlichkeit of the German-speaking villages and towns to the northeast, such as Murten in the three-lake region west of Berne. The main highway enters and leaves Murten through thirteenth-century gates, and the houses and shops are secreted in wooden, vaulted arcades. Once a part of the Kingdom of Savoy (whose Dukes built its castle), this is an officially "protected" town of great charm and several of its old inns bear their original coats of arms.

The capital of German Switzerland, and the commercial and banking center of the whole country, is Zurich. Among the city's excellent hotels is a rather special one, the Eden au Lac, which is small (the proprietor has resisted all blandishments to expand) and furnished entirely with antiques. Its restaurant, the Perl du Lac, claims to have been the first ever to serve hot hors d'oeuvres, and these alone—pâtés en croute, feuilleté of lobster and sweet-

A picture book country where three cultures—French, German and Italian—flavor the food and influence the architecture

Cosmopolitan Geneva, a city built on water, is noted for high-rising fountains. Also to enjoy here: some of the best eating in Switzerland.

breads among them—are worth the visit. Another famous Zurich restaurant not to be missed, and a good place to sample some of the Swiss specialties, is the Kronenhalle where paintings by Miró, Chagall and Picasso hang, unexpectedly, on the staid, dark-paneled walls. For an appetizer, try bündnerfleisch, air-dried beef from the canton of Grisons (it is called viande de Grisons in the French-speaking region). The flavor is reminiscent of prosciutto, but the paper-thin slices of meat are completely without fat and delicious with a glass of Swiss beer or wine. You'll also find on the menu berner platte, the Swiss version of choucroute garnie, rösti, the ubiquitous fried potato dish, and cicorino, a locally grown red chicory which makes a superb salad.

The Bahnhofstrasse is the Fifth Avenue of Zurich and you can shop as well there as anywhere in the country. Prices are not low, but the quality is unimpeachable. If you do not want to take a special trip to the lace-making towns of Appenzell and St. Gallen, you can find samples of the work, plus lovely hand-embroidered lawn pillow slips and table sets, in any of Zurich's main stores. Grieder and Co. is one of the more de luxe department stores; Jelmoli is less expensive. The official Swiss handcrafts store on the Bahnhofstrasse has an excellent selection, and the winding streets of the old part of Zurich are jammed with antique shops where you can pick up good buys in copper, brass, porcelain and wood. Ski and après-ski clothes are superb in Zurich, but don't expect any bargains—you are paying for quality.

Lake Lucerne

To the south of Zurich, but still on the north side of the Alps, is Lucerne, one of Switzerland's most rewarding lakes. It is wildly romantic looking, although all too often its vistas melt into mountain mists. The old walled city of Lucerne, once a vassal city of the House of Hapsburg, is full of fifteenth- and sixteenth-century houses, and its two pretty old wooden bridges, both roofed, are still in daily use. It is much more a resort city than a commercial one and is full of souvenir shops whose contents for the most part are worth only passing scrutiny. But (Continued on page 115)

Get to the roots of your lawn problem with a Moss Waterrator!

- Insures proper irrigation
- Loosens hard ground
- Frees rootbound plants
- Eliminates flooding

Here's a new garden tool that will give you greener lawns and healthier plants and flowers! Just attach your garden hose to the Waterrator and push it into the ground. Water pressure does all the work, and in minutes, thirsty roots are properly watered. The Waterrator helps eliminate 'fairy rings' and other lawn problems, and it saves water besides! Get yours at your local hardware store or garden shop, or order direct with the coupon below. This summer, let a Waterrator do the work and enjoy the finest lawn and garden you've ever known! List price, $4.95.

Sound effect

Electric megaphone sends the master's voice a good 2000 feet. What a blessing in the country to alert children and guests for dinner! To call just press trigger switch, they'll come arunning. Used first by the Navy, it operates on flash batteries. Portable. $13.99 ppd. K. D. McLean, HG7, Box 991 Grand Central Sta., New York.

Sling's the thing

And these Italian sandals make it a pleasure to wear them. Imported by Shoecraft where you'll find sizes 8 through 12, these smart shoes come in bone or espresso brown leather. And how they flatter a sun-bronze foot! With 1¾" stacked heel. $8.55 ppd. Send shoe size and write for catalogue. Shoecraft, HG7, 603 5th Ave., New York 17.

Ah for an oval!

A fine buy and a decorative one, this oval bench with turned maple legs. Pretty cover is hand-hooked cotton in a light floral pattern. It caters to weary feet, small backsides at story time. And it's a sensible size—27" by 18" by 13" high. $13.95 plus 60c handling charge. Order from Downs & Co., HG7, Evanston, Ill.

How do you glue?

The easiest, most efficient method is with a syringe. No messy mixing of epoxy adhesive. Just use these two hypodermics for clean, quick, permanent repairs. Lightning fast epoxy bonds anything to anything in one minute. Squeeze it out and mend china, glass, wood. Set of two loaded with glue, $1 ppd. Greenland, HG7, Miami 47, Fla.

Hot and handy

Here is the case of the pot calling the kettle obsolete! A pretty pot, fluted, white and electric, heats water to boiling in no time. Perfect for summer morning coffee; grand for heating soups. Porcelain finished earthenware, holds 4 cups, it goes with any china pattern. $2.95, 45c post. Artisan, HG7, 2100 N. Haskell, Dallas 4, Tex.

CLEARS AN AREA OF 3 ACRES OF ALL FLYING INSECTS, INCLUDING HOUSE FLIES AND MOSQUITOES

New JET CONTROL BLACK LIGHT INSECT TRAP

Usually $34.95 Now only $19.95 plus $2.00 pp & hd.

- Powerful 1/20 H.P. EMERSON motor clears 3-acre radius
- SYLVANIA 10" 22-Watt BLACK LIGHT is irresistible to moths, all flies, gnats, mosquitoes and other flying pests.
- All-weather unit offers full 360 degree range.
- Operates electrically for pennies per mo.
- No Chemicals. • No work.
- No spraying or dangerous odor.
- Perfect for motels • shopping centers • restaurants • drive-ins
- dairy barns • service stations, as well as home use.

The all new Jet Control BLACK LIGHT Insect Trap is the most powerful of its kind on the market today. Actually clears a 3 acre area of all harmful insects. Sylvania 10" 22 Watt Black Light draws from grass, gardens, foliage and shrubbery killing adult insect before eggs are laid (at the height of its mating season). Its Emerson 1/20 H.P. motor is 10 times as powerful as competitive models. (Most others have 1/200 H.P. Motors) and its Jet Control principle actually pulls the insects into the bag with such force (Creating a wind Tunnel With Over 1175 Cubic Ft. of Air per minute suction) that even powerful house flies and mosquitos are powerless against it. Ruggedly constructed of Corrosion Free baked enamel metal to insure years of trouble free operation. Shipped complete with 8 Ft. of weatherproof outdoor cord, hanging bracket and reusable mesh bag. 13" Hi x 12" diam. Wt. 16 lbs. Completely UL approved, reg. $34.95. Now only, $19.95 plus $2.00 PP & HD.

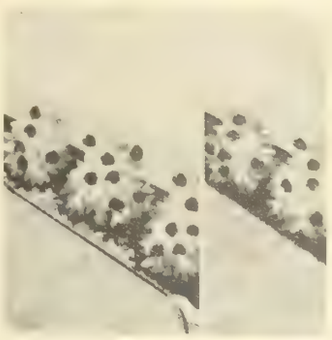
Winslow Homer prints

Translucent water tones of blue with a dramatic use of spindrift white—the familiar colors of Winslow Homer. Shown is "Nassau." "Fishing Boats, Key West," "Shore and Surf, Nassau," and "Sloop, Bermuda." 9½″ by 13½″, 4, $2.95 pd. Catalogue, 25c. Preston Marine Prints, HG7, 103 Main St., Greenport, N. Y.

Added sparkle

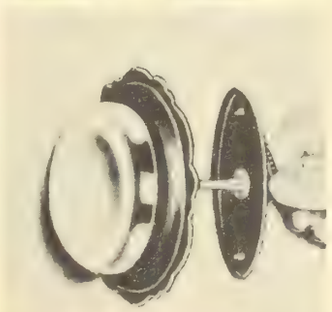


Easy to install, this shimmering chandelier has three tiers of imported hand-cut and hand-polished prisms. Screws into overhead socket like a light bulb, eliminating installation. Adds formality and elegance to any room. 8″ diameter by 10½″ high. $25 exp. coll. Paulen Crystal, HG7, 36 White St., New York, N. Y.

Rest your weary head

For the co-pilot on a long driving tour, for the drive-in movie goer, this foam rubber cushion designed to fit any car. Covered with charcoal, black, red, white or blue corduroy, it has adjustable brackets. It fits onto your lounging chair, too. Wonderful for invalids. $7.40, ppd. Car Head-Res Co., HG7, 6220 W. Roosevelt, Oak Park, Ill.

Get the edge!



And do it chemically with water-soluble plastic "twine." Your lawn has a neat edge without tedious trimming. Sprinkling melts edging material, dispenses the chemical. Use it along sidewalk, driveway. Won't harm adjoining flowers or grass. Enough to edge 75 ft. $1.49 ppd. Walter Drake, HG25, Drake Bldg., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Still slipping?

If eyeglasses have a tendency to slide down the nose, foam cushions will correct the problem. Inconspicuous, the tiny pads are made of flesh-color foam plastic backed with adhesive, never ride or shift when attached to glass frames. $1 ppd. for 6 pair. Columbia Co., HG7, 404 Security Bldg., 234 E. Colorado Blvd., Pasadena, Calif.

Ring in the old

Turn the key on this old-fashioned doorbell, and turn on a memory. Here is a nostalgic doorbell that installs with the drilling of a small hole. This Blind "Mona Lisa" Needs Your Help

Her faint smile . . . her patience . . . her quiet tears . . . tell you this young "Mona Lisa" from India is more than a painting. She is flesh and bones—alive—and totally blind.

Vinodamma was still a baby when her mother died. Then when she was five, she became sick — and the illness left her in darkness.

Now five years have passed. Still, she has an inner glow—a warmth — that "sees" life without the help of eyes. But in Southern India a blind girl doesn't have much of a future. Except maybe begging on a street corner, or worse . . .

Vinodamma's one hope: attend the school for the blind in Bangalore, learn braille, and develop skills to bring light into her mind. But she needs a friend to make this possible.

You can "adopt" Vinodamma, or another youngster just as desperate. You will receive the child's picture, personal history, the experience of exchanging letters and Chrismas cards.

$10 a month may not be much to you—to Vinodamma it is enough to make a down payment on a future.

And she is only one of thousands waiting for sponsors. Choose any of the 55 countries listed. Share your happiness with a child of tragedy.

Pick it up. Turn it over. Run the blade into its slot.

You've never seen a cutting board like this. Jens Quistgaard built it out of end-grain blocks. The way you build a butcher block. And where it's different, he designed it different. For a reason.

Take the size. Too small for cleaving beef. But just right to slice a lime or lemon on. And the top's concave, so it won't spill the juices. Take the wood. It's Siamese teak. The stuff, not of butcher blocks, but sailing ships. (Jens chose it because it stands up so well to water.)

Then how is this board like a butcher block? Pick up the knife and start to cut. Decisively. Forget your inhibitions. You won't dull the knife or gouge the wood. You're cutting as your butcher cuts. Into end-grain. Not across the fibers. As to the knife itself: the blade's the same tough Finnish stainless steel that prows the Finnish ice-breaker fleet. (The Finns would be ice-bound ten months of the year without it.) And there are two more intelligent bits. A nylon bushing—inside the scabbard slot—to keep the knife blade snug, and safe, and sharp. And the thoughtful price—just $7.95 for board and knife together.

DANSK DESIGNS

There was more in Antony's past than Cleopatra. There was, for instance, his characterization of Brutus at the conclusion of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar": "His life was gentle, and the elements /So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up/ And say to all the world, 'This was a man'"

Estimates of Brutus vary. But we like what Antony said about him, if only because we have a sneaking idea that some such exclamatory—but gentle—mixture of elements is what every man thinks he is made of.

Certainly a man is a complex organism, and learning how to please him is a complex proposition. We would not presume to stand on guesses. We have gone to the highest authorities we know—i.e., men. To some 200 good friends of H&G we put twenty questions (more or less), and reading their answers we discovered a creature that is as frightened as a lemur one moment, as belligerent as the bulls of Bashan the next.

The composite male of H&G's advisory panel is a serious and sensitive family man. He prizes the good opinion of his children and his community in that order (we didn't ask about his wife). He feels that his house is the equal of any on the block and that its interior arrangements are definitely superior. But he wishes his landscape were better.

He keeps the family accounts, cooks a lot (mostly outdoors), dislikes and avoids grocery shopping. He does most of the family fix-it chores (who else?) and packs his own suitcase three to one. Believe it or not, if he had the money, he would rather buy new carpeting than make any other one purchase for his home (well, you see, he hates noise). But if he could add a single room to his house, it would be a den or study—and you know whose. He gives another (or bigger and better) bathroom almost the same priority.

In general our man does not crave housework in order to fulfill himself (although three men empty garbage regularly). But when we asked him what he would especially like to see invented, he immediately went into orbit, blue-printing gadgets that ranged from an electronic device for editing incoming noise to an automatic bedmaker. Among his labor-savers, however, were several that have been around for a while (an ice cube maker; an automatic window closer for cold mornings; a timer to turn off television after going to bed), which led us to suspect he is either a shy shopper or a laggardly inventor.

Apart from the well-being, contentment and security of his wife and children, there are a great many other things our composite adviser would like to have, all of which H&G made due note of. We combed the country for existing models (some men have fast-working godmothers) and have compiled them to spell out H & G's considered answer to the issue:

HOW TO PLEASE A MAN

See the next 56 pages

"If you could add one thing to your home, what would it be?" In answer to that, many of our masculine consultants stipulated a new room—a very special room like one of these

SEVEN ROOMS MEN HAVE ASKED FOR

When you go around asking questions, you are bound to get some surprises—sometimes because so many people agree, sometimes because they differ. We were mildly surprised, for instance, by the near unanimity with which our experts equated the blessings of home with an open fire, a good book and QUIET. That more than half of them wished their houses contained more space was not wholly unexpected, space being at the premium it is today. But our surprise mounted steadily as man after man expressed a wistful though wholly reasonable longing for the same utopia—a room of his own.

Not all of them wanted the same kind of room. For some it was a study (or "library" or "den" or "home office")—"a den of my own," said one, "where I can work or relax in relative solitude." For almost as many others it was a new bathroom—a big one equipped with all the engineering the rest of the family presumably lacked interest in. (These two groups should both be well pleased with the room on the opposite page in which a study and a bathroom are actually combined.) Many of our men mentioned an interest in keeping fit, to which end they would like to have a home gym, either a full-scale workout room or a corner just big enough for an exercise machine. But home, after all and above all, is for relaxing (the fire, the book), and to more men than we would have guessed, this means stretching out as horizontally as possible and listening to music. For more active relaxing they would like a room just for games. And the 50 per cent of our panel who assured us they were do-it-yourselfers asked for some spot where they could set up a jeweler's anvil or a power saw with the calm knowledge that no little fingers would thereby be threatened with severance.

These rooms would not necessarily be reserved for the exclusive use of the master, for our paterfamilias is not a selfish man. His room-of-his-own would be shared, often or occasionally, but, according to an unwritten understanding, by invitation only.

1 A three-way room with a view

Anyone might be forgiven for not immediately spotting this as the big luxurious bathroom so many men wish they could have to themselves. Formerly a bedroom in Mr. Irving Feintech's house in Beverly Hills, Calif., the space was redesigned to encompass not only a bath but a neatly integrated home office and dressing room. The L-shaped arrangement of desk and bookcase that combines elbowroom and arm's-reach storage with a view of a walled garden should make any man happy to be working at home. But the other side of the bookcase is a chest of many drawers, and facing it against the wall is a long counter containing more drawers and a lavatory illuminated by recessed pull-out fluorescents that are concealed between shaves by long narrow doors. This side of the room is the dressing area, a sizable runway with a vast closet at one end and the bathroom proper at the other. The latter consists of a toilet compartment screened by sliding doors of teak (like the rest of the paneling) and a stall shower which you can see through the window in front of the desk. Floored with mosaic tile and walled partly with mosaic, partly with glass, partly with quartz masonry, the shower is capped with glass like a hothouse, has a clear view overhead of green foliage and blue sky. Associate architects: Harold W. Levitt, Ernest W. LeDuc, William H. Farwell. For other bath-dressing rooms guaranteed to please a man, see pages 62-67.

2 A working home gym

As more and more men discover there's no place like home for trimming the waistline and keeping the heart up to snuff, the facilities for a good daily workout are beginning to seem as desirable as a good desk or a good bed. And this view is very apt to be shared by the whole family—as Dr. Arch Scurlock's four children share his enthusiasm for the gym-annex to their house in Arlington, Va. Located in a newly built structure quite separate from the main house, the gym measures 24 by 16 feet, is two stories high. Dr. Scurlock, a former all-round college athlete, knew exactly what he wanted in the way of equipment: a vaulting horse, parallel bars, a chinning bar, rings and a trampoline (stored, folded, in a cupboard). The flooring is oak. Winter heat is supplied by the same hot-water system that warms the year-round swimming pool just outside door. Architect: Caspar Neer.

3 A bedroom planned for him

In many households, the term master bedroom is a complete misnomer (what master ordered up all those frothy canopies, those heart-shaped pillows?). But his bedroom might well be the room a man would like to call his own, as indeed it is in the Morris Mortons' house in Beverly Hills, Calif. Designed by Mrs. Morton (professionally, Helen W. Franklin), the room is her husband's bailiwick, and his alone—the place where he can watch anything he likes on TV, spread out his papers on the desk, loll himself into nirvana or ride a wild pace on his two-wheeled horse. Having thus entranced her husband, Mrs. Morton then designed for her hours of solitude a pretty bower of her own.

4 A place to stretch out and listen to music

To come home, trigger the record player, lie down and listen—that appears to be a man's favorite form of unwinding the knots of tension, judging from the frequency with which our advisers mentioned it. Since architect Bancel La Farge and his wife share the same view in this matter, their living room includes both a stretch-out sofa and a daybed. Flanked by a fireplace and bookshelves is their music center—four large compartments with flush doors of walnut and walnut grilles above and below. The door to the record-player and record-storage section drops down to form a counter. A TV set is in the section above, but its door opens on vertical hinges and folds back flat against the section to the right of it. Behind the lower grille are the stereo speakers; behind the upper grille, the air-conditioning system. Music center designed by Henry Robert Kann. On pages 86-91, music systems prized by two other men.

5 A personal ivory tower

By whatever name they called it, a room that would combine "relative solitude" with deep upholstered comfort, good lights for reading and plenty of room for books topped our list of masculine wants. Mr. William Mazer's library offers all these plus a bonus—music and facilities for entertaining. One section of the counter at the left of the game table is topped with travertine to serve as a bar. In one side of the cabinet below are bar supplies; in the other, tuner, record player and record storage. Speakers are housed in the cabinet adjoining. Although the materials used in this room are luxurious—teak and Siamese silk—the accessories are limited to lamps and ashtrays of he-man proportions and works of art which include the painting by Miró between the windows and a scattering of pre-Columbian sculpture. Designer: Edward Wormley.

6 A he-man's game room

The game might be anything from poker to Ping Pong, but the room, in our advisers' concordance, should be designed to fit the game—not vice versa. Since motion picture executive Max Youngstein's game is billiards, he made room for it in his rambling old-fashioned house in Larchmont, N. Y., by remodeling a sunporch. The fieldstone masonry that was originally part of the house exterior offered a suitably rugged starting point. To this was added paneling of pecky cypress and a covering for the upper walls of the same green felt that was used to resurface the Edwardian billiard table. A cork floor supplies ease underfoot, and an acoustical ceiling disciplines sound. From their swiveling high chairs, gamesters get a good view of the table, and if they feel like looking through a magazine, some are hanging in proper men's-club manner over a brass rod on the wall. Designer: David Barrett.

7 The compleat home workshop

Not every man who calls himself a do-it-yourselfer has skills worthy of the scope of Dr. James A. Vance's workshop in his house in Beverly Hills, Calif. But any man would envy its order, roominess, light and cheerful garden view. A goldsmith, a painter and a woodcarver who carves all his own frames, Dr. Vance has at his disposal a punch drill (left of counter), a buffer (at end of counter) and a standing power tool for woodworking (opposite counter) as well as a metal lathe in another corner of the room for turning and working gold. Simple wood frames with clasps for hand tools not only provide organized see-at-a-glance storage, they also compose the tools into remarkably effective decoration for the walls. This artisan's utopia was formerly a bedroom. Architect, John Woolf; interior designer, Harold W. Grieve.

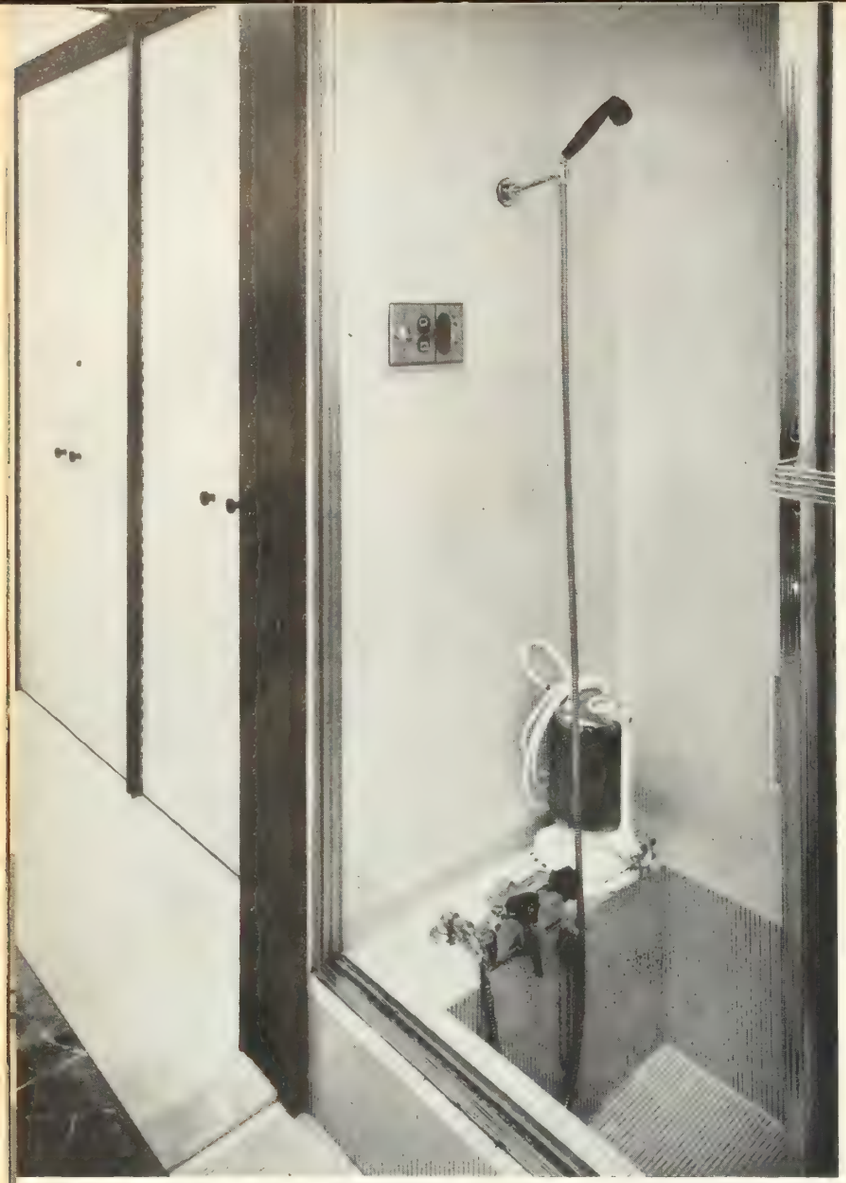
Fully engineered BATHROOMS

Well-planned WARDROBES

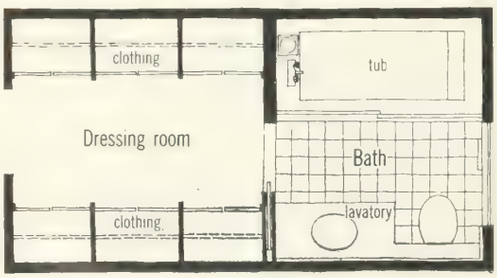
"A bath in the old Roman tradition" was the way one man capsuled every man's idea of supreme luxury: a bathroom tailored to his personal specifications. On the door of this particular room-of-his-own, he need never knock before entering. Here he would have plenty of space to bathe, shave, do exercises without bruising his elbows. He might even seek the restorative effects of such devices as a steam bath, a whirlpool, or a Finnish sauna. When he emerges, he would like to be able to lay his hands immediately on exactly the shirt, the tie, the suit, the shoes he is in the mood at the moment to wear. That, he knows, would call for the materialization of another dream—a wardrobe where he could see everything at a glance and nothing would be wrinkled by crowding. Starting here: a series of bathrooms and dressing rooms in which some men enjoy the luxury all men crave.

MAX ECKERT



A steam bath for deep relaxation

In one corner of a large bathroom, a glass-front compartment measuring 9 by 6 feet houses a steam bath as satisfying as any its owner—Mr. Harry Silbert of Beverly Hills, Calif.—might find in a well-equipped club. Along back of compartment are mosaic-tiled ledges deep enough to recline on. White cabinet at left houses steam mechanism consisting of an open-top tank filled with rocks and below that a heating unit. Above cabinet is an overhead shower that sprays water on the heated rocks to produce temperature-controlled steam. At right of benches is a shower for cooling off and a hose for rinsing out compartment. Woven plaid curtain draws across bath when not in use. Associate architects: Harold W. Levitt, Ernest W. LeDuc, William H. Farwell.



Two closets that take care of everything

Along one wall of Mr. John Hertz Jr.'s room-sized dressing room in Miami Beach, Fla., is a pair of double-door closets that keep in order practically all of his day-to-day wardrobe. The first has just enough hanging space for his most frequently worn suits plus shelves for shoes, shirts, sweaters, a small radio. Special racks on the door hold ties the way Mr. Hertz likes to store them—folded flat. The second closet contains a hanging rod for slacks, another above it for jackets and a shelf for hatboxes. In both closets, lights mounted on the undersides of the top shelves illuminate clothes below. Closet doors are pecky cypress; their scepter-like handles are brass elephant goads from India. Designer: Haygood Lasseter. For Mr. Hertz's sauna-bathroom, see page 65.

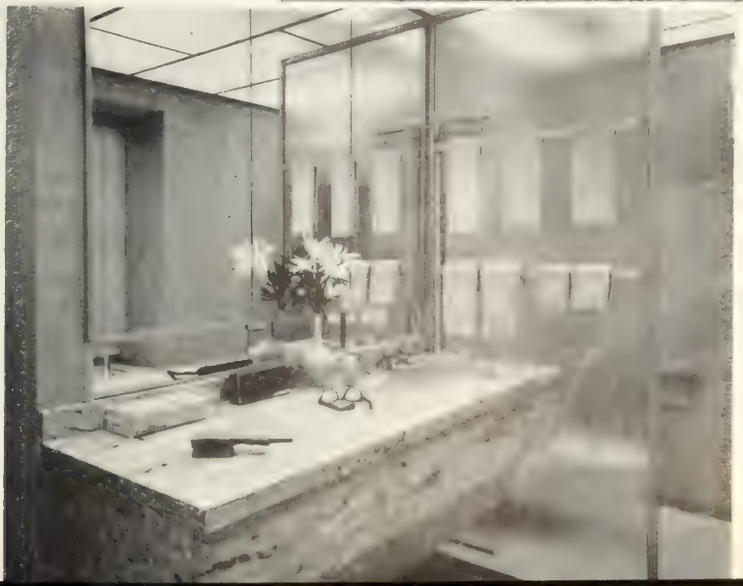
A whirlpool and steam bath in one tub

Even in a small bathroom, space can be found for the refreshing devices men are so fond of. Mr. Leopold Godowsky's bathroom in his house in Westport, Conn., is no larger than the conventional minimum (5½ by 7½ feet), yet it is packed with an astonishing variety of bathing and grooming comforts. The bath compartment designed to his specifications is lined, tub and all, with black-and-white striped tile and can be closed by sliding glass doors. Hidden within the walls is a steam-bath mechanism, the controls for which are mounted on the wall under the shower. On the tub ledge is a circulator that transforms an ordinary bath into a salubrious whirlpool. And the shower head, a Swiss device, is attached to a flexible hose so that it can be lifted off its wall mounting and used as a hand spray. In addition, the bathroom boasts a number of smaller luxuries: a clock mounted high on the mirrored panel next to the window, below left, where it can be seen (through the open door opposite) from the dressing room; a lighted shaving mirror placed in front of the opaque glass window to provide perfect shaving visibility day or night; a whole wall of mirror-door cabinets behind the lavatory counter and toilet. The bathroom is augmented by a large, closet-lined dressing room, and a luminous ceiling canopies both rooms. Designer: William Snaith. Architect: F. E. Dushin. For Mr. Godowsky's music system, turn to pages 86-89.

A sauna within a four-part bathroom →

More than one of our advisers expressed a hankering for a sauna—the Finnish hot air bath that invigorates the body with dry, penetrating heat. A 7½-by-4½-foot sauna compartment with a sliding glass wall forms one section of Mr. John Hertz Jr.'s 9-by-20-foot bathroom. The bathtub is in a compartment opposite the sauna (see sketch, opposite page). The lavatory and shaving area occupy the center of the room, and the toilet is in a compartment behind sliding glass doors at the far end. The door between the sauna and tub leads to Mr. Hertz's dressing room (see page 63), the other door to his bedroom.



In the sauna, walls of rough marble strips and a bench of teak take the place of the traditional redwood, and modern technology has replaced the traditional Finnish method of heating and drying the air. Over the bench is a control panel with a battery of gauges for temperature and humidity control, switches for fans and a clock for timing the sessions. This sauna also boasts one of the customary Finnish flourishes: rocks to release hot invisible moisture when water is ladled over them. Here the rocks are on a ledge facing the bench and at the press of a pedal, water is sprayed on them automatically from pierced tubes built into the wall. In the rest of the marble-floored room, walls are covered in gray linen-like vinyl; luminous ceiling with egg-crate diffusers gives a soft, clear light.

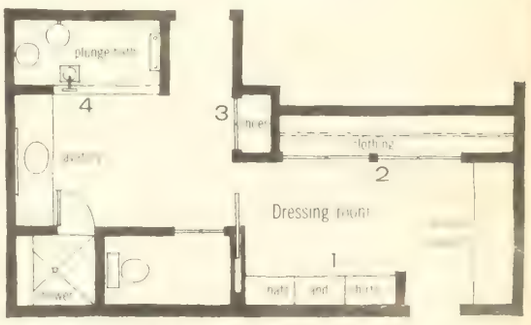
The big luxurious bathroom that so many of our consultants asked for is epitomized in Mr. Doyle Cotton's bath-dressing suite in his house in Tulsa, Okla. Together the 10½-by-14½-foot bathroom and the 10-by-13½-foot dressing room consume almost as much space as a moderate-sized living room, and their materials are of living room elegance—teak for the cabinetry, gold-flecked cork for the walls, beige travertine for the shower and bath compartments and dressing and lavatory counters, off-white carpeting leopard-spotted in russet and green.

In this precisely divided bathroom (see plan, below right) toilet and shower compartments are along one wall and lavatory counter lines another. Against third wall is the 4-by-6½-foot plunge bath sunk 5 feet below floor level like the chin-to-toe immersion baths travelers look forward to in Japanese inns. A chrome ladder descends into the green mosaic-tiled depths where there are wooden seats. And a powerful circulator attached to one side turns the bath into a whirlpool.



In the dressing room, hanging space with rods at different heights runs the length of one long wall. Instead of closet doors, an automatic curtain glides open at the touch of an electric switch. Along the opposite wall are twenty-four shallow drawers for shirts and sweaters topped by roomy cupboards for hats. All drawers and doors open on touch latches. Architects: O'Neil Ford & Associates.

Symbol of every man's dilemma:

THE COAT HANGER

A quarter of a century ago I decided that I would be an author. When I took that step, I knew quite well that when I reached fifty, I would be vain, conceited and greedy for money. That would be my character: I had made the acquaintance of several authors in their fifties and that was their character, so there was little chance that I would escape. It was a professional risk. The faces of actors at thirty or so begin to grow weather-beaten with public exposure; the character of an author is eroded, but more slowly, from the same cause: his personality is always on show.

Well, I am fifty. I have taken stock. It is all much as I expected. I am vain. I talk incessantly about myself (I am doing so now). I am never satisfied with the praise that comes my way, and I never feel I have enough money. All this is right and proper for a writer of my age. I do not hold it against myself. What is quite wrong—what is shaming—is that I have too many clothes. I counted my coat hangers on my fiftieth birthday. What with suits, jackets and other items, there are sixteen of them. They are a monument to my moral cowardice. I would hide the story of why this is so except that at fifty one thinks continually upon the young: the description of my backsliding may serve as a warning.

The first thing a young writer must do is to make up his mind why he wants to write. Most young men write books to impress women and get themselves a rich wife—this, at least, is the belief of all the publishers I have known. I rejected this course. A rich wife would have been useful, but I observed that she would probably be an unhappy one. Being married to an author is certainly an honorable state, especially when he becomes a success. But then it is like being married to an Archbishop of Canterbury. Privately, he might lovingly admit that he would not be where he is had his wife not been constantly by his side: but she must on no account take this as an invitation to officiate at Evensong. She must remain in the background, and so must wives of authors.

I might have decided to write for money. I rejected this, too. Writing for money nowadays means writing best sellers. To do that takes a mastery of the arts of verbiage, self-deception and calculated mendacity so great that it would carry a man to the highest political office in the land. I decided that if I had these gifts, they ought to be put to better use and, in any case, I hadn't got them.

I then thought of writing to express ideas that would make life a nobler and more beautiful thing, but I soon found I hadn't got these either. In the meantime, I had filled two large folio notebooks. One day I reread them. When I had finished, it struck me that I could not write at all.

A ghost came back from the past. It was of my old schoolmaster, Mr. Wilkinson, who had once violently crossed out every page of an essay of mine. He had selected one phrase that had particularly offended him and he had encircled it with violet ink. I had written "a veritable Pegasus." In the margin, he had written: "What you mean is a HORSE." The incident remained in my mind because the very next day he committed suicide. We were never told at school why he had done it, but I could not help feeling at the time that it might have been because of my prose style. Now, reading my folio notebooks, I was sure it was.

I therefore sat down, day after day and month after month, to try to express clear thoughts in a plain way. This is very difficult to do in English. The Englishman does not like expressing clear thoughts in a clear style because it makes him feel French. Most English writers, therefore, do not try to do it. There are exceptions. David Hume was one, but he was a Scotsman who was driven to live in Paris to find anyone who would read his books. Still, Hume had proved that the thing could be done, and this encouraged me.

The results of my first few months of trying was a novel. It was a satire on British Colonialism, written as clear as clear could be. It was published in England and warmly welcomed as a graceful tribute from a young Indian to the sterling qualities of British Civil Servants under the Raj. Shaken by this, I sent the book to America. There, after some hesitation, the public saw what I meant, and I was launched as a writer.

But a peculiar sort of writer. I was not driven to give my thoughts to the world. On the contrary, I spent every morning sitting in my room, trying to find out what the devil my thoughts really were. I was not moved by the beauty and majesty of words. I spent every morning trying to write simple sentences as perfect as "the cat sat on the mat." In fact, somebody had given me a dog, who used to sit on the mat underneath my writing table. As an opening exercise for my evening's work, I used to write a few lines of her autobiography, as it might be told by herself. She had a simple outlook on life, so the autobiography began: "I was born in the house of a rich American," but neither she nor I got beyond the first chapter.

The task I had set myself was all-absorbing. I saw that if I were ever to complete it—to make, that is, a style of my own—I would have time for nothing else. I was an explorer, seeking treasure in the lush jungle of current English. I had to travel light, and in chosen company. I made up my mind to stay in my room as long as I could, to have no social life, and only one or two friends. I selected the rich American who had the house where the dog was born, and I had one suit made in which to go to see him. For the rest, I limited my wardrobe to slacks and shirts and sandals (for I was living on the Mediterranean) with one pullover for winter. That stopped me going out to parties. That is, it stopped me talking about literature until I knew how to write it—and it saved money which I would otherwise have had to earn by writing drivel and bombast. In my wardrobe, then, was only one coat hanger and I was very, very proud of the fact.

So I wrote, and the time passed. I was published. More time passed, and I was understood. I was happy; the dog waxed fat; the American was hospitable, but not pressing; and I still had only one coat hanger. But then I was overcome by a great desire to see my fellow writers and hear, face to face, what they thought of my work. So I packed my shirts and socks and pullover in a suitcase, borrowed an overcoat from a friend, put on my suit and bought a cheap rail ticket for London. The dog did not want me to go and, instead of sitting on the mat, sat on my suitcase. But like a perfect fool, I ignored her advice and went.

I arrived in London and a friend whom I had known in Italy took me to a literary party. It was a most distinguished one. I was very pleased. I should perhaps explain that literary life in London is a very compact affair. It is run on a principle of reciprocation, or, in other words, taking in one another's washing. Any dirty linen in the basket will probably be washed in public, but that cannot be helped. The vital thing is to be accepted into the laundrymen's union, so to speak. From the writers I saw around me, I felt I was well on my way.

In spite of the fact that I was a stranger, many of them spoke to me—not, indeed, about my books but about theirs, which was very kind of them, because it saved me from saying the wrong things: indeed, from saying anything at all. It was all most agreeable.

Then came the moment that, with natural vanity, I had been waiting for. Behind me, I heard a famous critic say:

"Who is he?"

I heard the voice of my friend telling him.

"Ah," said the famous man. "I've seen his name. Is he any good?"

I held my breath.

"Yes," said my friend.

"Ah," said the famous man. "How's he doing?"

"He's working on a . . ."

"I mean," said the critic, testily, "is he making any money?"

My friend paused. Then, in a sage voice, he said:

"Ah. Well, now. He's only had one suit in three years and . . ."

"Oh," said the great man. "Ah," he said, then, "Well." In those three syllables, it was clear, I was summed up, damned and dismissed.

Some time after that, Rebecca West, noticing my disconsolate look, struck up a conversation with me. We talked of H. G. Wells. She must have wondered why I asked how many suits he had. She answered, however. I forget the number, but it was a lot.

I returned to the shores of the Mediterranean, and my writing table. Once more the dog sat on the mat underneath it. I swore to her that never, never would I own more than one coat hanger and one suit, no matter how much money I made. She believed me. But then, she believed anything I said.

Well, I made some money, and for a while I kept my word. But somebody invited me to be best man at a wedding and I bought a suit for it, not to offend him. He christened his child with my first name, so I bought another new suit for the baptism, to bring luck to my godchild. I traveled. I moved to Rome. The dog came (Continued on page 122)

AUBREY MENEN, tall, broad-shouldered, white-haired at fifty, and a connoisseur of the absurd, is a native Londoner with an Indian father and an Irish mother. After working variously as dramatic critic, theatrical director, wartime organizer of Allied propaganda on All India Radio and postwar officer in India's Political Department, he settled down in Italy where he has written several books ("The Prevalence of Witches," "Dead Man in the Silver Market," "The Abode of Love" et al.), none of which is to be taken quite at face value. New York City apartment

A MAN'S IDEA OF COMFORT

MARRIED TO A WOMAN'S IDEA OF BEAUTY

LEONARD

One of the least supportable myths of our time is the all-too-common notion that designing a room to please a man means narrowing your choices to dark woods, somber leathers and sporting prints. For every man whose taste points in that direction, we can cite a hundred whose preferences run variously to bright colors or to pale colors, to light woods or to eighteenth-century French antiques. There are some things, to be sure, that most men heartily detest—just as there are some that almost all men ask for. But these are not superficial likes and dislikes that add up to a single "look." They are more fundamental, hence they can inspire a hundred different looks, the masculine origins of which are detectable only by observant analysis.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Cowles' New York City apartment is a good example of the infinitely varied possibilities. With the help of interior designers Edward Wormley and Richard Kent, Mrs. Cowles set out to give her husband exactly what he wanted. That she succeeded is not surprising. What might be surprising (to the sporting-print school) is that the Cowles' duplex has the clear, lively sparkle you would more reasonably expect had the lady set out to please only herself. Yet, beneath the surface every room plainly reveals not only how the president of Cowles Magazine and Broadcasting Inc., likes to live, but how, in principle, almost any man would like to live.

Like all men (see page 92), Mr. Cowles loves a comfortable chair. So Mrs. Cowles by-passed the more delicate type of antiques on which men perch uneasily as if for flight, in favor of deep-cushioned, generously dimensioned contemporary chairs and sofas for every room. As much as the next man, Mr. Cowles is partial to leather, and he got it—not in waiting-room browns but in clear reds, oranges, even white. And when he sits down in a chair, leather or otherwise, he doesn't want to have to stretch halfway across the room to reach an ashtray or park a drink. Mrs. Cowles has seen to it that he doesn't have to. Nor does he, a voracious reader, ever have to move to another chair or another room to get a better light on his book.

Like so many of H&G's male counselors, Mr. Cowles wanted a room of his own. His room is a library, opposite page, where "the fire, the book" and almost every other benefaction cited by our experts are in generous supply. There is wood paneling, of walnut. There is a substantial ladder for reaching the topmost of the bookshelves that line the two long walls. There are tall broad-brimmed lamps to read the books by, and to read them in, not only deep-seated armchairs but, opposite the fireplace, a sofa of stretch-out length. Not prominent but always within easy range is a TV set and a bar.

the same dedication to solid comfort. Knowing that her husband, like most men, feels hemmed in by clutter, Mrs. Cowles also endorsed simple, space-making furniture arrangements and unfussy window treatments—blinds or valance-less curtains. There is no confusion underfoot—floors are carpeted wall-to-wall or kept wholly, beautifully bare. And to achieve the ends usually attempted with man-made furbelows (which men tend to be cool to), Mrs. Cowles turned to more natural decoration—flowers. They greet you in the entrance hall, make a cheerful display in the morning room as you can see on our cover, and spill over into every other room in the apartment. Each Monday morning fresh armloads arrive from the Cowles' gardens in the country.

Mrs. Cowles loves vivid color. So does her husband. Echoing, no doubt, the suppressed inner voice of many men, he would be happy if she were even bolder in her use of it. But in this apartment a certain restraint was in order, for she wanted to create a congenial background for Mr. Cowles' distinguished collection of paintings and sculpture. An ardent patron of contemporary art (he is a Trustee of the Museum of Modern Art), he likes to live with some of his paintings in every room. His direct contribution to the apartment planning was to decide where each picture should go and hang it there himself.

A large part of his collection is in the living room, opposite page, a long spacious room well designed for entertaining. Since both the Cowleses are good listeners as well as lively conversationalists, they like to invite their friends in the small numbers that make good talk possible—and to provide each individual with the ease that makes it probable.

A pair of oversized sofas ranged along one wall obviates the clutter often perpetrated by a flock of chairs. For small women who find it more comfortable not to be enveloped in upholstery, there are two walnut-framed Louis XV fauteuils that make gentle, softening accents for the straight lines and large scale of the rest of the furniture. And for men who like to hold impromptu conferences, there is a pedestal table in one corner of the room, above left, plus leather-cushioned chairs.

The squares of bleached burlap that cover the wall make an excellent matte background for the abundance of paintings—also make it easier to switch them around from time to time without leaving tell-tale marks.

and an antique chinoiserie screen make an appropriately dressy setting for black-tie dinners. But these embellishments are for the most part above eye level, for the furniture is as comfortable and forthright as that in the living room or the library. The octagonal walnut dining table expands to seat twelve with no crowding, and in the upholstered armchairs the men can linger over their cigars and brandy in full living room ease. For dinner parties of more than twelve, small tables for six are set up at the ends of the big room, and Mr. and Mrs. Cowles circulate by changing places after each course with two of their guests.

The same tangible but unobtrusive comfort has been achieved in the more intimate precincts upstairs. In the family sitting room and master bedroom, as in every other room in the apartment, Mrs. Cowles has adhered to a formula of soft, mostly light colors, plus one positive pattern. But even here there are no frills.

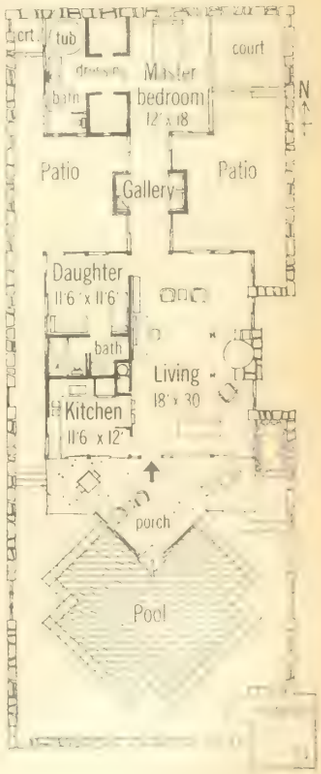
Although the sitting room, left, bears little resemblance to the library, it is a room a man can feel equally at home in. For feet-up comfort, the room offers not one but two oversized wing chairs with inclined ottomans plus a stretch-out single-cushioned sofa. Small nesting tables pull out from under the coffee table to hold Sunday night tray suppers or Mr. Cowles' breakfast tray. And the robust appeal of leather has not been overlooked—it makes the white overcurtains.

The Cowles' bedroom, opposite page, is actually more like another sitting room than a boudoir for it offers both a deep-cushioned armchair and a sofa with good lamps nearby for reading. In lieu of an ultra-feminine flowered fabric, the print here is a bold, vivid Paisley which is used for both the upholstered furniture and the strictly tailored window shades. Since morning light is an anathema to Mr. Cowles, these are abetted by blackout shades next to the window and shutters inside the room. The pale pink of the painted strawcloth-covered walls might be considered a concession to femininity if it were not for the bolstering it gets from the black carpet that serves magically to strengthen every color in the room.

Personal paraphernalia for dressing and grooming are nowhere in evidence for there are adjoining bathrooms and dressing rooms for both Mr. and Mrs. Cowles. But the bedroom does contain one small area dedicated exclusively to Mrs. Cowles' personal convenience—the office in which she plans all the operations of the household.

Above her planning desk in the master bedroom, Mrs. Cowles keeps a changing collection of small paintings, memorabilia

"A home is the greatest material reward a man has to show for his labor. It should reflect him..." And it does in



The house a man built to please himself

For a long narrow lot in a closely built-up section of Miami, Florida, a young architectural designer, Darrell F. Fleeger, designed this house as a home for himself, his wife, Ann, and their infant daughter. "I wanted my house to look as if I had built it," he explains, and close to half the labor that went into its building was, in fact, his. Hence it is an uncommonly complete and vigorous expression of a man's ideas on the spirit and the substance of home. Here are the facts: A high wall of coral rock, built 6 feet within the building line, encloses the house, a large forecourt and swimming pool, two patios and two small courts. The house itself, walled almost entirely of glass, contains 1,800 square feet within its two rectangular sections connected by a glass-walled gallery (see plan below). The bedroom section has a flat roof, but the forward, living section is roofed by an adventurous, high-peaked construction of laminated beams and pine planks, left, that seems to hover above the transparent building and its concrete deck like a great protective bird. More elucidating than any further commentary by H&G, we think, are the following extracts from the notes we received from designer Fleeger:

THE ROOF: "There is, to my knowledge, no name for its shape. I arrived at it after many hours of searching for a form that would be playful on the exterior, high and exciting on the interior and still feasible structurally. We love the changes in ceiling heights it gives us—and the patterns the trusses take when seen from different angles . . ."

THE DECK: "As a boy, I used to enjoy the front porch on our house in Pennsylvania. At twilight we would all sit out and watch the neighbors watch us. Today, with the invasion of the automobile, a front porch has its disadvantages. But within our surrounding wall, we have our porch without the disadvantages. And by placing it over the pool we have gained a new advantage—the soothing effect of water . . ."

THE POOL: "When we spend so much for this luxury, we should get our money's worth. Pools are cooling to the eyes as well as to the touch. These thoughts dictated the prominent location of ours where it can always be seen as well as used . . ."

A HOUSE TO PLEASE HIMSELF continued

MATERIALS: "Being basically lazy, I hate to spend all of my free time keeping up with maintenance chores. So I used materials that would age pleasantly—stone, glass, asphalt shingles, stained wood—and leave me free on weekends to enjoy the house . . ."

THE LABOR: "I worked out a design that would be within the scope of my limited construction abilities. It is a good healthy feeling to build your own shelter." [What Mr. Fleeger did with the sometime help of wife and friends: roof decking, interior partitions and paneling, wood staining and painting, all cabinetwork, much of the furniture.]

THE LIVING ROOM: "We wanted a room [right] that would be intimate enough for the two of us, yet large enough to accommodate a rained-out cocktail party. It had to double for dining, so we settled for a large refectory-type table which I fashioned out of some old door panels, a Flexwood top, Formica, copper and carved wood molding . . ."

THE KITCHEN: "I really had no business laying out the kitchen but Ann does not draw. Mainly she wanted an open bright room that would not be too large to be efficient or so small as to be cramped. For my part, I like to be able to see her as she prepares the meals, whether I am in the living room or on the deck. Since she is left-handed, I planned the functioning in reverse, but it is also comfortable for me."

THE BABY'S ROOM: "For the present her room is separated from the living room by a screen divider [right, beyond white wallboard], until we decide how much more storage space she will need. As the family grows, we will probably build another room on the roof of our present bedroom which was structurally designed for that purpose . . ."

THE BEDROOM: "For me the master bedroom [above] must be as far removed as possible from the rest of the house . . . I dislike clutter and too much furniture . . ."

THE MASTER BATHROOM: "It is large for a house the size of ours—6 by 18 feet. But to me it is almost pagan to be able to lie stretched out and totally immersed in a round tiled plunge bath [below] 5½ feet in diameter . . ."

ONE REGRET: "I personally would like to have had a workshop, but land size and wallet size did not permit. Someday . . ."

END ACHIEVED: "A home should be a friend—something you want to come home to, and miss when you're away. Ours is."

Color and a sense of humor temper the ruggedness of

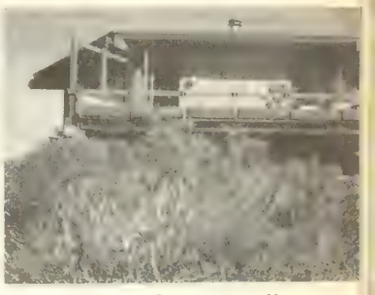
The house a wife built to please her husband

The classic planning team composed of husband, wife and architect may divide itself in any one of several different ways. Sometimes a couple works together with the architect; sometimes one or the other takes the lead. In the case of the Derek Parmenters of San Francisco, Calif., it was Mrs. Parmenter —a decorator as well as mother of three—who worked with designer John Carden Campbell of the architectural firm of Campbell & Wong to produce a vacation house specifically calculated to please her husband.

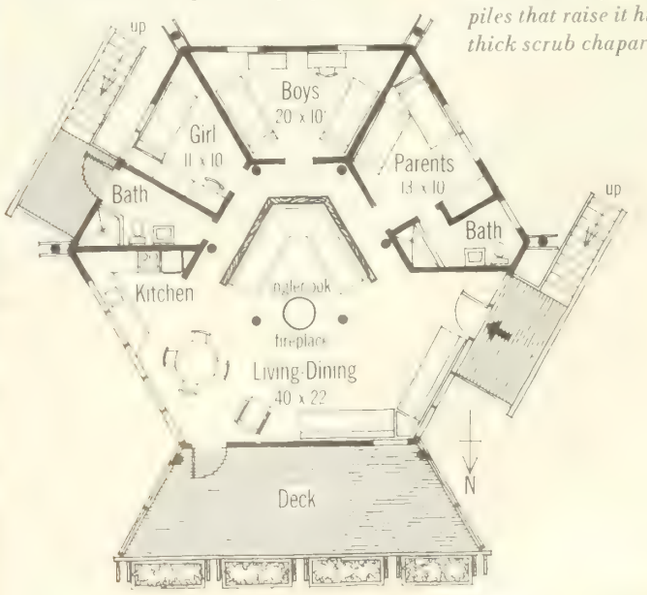
Built on a seaward-looking cliff in Bolinas, Calif., the house has all the ruggedness men love in a vacation retreat plus the warmth and gaiety Mrs. Parmenter created through her use of color and her deft choice of furniture and accessories. Mr. Parmenter had chosen the site because the cliff, with its wild undergrowth of scrub chaparral, reminded him of his own youthful hunting ground on the New England coast. The house, of rough boards and battens painted a weathered green, is as rugged-looking as its surroundings, and rears up over them like an eagle's nest to survey the sweep of the Pacific. The entire structure is, in fact, hung on six great wooden piles which are firmly embedded in the ground below and rise straight up through the house to support the roof. (Continued on page 83)

Peaked, skylighted ceiling caps redwood-walled inglenook.

Revolving fireplace near center of living room can face inglenook, dining area or conversation corner under windows.



Deck, shielded by glass wind screens at both ends, surveys sweep of sea and shore.



To make the most of the site, and to create a house closely tailored to the family's needs, designer Campbell suggested the hexagonal plan which includes a big and versatile living space plus a three-bedroom sleeping area with a remarkable degree of privacy for a house of 1,370 square feet. Three angled outside walls give the living room a panoramic 180° view, and help to define the areas for cooking, dining and lounging. The inglenook centered in the fourth side of the room behind the towering fireplace was an idea Mrs. Parmenter developed to create a quiet retreat for her husband. Its 8-foot-high walls effectively screen the bedroom area as well as turn the nook into a cozy pocket of space, psychologically separated from everything going on in the rest of the house.

The nook is lined with simple wood platforms topped by innerspring mattresses, the corners of which Mrs. Parmenter cut so that they fit together like a jigsaw puzzle. A brilliant plaid dress wool, tucked around them, looks appropriately masculine and is as child-proof and easy to keep clean as the bare pine floor of the whole house. Some of her husband's personal finds—a whacky Victorian wheel chair, a Mexican whale-patterned serape—prominently ornament the other side of the living room, and a personal conviction of Mr. Parmenter's is largely responsible for the plan of the kitchen. He persuaded her that dispensing with overhead cupboards would keep cooking and serving gear to a minimum. "Unless she is deceiving me," reports Mr. Parmenter, "the idea suits her admirably."

Six-sided plan was sliced into wedges to make three bedrooms, two baths and a wide-angled living room that fans out from central nook. Front door opens to one side of living room. Outside door from children's bathroom next to kitchen opens to small deck that has outside shower for swimmers. Including couches in living room and inglenook and bunk beds in children's rooms, the house can sleep twelve people.

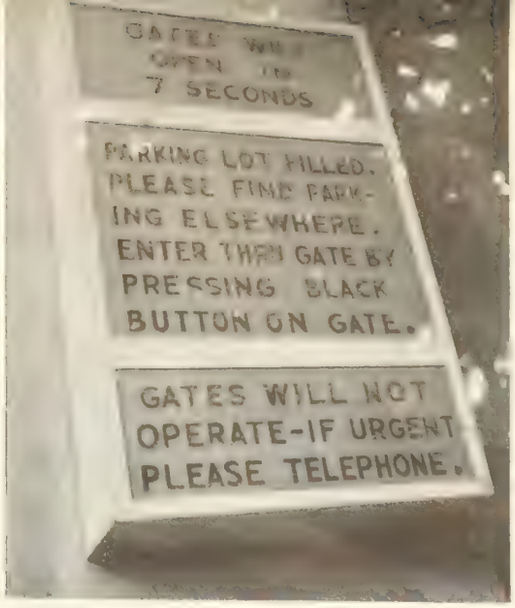
ELECTRONIC SIGNALS DIRECT A CAR-BORNE VISITOR'S EVERY MOVE FROM ARRIVAL TO DEPARTURE

The ultimate in masculine gadgetry:



READ BEFORE YOU PARK

Men love gadgets. Anything from a midget screwdriver to a complex push-button network that promises to do its job in look-ma-no-hands fashion will fascinate a man. Every one of our masculine authorities came up with at least one imaginative device he would like to see invented. But few matched the ingenuity of the electronic gates that Mr. John Hertz Jr. has installed to increase the efficiency of the parking space outside his house in Miami Beach, Fla.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT: James E. Voss

COURT HAS ROOM FOR FOUR CARS

A connoisseur of automation, Mr. Hertz has filled his house with devices to bring order and ease to daily living (see his bathroom, page 65; his wardrobe, page 63). Most spectacular of them all is the series of electronically controlled gates and signs he has designed to keep his parking court from becoming an automobile jungle.

As you drive up to the outer gates, your car crosses a treadle (1 on plan, above right) that opens them and activates the first instruction panel (2). Normally, the top section lights up informing you that "Gates will open in 7 seconds." But the parking court can hold no more than four cars, so if yours is the fifth, the lighted second section announces "Parking lot filled." Pressing "black button on gate" rings a bell inside the house to apprise the occupants of your arrival on foot. The third signal is for emergencies only. A time clock shuts off the system at 2:00 A.M. (or any other time when Mr. Hertz does not wish to be disturbed), turns it on again at 7:00 A.M.

Once you are inside the parking court, the upper part of the sign on the garage lights up, asking you not to block the garage door. As you turn toward the parking area, another lighted sign (4) beckons you in so gates will close behind you.

When you leave the car, you walk to the gate of the trellised arbor at the right of the garage that leads to the front door. If that gate is locked, an intercom will connect you with the house and someone will admit you by pressing a button.

When you drive away, the lower section of the garage sign (3) lights up to urge you forward until you drive over the inside treadle that opens the gates. Thus directed, you move out again to the uncontrolled, automationless world of traffic.

We asked our panel of experts,
"When your time is your own, how do you spend it?"
Again and again we heard the answer:
"Listening to music."

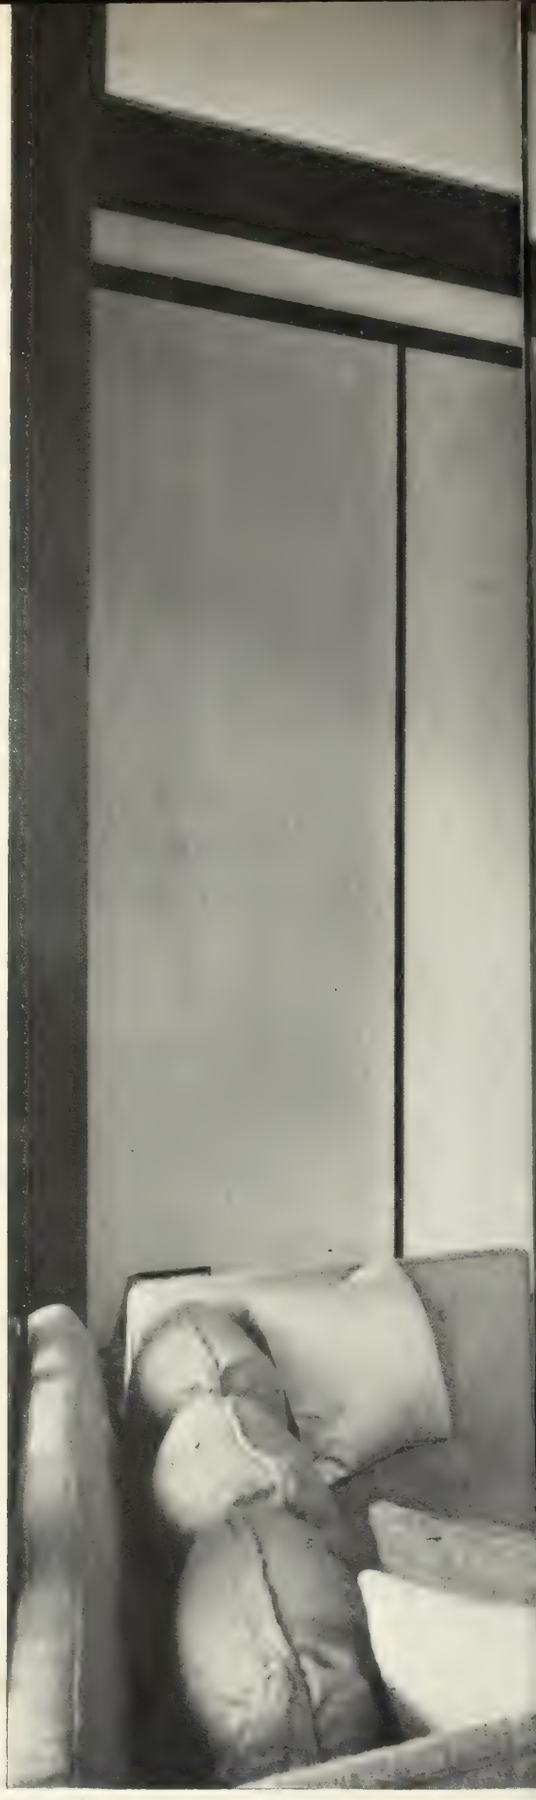
Two music systems any man would envy

Like a steady obbligato to our discussions of how to please a man were the repeated references to the pleasures of listening to music at home. This is a pleasure a man is likely to share with his family (none of our enthusiasts indicated he was in the habit of listening with earphones). But he is the one, as a rule, who is most passionately concerned with the technical aspects of the music equipment and the quality of its tone. However good his sound system may be, he wishes it were better—the equal, for instance, of the two outlined on these and the next four pages.

BACKBONE OF THE SYSTEM is the storage wall, above and opposite page, between study and living room. Cabinets contain: 1 records and tapes; 2 TV on swivel base; 3 controls, preamplifiers, recorders, turntables, desk with fold-back leaf; 4 and 5 speakers. Sand-filled core of the wall minimizes vibration.

1. A perfectionist's sound center

The basement of the Leopold Godowskys' house in Westport, Conn., contains six 100-watt amplifiers—enough to shiver half-a-dozen baseball stadiums. Only one watt of each amplifier's power is used. But the result is recorded music with the absolute minimum of distortion—the purest sound reproduction to be heard in Westport or, very likely, anywhere else. Fred Kamiel of Hi-Fi Headquarters who designed the system compares the prodigality of its wattage to buying a huge vat of milk and skimming off the cream. But to Leopold Godowsky the extravagance is wholly justified for, as the son of a famous pianist, an accomplished violinist in his own right, a chemist and co-inventor of Kodachrome, he combines the musician's sensitivity to sound imperfections with the inventor's urge to remedy them. And perfection in this case was all the more easily achieved because his music system was installed at the most propitious time—during the construction of his house.



The backbone of this unique system is housed in a cabinet in a storage wall in the study. Included in the equipment are two turntables, two tape recorders, two electronic crossovers, two preamplifiers, two tone equalizers, two tuners. The reason for all this duplication is that Mr. Godowsky believes, as do many experts, that no music system is any better than the recording or tape it brings to life—and that the true merit of a recording or tape can only be judged by switching back and forth between two sets of apparatus. What one may disclose, the other may veil—and vice versa.

In a cabinet next to the sound control center is a television set on a turntable that swivels 360 degrees so that it may be viewed either from the study or from the living room next door. Both TV and the film projector in a booth adjacent to the living room share with the record and tape players a galaxy of some thirty speakers that channel the sound to the living room, the master bedroom and outdoors to a lagoon as well as to the study itself. The living room speakers (Continued on page 88) are mounted in cabinets on the other side of the sound-center storage wall which also has in its center a core of sand to offset vibration.

The uses to which all these electronic riches are put are as varied and extensive as the scope of the equipment. Since Mr. Godowsky's musician friends are legion, the strains of live chamber music are often to be heard in his house and taped for future hearings. He is frequently asked by manufacturers to measure the quality of new recordings and also to judge new equipment. In addition, he makes experimental films, and he is currently perfecting a technique whereby contemporary history can be enduringly recorded for posterity. "Living Archives" is the name of this project which he hopes may someday offer the miraculous equivalent of being able to enjoy today a Shakespeare play as given in Shakespeare's time, or to hear the Gettysburg Address delivered by Abraham Lincoln. Although these performances are now lost to us, Mr. Godowsky points out that there is still time, for instance, to record in sight and sound the temple of Abu Simbel in Egypt before the waters of the Nile rise to claim it forever.

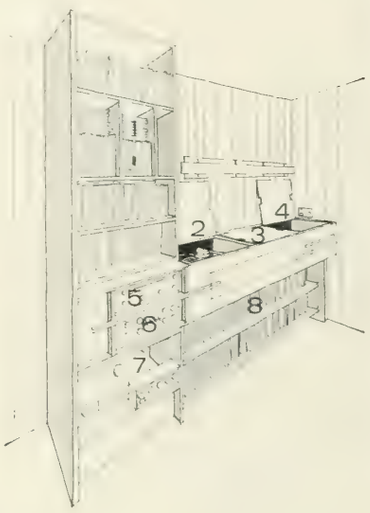
BOOK WALL OF STUDY is at right angles to sound-center storage wall (see plan, left), and includes at each end a large fabric-faced compartment for stereo speakers. The multi-room speaker system is also shared by swiveling TV and by film projection booth next to the living room fireplace.

SPEAKER WALL IN LIVING ROOM—the reverse side of the study's sound-center storage wall—has hinged panels covered in pale yellow silk. Center panels are opened only for viewing television, the others for access to batteries of speakers. Mounted in the wall at the right of the fireplace is a painting that slides back on tracks to reveal window of the projection booth behind it. The painting, like many others in the house, is Mrs. Godowsky's work. Interior designer: Donald Hess; furniture by Dunbar.

2. A dedicated listener's music bar

Fourteen years ago, Daniel Karsh, a New York advertising executive, acquired his first better-than-average hi-fi equipment, and he has been changing it constantly ever since. Always on the lookout for something, somewhere, that might be added by way of improvement, he has usually found it. But at the moment, says Mrs. Karsh, he seems almost willing to admit that the installation in their apartment living room is as close to perfection as a music system can currently come. And in addition to its sonic merits, the equipment is housed in a way that makes it uncommonly easy to look at and to use.



The three elements that require the most manual attention—a highly sensitive, single-record turntable for very special recordings, a tape recorder and a record-changer for party music—are lined up side by side in a long horizontal wall cabinet about the height of a bar. The cabinet has no top, but each of its three compartments has its own lift-up lid of transparent Plexiglas so that the unit within is always visible, but always protected from dust. At one end of this record-player bar, but set into a compartment in an adjacent floor-to-ceiling vertical cabinet, are tuner and preamplifier. Their controls are also exposed permanently to view—as is the Karshes' record collection stored on two long shelves beneath the bar. One-piece flush doors, however, hide the tape collection in the upper section of the vertical cabinet and the amplifiers in the lower section.

LIVING ROOM is comfortably furnished for listening with three large armchairs plus a deep-seated sofa (at right angles to fireplace wall). Speakers are concealed in window recess behind the sofa. Interior designer: Virginia Whitmore Kelly.

Two tall and shallow electrostatic speaker enclosures are concealed behind the window curtains on another side of the room.

The arrangement of these many parts is the epitome of common sense. But the design and materials of the cabinets that contain them have turned the Karshes' music center into the most important architectural element of the room. When the doors of the vertical cabinet are closed, it has the look of a strong wood column bisected by the record-player bar and its adjacent control panel. And both cabinets are made of walnut, in bold contrast to the lighter toned cherry that panels the whole long wall of the room including the fireplace breast.

COMPANION CABINETS contain all elements of music system except speakers: 1 tape collection; 2 single-record player; 3 tape recorder; 4 record changer; 5 tuner; 6 preamplifier; 7 amplifiers; 8 record collection. Upper and lower sections of vertical cabinet have flush doors on piano hinges to conceal their contents (see left); everything else, including record collection, is open to immediate view. Cabinets and light shield are of walnut in contrast to wall paneling of cherry. Front of the bar cabinet is embellished with inlaid rectangle of brass and moldings of ebonized wood, one of which ties it visually to tuner panel so that horizontal section appears to bisect its vertical companion.

What every man prizes above all else in his house:

THE MOST COMFORTABLE CHAIR

Sooner or later, one way or another, every man H&G quizzed came out with the statement that home was the place where a man should be sure of finding a really comfortable chair. A rocking chair, said some, "a chair as comfortable as a bed," said others—or "a soft roomy armchair with something to put my feet on." Prodded by these stipulations we searched the market for chairs which would, literally, fill the bill. Here are seven, each unmistakably man-sized, each covered in the kind of simple, sturdy upholstery materials men like best. And each is calculated to please a man in a different mood, whether he is of a mind to sit and read, or to sit and watch TV, or merely to SIT—and hopefully sneak in a cat nap before dinner. For a directory of stores carrying these chairs as well as other products for the man of the house, please turn to page 122.

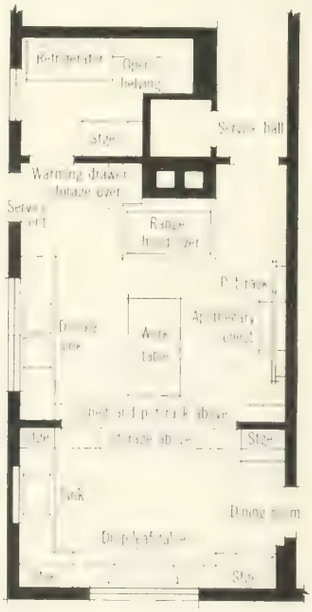
For listening to music, many men like to approximate the horizontal, and this black Naugahyde armchair and ottoman serve that end. Chair swivels and tilts back. $149.95. The ottoman is $49.95. Heywood-Wakefield. Through decorators.

For basking in the sun, a man might tote this lightweight steel-framed lounge chair wherever he pleases. Top section, padded with bright blue cushions, swivels freely on the base. 37½ inches in diameter. George Tanier. Through decorators.

For his role as paterfamilias, a man would be gratified to find the upholstered rocker, right, stationed in the playroom so he can enjoy the children's hour in utter comfort. $89. Selig.

For daydreaming by the fire, a man might ensconce himself in this generously wide (32-inch) armchair with its soft foam rubber and Dacron cushions. By Knoll. Through decorators.

For watching TV, the King-of-Ease arm chair and ottoman, right, give a man as much cushioned luxury as if he were lying in bed. Chair back adjusts to several different angles. $275 in muslin. Ottoman, $78. Kittinger.



The large majority of our masculine experts like to cook and several said they would like a new kitchen. Here is one designed by a man who had ideas about

A KITCHEN OF HIS OWN

If a man cooks, whether every day or every now and then, you can be reasonably sure that he is doing so primarily because he enjoys cooking. The same can hardly be said of all women who cook, which may account for the fact that many women are happiest cooking in a room that offers very little evidence of being a kitchen. A man, on the other hand, often prefers to have every tool of his part-time trade in full sight, not merely for the sake of convenience, but simply because he likes to look at them. This is the kind of forthright, functional kitchen that Mr. Gordon Tevis designed when he and his wife decided to remodel a gloomy kitchen, butler's pantry and storeroom in their house in San Francisco. For in the Tevis household, it is Mr. Tevis, cheered on by his wife, who rules the range. None of the equipment in the new kitchen is built in. Many of the staples and all of the seasonings are stored on open shelves. And most of the pots and pans—a glorious collection of brass and copper accumulated over the years—are not stored at all but exhibited, and as proudly as if they were rare Meissen or pre-Columbian sculpture. For his stove, Mr. Tevis chose a restaurant model of stainless steel because it was "large, firm and durable" and also contained in the top a salamander or open broiler which he (along with most famous chefs) considers mandatory for proper broiling. His work center is a huge baker's table to which he has added drawers for utensils and, at one end, a sheathed rack for his carving knives. (Paring knives cling to a magnetic holder on the wall next to the sink.) Yet, in this no-nonsense atmosphere, an antique drop-leaf table and splat-back chairs, which the Tevises introduced into the breakfast area that they gained by the demolishment of the butler's pantry wall, look undeniably at home.

A row of copper pots are strung like beads on a brass rail across the opening created by removing the wall of the old butler's pantry. In the area they gained, by the newly added window that looks out across San Francisco Bay, the Tevises have breakfast, and, in the evening, guests drink their apéritifs while watching Mr. Tevis prepare dinner.

Three-part arrangement of new kitchen follows former division of space into three rooms. Aluminum double-door restaurant refrigerator stands in one corner of former storeroom, where staples and baking dishes are stored on open shelves. Food preparation area in center seems much more spacious since removal of butler's pantry wall, yet breakfast area has sacrificed none of its former usefulness: there are cabinets at four corners for china and glasses, a vegetable cooler under the sink. Remodeling by Edmond De Martini of De Martini Bros.

Undisputed stars of this man's working kitchen are the mammoth restaurant range and the old butcher's rack laden with brass and copper over the antique apothecary's chest where Mr. Tevis files small special-purpose gadgets. Range includes a plate-warming cupboard (a Tevis addition) with three adjustable shelves. Next to it is a broiler with a tray that raises and lowers on ball bearings. Around corner is a trio of warming drawers, ABOVE, that keep food hot and either moist or crisp until ready to serve. For one of Mr. Tevis' recipes, see page 110.

"Having the people you like around you" rated high on our consultants' lists of at-home pleasures, but we came across a wide divergence of opinion on the art of

and the kind of parties men like to give and go to

When a man says he hates large parties, then doubles the guest list at the last moment or has to be dragged away from the enormous crush he had to be prodded into attending, you begin to wonder just what he has in mind. The answer seems to be that one man's "large" is another man's "small," but if it's a good party, size doesn't matter. We arrived at this after talking at length with an assortment of hosts and watching many of them in action. Their opinions were as varied as their ages, professions and personalities. But whatever their preferences or points-of-view, all good hosts, we found, shared one essential: a genuine delight and interest in their guests. It was notable in their party performances, in their thoughtful and almost instinctive attention to whatever would make their guests feel comfortable, relaxed and welcome. And it was implicit in their observations. That these were often contradictory only proves that hostmanship in practice is a very individual art.

How large should a party be?

For many, the desirable size would vary with the occasion and the space available. Others had strong and constant preferences—for instance:

ALFRED HITCHCOCK, producer and director of the current film, "The Birds": "The first rule is, there should never be more than six to dinner, or conversation will digress and leave the table. . . . Buffet parties are ridiculous. It seems to me the victim of these is the poor hostess. It's very possible she can have a guest there and not see him all evening. The same goes for parties where they have many tables: they're like being in a restaurant. I've got a hunch that the people who give this kind of party live very superficial lives, spread themselves among a lot of people and don't have any intimate friends."

FREDERIC CAMMANN, television producer: "We really love large parties. You're much more apt to invite a wider range of people to a large party. With a small group you must be sure everyone will get along."

ROBERT BROOKER, president of Montgomery Ward: "The number of people is important. In this house twelve is about right; in a larger house such as we'll have when we build, it will be closer to sixteen or twenty. But you shouldn't go beyond that, or you won't see anyone."

PHILIPPE COCHIN, agricultural expert at the United Nations: "A big party is much easier. At a cocktail party of 200 people you don't have to work at all. You just receive the guests, give them something to drink and everything goes. But we like large and small parties."

WILLIAM HOLZHAUSER, writer, former managing editor of the Los Angeles Mirror: "Our goal is to make good food and good conversation inseparable. For this reason we like to limit our guests to twelve or fourteen so they can all be seated at one table."

The role of the host

At the parties we went to, each of our hosts played a somewhat different part. Each made his contribution to satisfy his own particular interest or to fill the needs of the situation at hand.

FREDERIC CAMMANN: "Whether he wants to or not, any husband today must contribute much more to entertaining than he used to. You can't expect to come home and find everything done. Very few wives are going to do a lot of entertaining unless their husbands pitch in, at least to a limited extent. Anyway it's a little embarrassing when everybody gets up to leave and thanks you very much if you haven't lifted a finger to make the party any fun."

MRS. CAMMANN: "In this household I make sure that dinner's on the table. The rest of it—the moving around and making sure that everything is fun and gay and that everybody's happy—obviously falls on Freddy. It has to."

WILLIAM HOLZHAUSER: "When we entertain at home, I do the cooking whether it is for six or thirty-six."

PROFESSOR JOHN CONWAY, chairman of the Drama Department, University of Washington: "I usually do the cooking and my wife does the dessert."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: "I'm not a cook, I'm a supervisor."

PHILIPPE COCHIN: "I don't get involved with menus. I just choose the wine that we'll serve."

Guests & guestmanship

Our consultants invite people they like, people they think will like each other. None has a hard-and-fast formula for making up a guest list, but one man has worked out an interesting rule of thumb for seating people at the table:

ROBERT BROOKER: "You space out the spark plugs. Some people are self-starters and others have to be started."

What kind of guests do they like?

PHILIPPE COCHIN: "We like to see people who travel. They can talk about everything, not just their own business."

PROFESSOR CONWAY: "Sometimes you run into people who have only one subject. They dominate the talk with their subject and what they think. They're the worst kind of dinner guest. People have an obligation to do their part when they're invited out. It's like a part in a play. Some of the time you have to listen—a good deal of the time you have to listen—and some of the time you have to talk."

LOUIS HARDIN, Chicago lawyer: "I think the most interesting party is one where you have different people, in different walks of life, from different parts of the country. That's much easier to do in a city than it is in a suburb."

PROFESSOR CONWAY: "Guests ought to realize there are times when you don't want help. We have to entertain without servants, as almost everybody does. One of Dorothy's pet peeves is people who jump up to help her when she leaves the table to do something."

To dress or not to dress

"Dress according to the occasion" was the most common answer. By our own observation, men in the suburbs, in the West and in the Middle West preferred informal dress. In large cities, in the East and the South, "black tie" or at least a dark suit had more supporters.

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: "I think the whole question of dressing is rather academic: it depends on the occasion. What I do object to is a man appearing for dinner in a light suit. It doesn't grace the table very well."

PHILIPPE COCHIN: "I prefer black tie. Men have to change anyway when they come home from the office; black tie doesn't give them much difficulty. It's cleaner and more elegant . . . and the women always dress."

WHITFIELD MARSHALL, Houston lawyer: "I prefer black tie for dinner because there's no decision involved. It's a great simplifier of life."

TED NIERENBERG, president of Dansk Designs: "I don't like to dress formally unless I'm going to be served formally. To me black tie means adequate service."

PROFESSOR CONWAY: "One thing I hate is costume parties. I think the problem is that I work with costumes so much in the theatre, I hate to have to go somewhere in a costume."

Food for entertaining

Food—and they liked it festive—was important to all our hosts, whether they were cooks, providers or only consumers. The general lack of enthusiasm among them for the cocktail party seemed due even more to inadequate food than to noise and overcrowding.

WILLIAM HOLZHAUSER: "A successful dinner party has a lot in common with a successful play. A flair for showmanship and a sense of the dramatic are as essential to a cook as his sense of taste. The perfect menu, I believe, is full of little surprises. It includes courses with a story behind them. For instance, a platter of roast pintail ducks might recall a magnificent performance turned in by my Labrador retriever, or I can share over a roast of venison the memory of being caught in that blizzard on Idaho's Lembi pass."

ROBERT BROOKER: "In the summer, after we go salmon fishing, we plan our parties around a first course of Atlantic salmon. You never lack a topic of conversation if you have a twenty- or twenty-five-pound salmon on a platter."

PROFESSOR CONWAY: "The host or hostess has an obligation to serve food that can be eaten easily in the circumstances provided."

ROBERT BROOKER: "I would think foreign visitors should be given something typical of American cooking and as different as possible from what they might get at home."

The buffet vs. the seated dinner

This called for a definition of terms. What most of our men had in mind when they spoke of "buffets" were meals eaten from a tray or a plate balanced on the lap. To them, if you sit at a table, it is a seated dinner even if you have served yourself from a buffet.

LLOYD BRYAN, retired engineer: "I'm a poor tray eater and I don't like those little things you have to stand up and whittle on. We always go to the effort of putting up tables even if we have to go to the extent of building tables. Also, we usually serve something that has to be cut—if you eat on your lap, you don't want to cut."

TED NIERENBERG: "I like buffets very much. If you don't have space and service to manage more than six at the dining table, a buffet is the best way to have a gathering of friends for as long as you'd like to have them. But the menu has to be thought out. Anybody who serves fried chicken at a buffet ought to have his head examined. Knives don't belong on the buffet table."

FREDERIC CAMMANN: "When we entertain in the city, it's a formal dinner party. In the country it's always buffet. Everyone's expected to come in comfortable clothes, and everybody helps with everything. Deciding which kind of party to give is a matter of finding out what you've got and what you can do with it, and not trying to do a classic dinner party in a situation that doesn't fit a classic dinner party. People don't really have very much fun when anything seems forced."

Games, anyone?

For the most part the answer to this was a resounding "No." But "nice relaxing activities" like swimming, shuffleboard, dancing and listening to music escaped the ban.

ROBERT BROOKER: "If you're going to show movies or play bridge, you organize the party on that basis—invite only the people interested."

LOUIS HARDIN: "To give a good party you have to make people at ease. I don't think games are conducive to ease and that's why I object to them. Certainly they don't put me at ease. There may be some people with a great proficiency at games who enjoy them because it gives them a chance to display their proficiency."

PROFESSOR CONWAY: "I think games are awful. There's nothing worse than an American Thanksgiving dinner that ends up with two or three kinds of pie—then the hostess wants to play parlor games."

LOUIS HARDIN: "I don't think conversation is a necessary part of entertaining. Instead, a party might have music, dancing, a certain degree of relaxing so you forget your inhibitions and do some absurd things you didn't think you were capable of doing. Too much effort to make interesting conversation can seem studied—and be irritating."

In summary

There's no such thing as the one kind of party that all men like, but then, there's no one kind of man. We've come to the conclusion that if any kind of party is well planned and executed with attention to the comfort and interests of the guests, and if hosts and guests are really interested in each other, then it will be a party to please a man. For instance, the five different kinds of parties given and enjoyed by five good hosts—and hostesses—starting on the next page ——▶

A seated dinner
without a dining room

Men who like to eat at a proper dining table will put considerable effort into achieving that goal. The Frederic Cammanns, a young couple with limited space and unlimited ingenuity, have successfully reconciled their lack of dining room with their preference for served-and-seated dinner parties. When twenty guests joined them recently for an engagement party, the apartment living room became dining room with some rearrangement of furniture and two caterer's tables to supplement the family dining table. But where to serve before-dinner drinks? The problem was solved with the help of friends who lived on another floor of the same building. The Cammanns greeted guests, took their coats and sent them upstairs for cocktails. But as Mr. Cammann said later, "You can't spend the rest of your life going to someone else's apartment to serve cocktails. What we'll do next time is send the children to their grandmother's, put our bed in the children's room and turn our bedroom into the room for cocktails." At the engagement party, at 8:30 the host and hostess each gathered a group and led them downstairs to dinner. After dinner, however, there was the problem of changing the living room back to its original state. The host rose and said, "If the ladies will please leave the room, the gentlemen have a little job to do. You may not believe it, but this is a living room and we have to move out the dining tables." The men went to work, Mr. Cammann reports, and in five minutes the room had been restored to living room status. "What's more," he says, "they all had a great time doing it."

An accomplished cook's impromptu dinner

Guests help themselves from the buffet.

Many a man hesitates to whip up a party on the spur of the moment for fear of upsetting the cook's, i.e., his wife's, schedule. John Conway doesn't have that problem: he's the cook. And although both he and his wife have incredibly busy schedules—he as a Professor of Drama, she as a portrait photographer, both as active participants in Seattle's civic and artistic affairs—he undertakes with equally unruffled calm a last-minute dinner for an Indian playwright or a lasagne supper for eighty after the opera. The latter, naturally, takes planning. "But if we had to plan every party ahead of time," Mrs. Conway says, "we wouldn't see anyone." How do they manage? One part of the answer is teamwork; a second is organization (in their small kitchen, everything the professor needs is at arms' reach; in the dining area, table appointments are stored Japanese-style in labeled boxes). A third part of the answer is Professor Conway's skill in cooking. Most of his repertoire is Chinese or Japanese—ideal for impromptu parties since these dishes are quick to prepare and to cook. The menu for one party started with Mongol soup, cooked in its traditional brass stove on the hearth. Hungry guests served themselves, while others lingered at the kitchen door watching the professor put final touches on Chinese noodles, salmon teriyaki. This host-cook's only regret: "I don't like to be shut away while I'm cooking. Next kitchen I design is going to be like a drugstore counter."

A barbecue
brought to perfection

Most men, if they cook at all, consider outdoor cooking their special province. But few have studied the subject as thoroughly as Lloyd Bryan, and fewer still have designed and built their own equipment. Mr. Bryan has designed three barbecues: one indoors, with a section for smoke cooking (he cooks all the meat for family meals), another outdoors and a portable version, "The Rovin' Stove." Set in a long tile-topped table that serves as either buffet or dining table, the outdoor barbecue has a tight-fitting but removable cover and a fire-box that can be raised and lowered hydraulically to control the intensity of the heat. "To judge the heat," Mr. Bryan says, "I touch the cover. If it's too hot to touch, it's too hot to cook in." A firm believer in long, slow, covered cooking, Mr. Bryan put a suckling pig, the star of his summer barbecue, on the grill at 7:00 A.M. and left it there all day, basting it occasionally and regulating the fire. (For the whole menu and details of Mr. Bryan's technique, see page 108.) Guests arrived around 5:00 and the host was free to join them for drinks and some not-too-serious shuffleboard by the river. When the pig was ready for carving, the guests, under Mrs. Bryan's supervision, set up card tables on the shuffleboard court. Mr. Bryan removed the roasted pig and the grill, raised the fire-box, tossed on some logs and soon had a blazing fire to illuminate the table and signal the guests that dinner was served.

A satisfying
cocktail party

When fully examined, most masculine objections to the cocktail party are aimed not at the idea but at the abuses: too much noise, too many people, and, above all, too much to drink and not enough to eat. A cocktail party as it should be, and as it is at the Louis Hardins' in Chicago, is a wonderful way to gather up a group of interesting but busy people on the spur of the moment. The Hardins are busy people themselves and they very rarely have time to plan, but "love to have lots of people all at once." Their colorful, art-filled apartment is enough in itself to put people in a party mood. And the background of a party, to Mr. Hardin, is most important: "It is difficult for me to conceive of people feeling at home in stuffy and dreary surroundings . . . The place where a party is held should be conducive to gaiety of spirit and freedom of thought and expression . . . It must have a cheerful and relaxing atmosphere." Mrs. Hardin believes, "People should not have to stand around waiting. They should have what they want when they want it." At a recent Hardin party, guests found ample ingredients for do-it-yourself drink-mixing on the sideboard in the dining room, and on the dining table, a selection of beer, wine and champagne. The generous buffet included a huge chafing dish of spareribs, tiny hamburgers to be broiled on a tiny hibachi, a variety of hors d'oeuvres—sustaining fare for stayers, and almost too tempting for those who had dinner dates. For men's views on serving drinks, see Corkscrew, page 114.

Buffet dinners—the eat-from-lap variety—would rate much higher with men if the host or hostess always took care to plan a menu that could be eaten with a fork. As one of our consultants remarked, "Knives have no place on a buffet table." A good example of the right kind of food for a buffet supper was that served by the Philippe Cochins at a bon voyage party for friends in the diplomatic service who were returning to Chile. The pâté en gélée, vol-au-vent filled with an egg and mushroom mixture, salad of endive and beets were all easy to serve, easy to eat and delicious. In the Cochins' small apartment, the dining room has been converted to a study and they dine at one end of the living room. But for the party, they restored the dining room to its original purpose. This not only gave them more party space, it removed one of the less attractive aspects of buffet-service in tight quarters: the sight of the ravaged table. The timing of the party was perfect: the cocktail period was just long enough to allow guests a couple of drinks. (Another often-voiced masculine complaint is the too-prolonged cocktail hour, especially at midweek parties, and the late-late dinner that makes the following day a purgatory.) At the Cochins' party, guests had time after dinner to sit around and talk relaxedly over their coffee and liqueurs, to dance a little and still be home well before midnight.

HOUSE & GARDEN'S

Man's Cook Book

Are men America's best cooks? Men are, demonstrably, the world's best chefs, but how are they in the home as distinct from the professional kitchen with its sous chefs and myrmidons? Are American men wedded only to the bar and the barbecue? In pursuit of answers to these controversial questions, we asked everyone we met, "Do you know a man who likes to cook, really and regularly, not just as a sometime thing?" We uncovered hidden culinary talent everywhere, in men from vastly different fields—a TV star, a Bishop, an artist, a vice-admiral. All were enthusiastic, original and opinionated cooks, many were given to specialization: game and meat cookery, Italian or French cuisine, egg or seafood dishes, regional foods. They would willingly spend hours working out a recipe or adapting a classic, thought nothing of planning a party for great numbers of guests (or, on the other hand, firmly limiting the list if the food would suffer from mass production). To a man, they said cooking was a creative, satisfying relaxation. They were sensible about menu planning, carefully avoiding collision courses that would require simultaneous, last-minute attention. In almost every case, wine was an important, integral part of the menu, chosen to complement the food—or the food to enhance the wine (for their own words on wine and liquor, turn to page 114). Here are the results of our quest. We think they make a pretty good case for men as America's best cooks (even the women professionals who tried out the recipes were impressed). The defense rests.

Raymond Burr's Friday Dinner for 6

Raymond Burr, better known to TV audiences for his cross-examining than for his cooking, perhaps has spent more time with kitchen procedure than with courtroom procedure—he can't even remember exactly how long ago he started to cook. When he can take time off from impersonating the dapper Perry Mason, Mr. Burr likes to relax in sport shirt and Levis and prepare dinner for a few close friends at his Malibu, Calif., home. He tends toward seafood, Italian dishes or a combination of the two, as in this original Burr recipe which he dubbed Abalone Cannelloni.

*ABALONE CANNELLONI
FRESH GREEN BEANS, WHOLE BABY CARROTS

FRUIT CUP GRAND MARNIER
COFFEE

Abalone Cannelloni

6 abalone steaks (or 3 1-pound cans abalone)
4 tablespoons softened butter
Flour
1 cup coarsely chopped cooked shrimp
1 cup coarsely chopped cooked lobster
¼ cup chopped Cheddar cheese
¼ cup ricotta or cream cheese
2 tablespoons chopped chives
4-ounce jar sliced pimientos, drained
⅛ teaspoon each: dried oregano, rosemary, powdered allspice, powdered ginger, salt, pepper
3 tablespoons butter
2¼ cups hot milk
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
¼ cup champagne or dry white wine
4-ounce can button mushrooms, drained

Have the butcher slice the steaks thin and pound them to a pulpy texture. Spread the steaks with the softened butter and dredge them lightly with flour. Mix together the shrimp, lobster, cheeses, chives, pimientos and seasonings. Place a portion of the filling on each steak, roll up, and place, seam side down, in a single layer in a buttered baking dish. (If using canned abalone, split them in half and sandwich the filling between the halves; eliminate the butter and flour coating.)

Make a sauce by melting the 3 tablespoons butter in a saucepan over medium heat. Add 3 tablespoons flour and stir until smooth. Gradually add the milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add salt, pepper and champagne or wine. Cook 3 minutes longer. Remove from heat, add mushrooms and pour over the abalone. Bake in a 350° oven for 25 minutes, then place under the broiler until lightly browned.

Bishop DeWolfe's Dinner for 6

James Pernette DeWolfe, Episcopal Bishop of Long Island, traces his lifelong interest in cooking to his childhood in Kansas City. "My mother was a great cook," says the Bishop, "and I'm still using many of her recipes." He also draws on a library of five to six hundred cook books, is currently working on one of his own, to be called "From the Bishop's Kitchen." Bishop DeWolfe counts cooking as one of his two relaxations (the other is fishing), practices it for clergy and friends in his Port Jefferson, N. Y., summer home with everyone in the kitchen kibitzing, and at outdoor barbecues in his official residence or for an occasional special dinner of the Gourmet Club to which he belongs.

3 medium-sized onions, thinly sliced
¼ cup cognac
5 tablespoons flour
1½ cups well-seasoned beef broth
3 cups red Burgundy
2 cloves garlic, peeled
Salt, pepper to taste

Heat the fat or oil in a Dutch oven over high heat. Add beef, a few pieces at a time, and brown on all sides. Remove and set aside. Reduce heat to medium, add onions and sauté, stirring occasionally, until golden. Replace beef. Heat the cognac and flame the beef. Remove beef. Add flour to pan and stir until blended. Gradually add broth and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in the wine. Add the garlic and replace the beef. Cover and finish cooking in a preheated 325° oven for 2½ hours, or until the meat is fork-tender. Discard garlic cloves before serving, taste sauce and adjust seasonings.

William Holzhauser's Dinner for 8

William Holzhauser's cooking apprenticeship started at an early age; as a child, he frequently took over in the kitchen. Later, as both he and his wife worked on newspapers (he was managing editor of the Los Angeles Mirror until its demise, now is in public relations), he just naturally kept on doing the cooking. In Mr. Holzhauser's opinion a sense of showmanship is as essential to the cook as a sense of taste—every menu should have a surprise or a story behind it that will stimulate good conversation. To this end he limits his guests to the number his table can comfortably seat, twelve to fourteen, and serves Korbel Brut champagne rather than cocktails as an apéritif, preferring to spend time at the table over the food and wine rather than dissipating it in an extended cocktail hour.

11-ounce can mandarin oranges
1¾ cups sugar
1 cup preserved kumquats in heavy syrup
1-pound, 13-ounce can peach halves, well drained
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons grated orange rind
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon Grand Marnier
9 egg whites, at room temperature
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup heavy cream

Combine the mandarin oranges and their juice and 1½ cups sugar in a saucepan. Bring to a boil over high heat, stirring frequently, and boil until the syrup spins a thread. Add the kumquats, peaches, lemon juice and orange rind and purée the mixture, a portion at a time, in an electric blender. Chill well. Butter two 6-cup soufflé dishes, dust each dish with 1 tablespoon sugar, and sprinkle the Grand Marnier over the bottom of the dishes. (Preparation up to this point may be done in advance.)

Preheat the oven to 400° 30 minutes before serving time. Beat the egg whites until foamy, add the cream of tartar and continue beating until stiff. Thoroughly fold half the whites into 3½ cups of the fruit purée (reserve balance of purée and use as sauce for ice cream), then lightly fold in the remaining egg whites. Pour the soufflé mixture into the dishes and bake for 22 to 25 minutes. Whip the cream until stiff with the remaining sugar and place in a serving bowl. Serve the soufflé on warm plates. Pass the cream separately.

Dr. J. Harold Wayland's Seventeenth-Century Dinner for 6

Dr. J. Harold Wayland's interest in gastronomy led him to the specialized field of seventeenth-century English cookery, now his main preoccupation. Professor of Engineering Science at the California Institute of Technology, Dr. Wayland occasionally likes to prepare literary menus for the diversion of his guests. Here he has selected a Gargantuan dinner cited as "noble and enough" by Samuel Pepys, and reduced and adapted it to present-day proportions and tastes. The recipe for boiled chicken was culled from Dr. and Mrs. Wayland's book "Of Carving, Cards and Cookery," a hand-printed collector's item based on seventeenth-century cook books and playing cards; the original called for an ox bladder, which Dr. Wayland dryly notes "is not normally available in the average city market." Dr. Wayland credits Americans with being "the most gastronomically adventurous people in the Western world," a point he proves with the following menu.

2 teaspoons salt
1 large onion, peeled and quartered
2 stalks celery with leaves
5 sprigs thyme
Flour

Salt the chicken inside and out. Place the onion, celery and thyme in the body cavity. Dip in water a cotton sack or piece of muslin large enough to enclose the chicken easily. Wring it out and pat the inside surface with enough flour to coat it completely. Shake off excess flour. Place the chicken in the cloth or sack, secure with string and immerse in a large soup kettle of rapidly boiling unsalted water. (It is important that the salt for seasoning the chicken and the broth all be in the interior of the bag. The hot water quickly cooks the layer of flour, making a semi-permeable membrane which acts very much as does the covering of an ox bladder in the original recipe.) Cover the kettle, reduce heat to medium and cook for 1¼ to 3 hours, depending on the age of the chicken. Remove the bag of chicken immediately, open it in a large bowl to catch the broth from inside the bag. Serve immediately.

Edward Weintal's Outdoor Party for 6

Edward Weintal, diplomatic correspondent of Newsweek, believes that there is no better eating in America than the regional foods, especially seafood. On summer weekends, he invites a mixed group of six to twenty guests (foreign ambassadors often rub shoulders with local oyster fishermen) to his house in St. Mary's County, southern Maryland, and feasts them on locally grown corn on the cob, crabs he catches in the nearby creeks or the delicious local oysters which he either bakes on a grill over an outdoor fire or simply serves on the half shell.

Baked Crabs Southern Maryland

About 24 large live crabs or 2 pounds lump crab meat
2 slices white bread, crusts removed ¼ cup milk
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
¼ teaspoon Tabasco
2 tablespoons Gulden's prepared mustard
4 tablespoons softened butter
Dash cayenne pepper
2 eggs, lightly beaten

To cook live crabs, fill a large kettle to a depth of 2" with beer, vinegar or salted water (1 tablespoon salt to each quart of water). Bring to a rolling boil, add the crabs, cover tightly and bring to a boil again. Cook until the shells are bright red, about 15 minutes from time water boils. Cool the crabs, crack the claws and remove the tops of the shells. Remove the lump crab meat from the claws and the 2 areas underneath the top shells where the large lump is found. (For this dish, do not use other meat remaining in the crab. It contains more cartilage, and the meat will be shredded.) If you are using lump crab meat, pick it over and discard the cartilage.

Soak the bread in the milk and mash with a fork. Add remaining ingredients, fold in the crab meat and mound in 6 crab shells or similar large shells. Bake in a 400° oven for 20 minutes.

Maurice Brockway's Bucks County Dinner for 6

Maurice Brockway's interest in food is both professional and personal. As catering manager of New York's Sheraton East Hotel he plans menus and banquets for any number up to 1,000 guests. At home, he likes to give weekend parties for no more than ten in the restored pre-Revolutionary Bucks County, Pa., house he bought last fall. An enthusiastic and serious cook, Mr. Brockway seeks out and serves local Pennsylvania Dutch specialties—pork loin smoked a few miles from the house, sun-dried corn which makes a delectable pudding. "I've heard," says Mr. Brockway, "that we even have a local wine, but until I try it, I'll stick with the classic and unbeatable wine for pork—champagne."

Roast Loin of Hickory-Smoked Pork

12-rib smoked loin of pork (about 6 pounds)
¾ cup (packed) dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon powdered cloves
1½ cups warmed hard cider or applejack

Remove pork from refrigerator, spread the fat side with a mixture of the brown sugar and cloves and let stand until meat is at room temperature. Place the pork in a shallow roasting pan and roast uncovered in a preheated 300° oven for 1½ hours, basting with cider or applejack at 15 minute intervals. Remove pork to a serving platter. Skim fat from pan, add ⅓ cup water, heat to boiling point, and pour into a sauceboat. Serve separately. Serve with horseradish-applesauce and dried corn pudding (or fresh or canned corn pudding).

Pennsylvania Dutch Dressing

6 slices lean bacon, cut into small pieces
1 teaspoon flour
1 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
Salt, pepper to taste
Young raw spinach leaves or dandelion greens

Fry bacon until crisp and drain on absorbent paper. Reserve. Add flour to the pan drippings and stir until smooth. Gradually add the vinegar and cook, stirring constantly until slightly thickened. Remove from heat, add sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Cool slightly before pouring over the greens. Add bacon and toss.

Jerome Hill's Summer Luncheon for 6

Jerome Hill, artist and filmmaker, came to cooking by way of wines. Mr. Hill keeps his fine collection of wines at his house in the ski region of Sugar Bowl, Calif., where the storage conditions are ideal. When he first started to cook, he experimented with canned goods, but finding the results did not live up to his cellar, he persuaded the gourmet-cook wives of his friends to teach him the fine points of cuisine. Although Mr. Hill's menus are relatively simple, they are also subtle and much influenced by the relationship of wine and food. In fact, when he plans a menu, he always starts with the wine or wines he wishes to serve and then chooses dishes that will complement and enhance them.

Sole Poached in Vermouth and Madeira

Butter
½ cup blanched slivered almonds
½ cup dry vermouth
½ cup Madeira
3 pounds sole or flounder fillets
Salt, ground white pepper

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a small skillet over medium heat. Add almonds and sauté, stirring constantly, until golden brown—about 2 to 3 minutes. Pour off the butter, reserve the almonds.

Bring the vermouth and Madeira to the simmering point in a large enameled skillet over medium heat. Sprinkle fillets with ½ teaspoon salt and a little pepper, add to skillet 2 or 3 at a time and poach for 2 minutes on one side. Then with a broad spatula, turn the fillets and poach 2 or 3 minutes longer, or until fish is opaque and firm to the touch. As fillets are poached, remove to a large platter and keep hot in a 250° oven. When all are cooked, measure the accumulated juices from the platter and pour back into the skillet. Stir in an equal amount of melted butter.

Transfer the fish to a serving platter. Scatter the reserved almonds over the fish, spoon a small amount of butter sauce over the top and pass the remaining sauce in a sauceboat.

To serve cold, eliminate almonds, arrange fish on a platter, pour sauce over, and chill. Serve in the jellied sauce, with Madeira.

Vice-Admiral William J. Marshall's Dinner for 6

Vice-Admiral William J. Marshall, president of the Bourbon Institute, acquired a taste for foreign cuisine and a fabulous collection of copper cooking utensils during his naval tours of duty. Both are now put to good use in his home at Vienna, Va., where his leisure time is spent hunting and cooking. The results often take on a truly international flavor: local venison steeped in a marinade containing Chinese Hoisin Sauce and native American bourbon, a surprisingly successful collaboration.

Roast Saddle of Venison, Kentucky Sauce

½ cup Hoisin Sauce (available at oriental food specialty shops)
½ cup honey
½ cup tomato purée
½ cup bourbon whiskey
1 small clove garlic, crushed
½ tablespoon minced fresh ginger root, or ¼ teaspoon powdered ginger
1 tablespoon soy sauce
6 to 8 pounds saddle of venison, preferably from a young buck
Thin slices of salt pork
Kentucky Sauce

Mix together the first 7 ingredients. Pour over the venison and marinate for 48 hours, turning the meat occasionally. Remove the venison from the marinade and place it in a shallow roasting pan. Cover the top with salt pork, and insert a meat thermometer in a fleshy part of the meat, making sure it does not rest on a bone. Roast in a preheated 325° oven, basting frequently with the marinade, until the thermometer registers rare. (If the animal is older, adjust cooking time accordingly.) Discard the pork and serve with a sauceboat of Kentucky Sauce passed separately.

Kentucky Sauce

Combine ½ cup dry red wine, 1 tablespoon bourbon whiskey, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ cup tart black-currant jelly and ⅛ teaspoon salt in a saucepan. Heat, stirring constantly, until the jelly melts. Blend 1 teaspoon flour with ½ cup sour cream, add to the sauce and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened.

John G. Martin's Dinner for 10 to 12

John G. Martin, chairman of Heublein Inc., is also a sportsman, a raiser of game birds (at his Connecticut home, Johnnycake Farm) and a fine amateur cook. Many of his menus take advantage of fresh-caught or home-grown ingredients (he also has a fine blueberry patch) prepared simply but with style. A great experimenter with recipes, Mr. Martin finds Heublein imports often add that extra-special flavor he is looking for—vide the Avocado Bristol Fashion with Harvey's Dry Sherry.

Poached Salmon

3 quarts water
½ cup vinegar
3 medium-sized carrots, chopped
2 large onions, chopped
½ cup parsley, without heavy stems
1 bay leaf
1 sprig thyme
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon whole peppercorns
7-to-10-pound whole Atlantic salmon, cleaned

Place everything except the peppercorns and the salmon in a covered soup kettle and boil slowly for 1 hour. Add the peppercorns and cook 10 minutes longer. Strain through a fine sieve and cool. Pour this court-bouillon into a large fish poacher or roasting pan, and bring to a boil. Wrap the fish in a piece of cheesecloth or thin muslin large enough to extend 6″ or 7″ at both ends. Lift up the fish by the overhanging material and lower it into the court-bouillon. Bring to a boil and skim the surface. Reduce heat, cover and simmer very gently until the fish flakes easily (allow about 8 minutes to the pound). Remove to a large platter and remove the wrapping. Skin the salmon and garnish with sprigs of dill. Serve hot with a sauceboat of hollandaise, which is also used over the asparagus.

Renny Saltzman's Summer Dinner for 8

Renny Saltzman, a New York interior designer, does most of his cooking and entertaining in summer when he and his wife move out to Long Island. (In winter, he may go to cooking school to brush up on techniques.) Mr. Saltzman's favorite menu is one that allows plenty of latitude for long, lazy afternoons at the beach—an easy first course, fresh local vegetables that need a minimum of preparation and a main dish that can be three-quarters cooked in the morning, finished in minutes.

Veal Scaloppine with Mushrooms and Tomatoes

16 thin slices leg of veal, pounded flat
Flour
9 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup brandy
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
3 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped
1 teaspoon tomato paste
1 teaspoon meat glaze
1½ cups chicken stock
Salt, freshly cracked white pepper
1½ cups heavy sour cream
1 pound mushrooms, sliced ¼″ thick and sautéed in butter
¼ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Dredge the meat lightly with flour. Melt 5 tablespoons butter in a large, heavy pan over high heat. Brown the meat, a few slices at a time, for 2 to 3 minutes on each side. Return all veal to pan, heat the brandy and flambé the veal. Remove veal and set aside in a warm place. To the pan juices, add 2 tablespoons butter, the garlic and ⅔ of the chopped tomatoes. Cook briskly for 2 minutes. Reduce heat to medium. Blend in 3 level tablespoons flour, the tomato paste and meat glaze, stirring until smooth. Gradually add the stock, stirring constantly, and cook until thickened. Add salt and pepper to taste. Replace the veal in the pan and bake uncovered on the top shelf of a 375° oven for 40 minutes, basting occasionally with the sauce.

Remove from the oven. Transfer veal to an au gratin dish. Add remaining tomatoes to the sauce, then slowly stir in the sour cream. Add ¾ of the mushrooms. Pour the sauce over the veal and replace in the oven for 5 minutes. Remove from the oven and scatter the remaining mushrooms on top. Sprinkle the surface of the sauce with cheese, dot with the remaining butter and brown under a hot broiler.

Lloyd Bryan's Barbecue Party for 20

Lloyd Bryan's bête noire is, literally, a roast that is black on the outside, gray for an inch or so, then pink and finally blue at the center. According to Mr. Bryan this is the direct result of fast cooking. He is a pioneer in the art of low-temperature, slow, enclosed roasting which he learned from Southern Negro cooks twenty-five years ago, now practices at his Napa, Calif., home. Mr. Bryan, a retired engineer, even invented his own outdoor table-type covered barbecue. Says Mr. Bryan, "I have converted a lot of backyard cooks to my leisure style of cooking and none of them would go back to the old method once they have graduated from the short-order class." He proves his theory with the menu below, shown in action at an outdoor party on page 100, and in his carving of the pig served at the party.

Roast Suckling Pig

25-pound suckling pig (dressed weight)
4 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon white pepper
1 large loaf stale white bread, crumbed
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 pound prunes, cooked, pitted and drained
7 medium-sized red Delicious apples
2 cranberries or maraschino cherries
Avocado or other decorative leaves
Tangerines or persimmons

As this slow method of cooking a pig takes about 10 hours, light the fire early in the morning. Using charcoal or briquets, make a fire 18″ long and 12″ wide in a large covered barbecue. Let the pig come to room temperature. Remove all excess fat from the cavity of the pig and sprinkle it, inside and out, with 3 teaspoons salt and ¾ teaspoon pepper. Add enough water to the bread just to moisten it, season it with the cinnamon, remaining salt and pepper. Fill cavity of pig with prunes, 6 of the apples, cored and quartered, and the seasoned bread mixture. Sew up the openings or secure them with skewers.

Truss the pig by pulling the legs forward and tying in place. (Tie the cord to the ankles on one side, pass the cord tightly over the back or nose and tie to the opposite ankle.) Insert a 2-inch cube of wood in the mouth. Remove the eyes and replace them with ½″ wooden pegs. Curl the tail and skewer it in place. Butter the ears and tail. Insert a meat thermometer in one thigh, but do not allow it to rest on a bone.

Crinkle a 24″ square piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil, press it flat, then fold it over to form a pad approximately 12″ by 24″. Lay this pad on the grill and cover with another piece of foil, about 16″ wide and 30″ long. Turn up the edges to form a pan in which to catch the drippings. Carefully place the pig on the foil. Lower the fire about 12″ to 14″ from the grill, close the grill cover and adjust the lower vent for a slow fire. Cook for 10 hours at from 225° to 275°, or until the meat thermometer registers 185°. Baste occasionally with the pan drippings. Remove the excess with a basting syringe, but leave ¼″ drippings in the pan at all times.

To serve, drain off all the drippings. Remove the pig in its foil to a large board or platter. Replace the eye plugs with cranberries or maraschino cherries. Remove the wood from the mouth and replace it with the remaining apple. Conceal the foil with decorative leaves, interspersed with tangerines or persimmons.

To carve, slice the skin down the center of the back and slice the meat as required (for carving technique, see page 112).

Note: This method of cooking gives a delightfully tender and delicious result. Lacking a covered barbecue, you can follow a standard recipe for oven-roasting the pig.

Edward Fields' Sunday Brunch for 8

Edward Fields, creator of custom carpets, began "fooling around with eggs" twenty-eight years ago when, as the earliest riser in the household, he started making his own breakfast. Now Mr. Fields' egg dishes are the main attraction at informal, friendly weekend brunches. Mr. Fields, who likes to be part of his own parties, urges his friends to help themselves to food, mix the Bloody Marys and Screwdrivers. "I hate being a host," he admits, "and my friends seem to get a kick out of hosting me in my own house."

1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
¼ pound butter
2 large onions, sliced and sautéed in butter

Put half the eggs, milk, cheese, salt, pepper and 1 tablespoon butter in an electric blender. Whirl until foamy and pour into a large bowl. Repeat with the remaining eggs, milk, cheese, salt, pepper and 1 tablespoon butter.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter over medium heat in a large skillet or in an electric fry pan. Pour half the contents of the bowl into the pan and cook, stirring constantly with the flat of a fork, until the eggs have reached the desired consistency. Transfer eggs to a chafing dish. Clean skillet, melt remaining butter and repeat with remaining egg mixture. Add to chafing dish and serve immediately. Serve onions separately.

Edward Giobbi's Italian Dinner for 8

Edward Giobbi, an expressionist artist whose paintings hang in many American museums, dates his love of cooking to his art-student years in Italy when he first became acquainted, through relatives, with true Italian provincial cooking. By observing and writing down what he saw, Mr. Giobbi built up a fund of regional recipes, now prepares both these and improvisations of his own at his home in Katonah, N. Y. (The chicken with mussels is his own invention inspired by an old fish recipe from the Abruzzi region of Italy; the salad is also an Abruzzi specialty.) He not only finds cooking as creative as painting, akin in the relationship of form, texture and color, but also an enjoyable relaxation after a day in the studio.

Chicken with Mussels

½ cup olive oil
2 3-pound chickens (drawn weight), cut into serving pieces
4 cloves garlic, unpeeled
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
¼ teaspoon dried sweet basil
½ teaspoon dried rosemary
2 cups dry white wine
1 pound tomatoes, peeled and coarsely chopped, or 1-pound can Italian tomatoes, coarsely chopped
1 green pepper, seeded and thinly sliced
¼ cup minced Italian parsley
2 pounds mussels
Salt, pepper to taste

Heat the oil in a large skillet and brown chicken over high heat. Add the garlic, oregano, basil, rosemary and wine. Reduce heat to medium and cook 5 minutes. Heat the tomatoes and pepper in a saucepan and add to the chicken with the parsley. Reduce heat to low, cover, and simmer for ½ hour.

Scrub mussels thoroughly under cold running water and add them to the chicken. Raise heat to medium, uncover, and cook for ½ hour, or until chicken is tender. Remove chicken and mussels to a serving platter and keep warm. Remove and discard garlic cloves, if desired. If the sauce is too watery, reduce it over high heat. Add salt and pepper to taste. Pour over the chicken and serve immediately.

Ted Nierenberg's Summer Luncheon for 10

Ted Nierenberg, president of Dansk Designs, likes to allot a part of his traveling and leisure time to recipe sleuthing. He notes down any especially interesting dish he has tasted and, back in his own Long Island kitchen, checks cook books and adds, subtracts or changes recipe ingredients until, through improvisation, he arrives at a perfect original result which then becomes part of his repertoire. Mr. Nierenberg plans and times his menus so that good conversation can continue without the meal being ruined. For a summer luncheon, the cold soup and dessert are prepared ahead, the cheese soufflé to the point where it can go in the oven as the last guest arrives.

Gordon Tevis, a Chevalier du Tastevin and one of San Francisco's most talented amateur cooks, admits to forty years' experience in the kitchen. He comes from an old California family and a home known for fine cooking. As a boy, he watched the family chef in action. Now, encouraged and assisted by his wife, he likes to do the cooking for dinner parties or for very informal luncheons where guests help themselves to food from hot trays on buffet tables. Mr. Tevis serves California wines, of which he is a great advocate.

Alfred Rosenthal's Dinner for 6

Alfred Rosenthal, a vice president of Paragon Art and Linen Co., owes his skill in the kitchen to chance and a friendly chef. While working as a waiter in a small Catskills hotel during school vacations, he was given the opportunity to replace a kitchen drop-out and absorb the principles of French cooking. Today he uses classic recipes as a guide, adapting them to his own style and taste, finds this a stimulating talking point for his weekend parties. Mr. Rosenthal limits his formal dinners to six or eight guests, which allows him to plan interesting menus and the kind of dishes—notably boned and stuffed Cornish hens, soufflés and crêpes—that do not lend themselves to quantity cooking.

Chicken Maison, Truffled Champagne Sauce

3 large chicken breasts
¼ cup melted sweet butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
2 tablespoons minced parsley
¼ cup minced mushrooms, sautéed in 1 tablespoon butter
6 thin slices prosciutto or sugar-cured ham
6 strips California Jack cheese (or mild soft brick cheese), 4" by ½" by ½"
Flour
2 eggs, lightly beaten with a little milk
Seasoned bread crumbs
Peanut oil for deep frying
Truffled Champagne Sauce

Split chicken breasts in half and skin and bone them, leaving only the main wing bone attached to the chicken. Put each half between 2 pieces of waxed paper and pound until it is a scant ¼" thick. Brush inside of each half breast with the butter and sprinkle with the salt, pepper and parsley. Sprinkle a little sautéed mushroom on one end of each ham slice, cover with a strip of cheese, and roll the ham loosely around the cheese. Place each ham-and-cheese strip on a chicken breast, roll the chicken around it and secure by tucking in end opposite the wing bone.

Dredge chicken lightly in flour. Brush with the beaten egg mixture, thoroughly moistening all sides, then coat completely with bread crumbs. Refrigerate for 6 hours or more, or until thoroughly chilled. Deep fry in oil heated to 400° for 15 to 20 minutes, depending on the size of the chicken. Drain on absorbent paper. Decorate end of wing bone with a paper frill. Arrange on platter and garnish with parsley. Serve with Truffled Champagne Sauce, passed separately.

Truffled Champagne Sauce

6 tablespoons sweet butter
6 tablespoons flour
4 cups strong chicken stock
Few drops Tabasco
1 tablespoon liquid Maggi seasoning
Brut champagne, or good extra-dry French vermouth
2 black truffles and juice from can
2 tablespoons frozen sweet butter, diced small

Melt 6 tablespoons butter in an enameled saucepan over low heat. Add the flour and stir with a wooden spoon for 3 minutes, or until the roux is golden. Meanwhile, heat the stock to the boiling point. Remove the roux from the heat. When it stops bubbling, add the stock gradually, beating with a wire whisk until smooth. Return to heat and cook for 3 minutes. Add the Tabasco, Maggi and champagne or vermouth to taste. (Each time you add a little champagne, allow sauce to cook for 1 minute before tasting.) Chop the truffles and stir into the sauce with their juice. Just before serving, remove the boiling sauce from the heat and whisk in the frozen butter, bit by bit.

Fred Caligiuri's Barbecue for 6

Fred Caligiuri's business is also his pleasure. As president of Spice Islands Co., his working days are spent in an aromatic atmosphere of herbs, spices and the subtle seasoning blends for which his company is noted. During the week he leaves the cooking to his wife Valda, but come the weekend Mr. Caligiuri takes over as terrace chef at his Belmont, Calif., home and turns out tantalizingly seasoned barbecued meat or game (hunting and fishing are his other hobbies). Mr. Caligiuri admits to a fondness for thick barbecued lamb chops, rather than steak, and shows his Italian-Californian background in the accompanying menu: avocado soup, zucchini, pasta, a native California white wine.

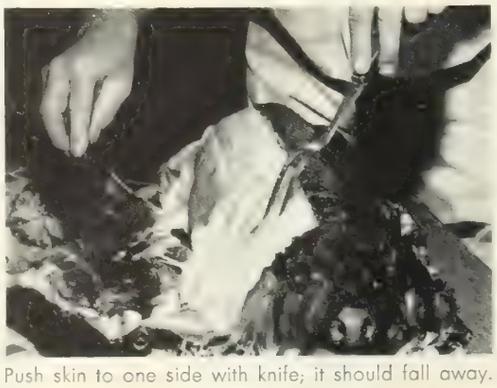
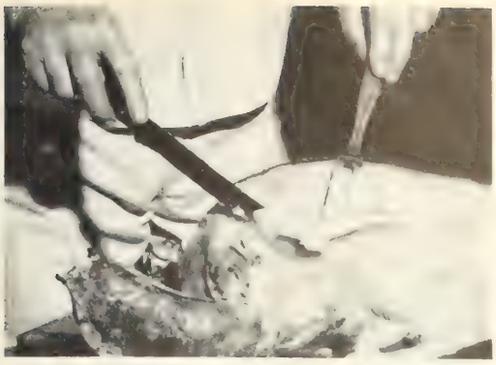
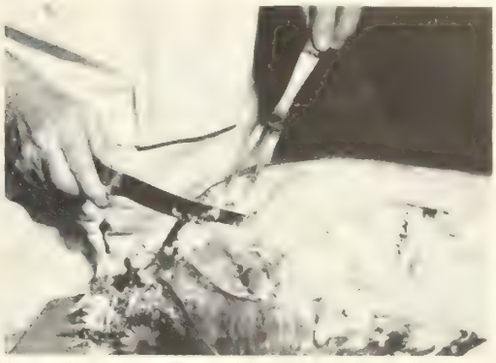
HOW TO CARVE SUCKLING PIG



Suckling pig, a delicacy well known in Spain and Latin America, has an ardent if limited following here. Lloyd Bryan of Napa, Calif., whose mastery of outdoor hostmanship is shown in the party on page 100, recommends suckling pig for this kind of large summer barbecue. "Pig is a very rich beast," says Mr. Bryan, "and should not be served too often, but it is wonderfully spectacular." His special way of cooking the pig slowly on an enclosed grill results in a rich mahogany skin and succulent flesh that yields to the knife. Frequently Mr. Bryan cooks the pig on a plywood plank which later, camouflaged by leaves and flowers. acts as platter and carving board. Recipe and menu on page 108.



MAX E. KERT



Insert point of knife, cutting edge up, under skin of pig near tail. Cut in straight line from tail to neck.

Push skin to one side with knife; it should fall away.

With the knife, slice off as much of the covering layer of fat as possible in order to expose meat underneath.

Carve the meatiest part of the pig (the ham) first. Slice with, not against, grain, as you would with chicken.

Carve ham into individual portions, arrange on plate.

Separate ribs with a spoon, then remove with knife and fork. Serve meat as requested in individual servings.

Removal of ribs exposes dressing; spoon it from cavity and serve. Lastly, carve meat from shoulder.

Cordials by Cointreau make the delectable difference in main dishes, desserts, cocktails (you simply cannot make a Side Car or White Lady without Cointreau Liqueur). Enjoy one tonight.

Marinade and Basting Sauce for Barbecue:

½ cup melted butter
4 cups Sherry wine
4 teaspoons powdered cloves
½ cup dry mustard
2 oz. Cointreau Liqueur
¼ cup brown sugar
4 teaspoons paprika

Combine sauce ingredients and marinate meat in mixture for two hours, turning once. Broil to taste, turning frequently and basting with marinade... For your free copy of "Gourmet's Guide," write to Dept. 91, Cointreau Ltd., Pennington, N. J.

CORKSCREW

In response to H&G's queries on hostmanship, our consultants spoke out firmly about two traditionally male provinces:

The Cellar and the Bar

No matter where they lived, how they entertained or how large or small a part they played in the actual preparation of a party, all of our armchair experts jealously guarded that masculine prerogative, the care, choice and serving of wines and liquors. As our own specialist, James Beard, puts it, "Retaining control of home bartending is not just a matter of prestige. It's also a matter of taste. I do not mean only the good taste of propriety, but the good taste of what goes into your mouth."

Pre-dinner Drinking

The attitude of our consultants to the amount of time given to predinner drinking was summed up by one outspoken host.

ROBERT BROOKER: "The only thing I really object to are those long, long cocktail hours, when you're invited for seven o'clock and you eat at ten. It spoils your food."

On the subject of what to serve, opinions ranged far and wide.

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: "If you're having a really gourmet dinner, you should not have any hard liquor at all—you're better off with a little wine or champagne."

WHITFIELD MARSHALL: "You should never confine people to any one kind of drink. If your party's going to be good, you should make everyone happy."

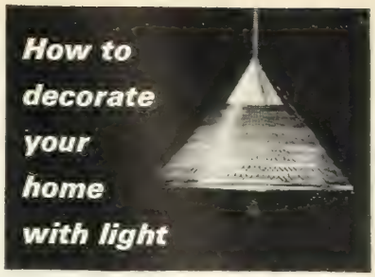
TED NIERENBERG: "We tried to cut out hard liquor before dinner, but it's impossible to do that in this country without being rude to your guests."

Wine and Wisdom

When it came to wine, our consultants really waxed eloquent. To them the relationship between the meal and the wines that accompany it was of first importance, and they were willing to put a lot of time and thought into scouting, tasting and matching the wine to the dish. Californians were particularly enterprising and articulate on the subject.

J. HAROLD WAYLAND: "One of my pet peeves is the snobbery—much more prevalent in the eastern part of the U.S. than in California—which deprecates American wines. I have set a rule that I never buy a wine from a company that systematically refuses to use vintage-year labels unless I can taste the particular wine before buying any quantity and can be assured that every bottle of the wine I am buying is from the same lot as the bottle I tasted. And this keeps some pretty well-advertised wines out of my cellar. But I never have to be ashamed of the wines I serve."

WILLIAM HOLZHAUSER: "We serve both California and French wines, but never try to pit one against the other. It is true, of course, that many of the California wines frequently win out in comparative tastings. However, who can say which is best? Because of difference in climate, soil and methods, each remains a gift from God."



ALFRED HITCHCOCK: "There are certain things that bother me about entertaining. My conscience bothers me when I think I'm wasting good wine by having it swilled down by the uninitiated. On the other hand, if I give them a modest wine which they are enjoying extremely well, my conscience bothers me because I haven't given of my best. I never know what to do about it."

The Parting Cup

The subject of post-prandial imbibing didn't evoke the controversy of pre-dinner drinking. All our hosts seemed to be agreed that this was no more than a nice way to round off the evening.

ALFRED ROSENTHAL: "After dinner I don't care what anyone drinks. I serve brandy and liqueurs, but they can have Scotch if they like."

FRANCIS TAUSSIG, publishing executive: "If you serve drinks after dinner, you ought to have a choice of three or four things: something sweet that women like, such as crème de menthe; some really good brandy and perhaps Drambuie or B & B; or a good Stinger that will really take care of everything."

Mountain resorts

German, French or Italian culture superimposed on the Swiss shows up as clearly in a mountain resort as in a large city—for instance, the south-central Alpine towns of Grindelwald in the German-speaking Bernese Oberland, and Crans-sur-Sierre, in the adjacent French-speaking Valais. Grindelwald is a small, typically gemütlich village, enjoyable at any time of year. It lies in the shadow of the Eiger's north face and to wake up in the traditional early morning mist, step onto your bedroom balcony and watch the clouds wreathe and dissolve and clear, in minutes, from the black face of the mountain is an experience of quite unearthly beauty. But the real sensation is to take a mountain railroad up to the Jungfraujoch, the 11,329-foot saddle upon which stands Europe's highest observatory. Or you can compromise and go as far as the Kleine Scheidegg pass, which has an equally stupendous view at a less dizzying altitude.

Utterly different is the Swiss-French resort of Crans, now considered by the knowing to be more chic than St. Moritz. Crans has all the Gallic earmarks: Parisian hairdressers, ties from Carven and Dior and high-priced French and Italian boutiques. But in spite of this sophisticated gloss, the place offers some simple pleasures. I was taken to the Cervin, a log hut restaurant where the dish of the house is raclette. A side of cheese is toasted before a brazier of pine cones, the melted part then scraped, sizzling, onto your plate with the accompaniment of gherkins and a boiled potato. The whole thing is helped along with prodigious quantities of Fendant en carafe, followed by another and then another scraping of the hot cheese. Such evenings begin at nine and continue into the small hours, for this leisurely meal of protracted snacks has the same effect upon people's loquacity as an Arab mezze. It is a good formula for informal country entertaining, and well worth getting the pine cones for the fire. You may not be able to buy the special Swiss cheeses (bagnes and conches) but you can compromise with any hard, dry cheese that has a good crust to it—the crust, when slightly scorched, is delicious.

Also at Cervin, I had one of the many versions of rösti. This dish is simplicity itself to prepare. Boil some potatoes whole in their skins, and, before they are quite cooked, peel them. Slice finely, and lay flat to fill a heavy frying pan. Pour a little olive oil over the top, plus a squeeze of lemon juice and lots of salt and ground pepper. Fry until crisp on one side only, and then cut into wedges to serve.

The Italian region

The twin lakeside resorts of Locarno, heading the Swiss part of Lake Maggiore, and Lugano, on the lake of the same name, represent Switzerland's spearheads into southern Europe. Suddenly, all is Italianate languor and satin calm and cypress trees, a milky opalescent light replacing the sharp, stupendous clarity of the north. I was there in October, when the sky was blue and clear and it was still warm enough to sit outside over

KILLER!

(OF FLIES AND MOSQUITOES, THAT IS)

There are over 275,000 insects in every back yard . . . walking, flying, leaping, swimming, boring. They're buzzing, crawling, stinging, biting, eating your barbecued hamburger, drowning in your iced tea, taking the fun out of outdoor living.

And you?

Well, you can swat, swear, suffer . . . hide indoors use a BVI INSECT FOGGER. Takes but a minute—your outdoor living area remains bug-free for hours.

Just fill the container of the BVI INSECT FOGGER with ordinary oil-based insecticide. When you pull the trigger, a built-in electric pump forces insecticide through the atomizing nozzle into a heated fog-producing chamber. The heat vaporizes the insecticide and a thick fog surges from the end of the barrel. As the fog spreads through the air and rolls over the ground, it kills insects on contact! You can occupy the fogged areas immediately, but the insect-killing effect lasts for many hours. The barrel is easily detachable, converting unit into an effective sprayer for applying water-base garden sprays, weed killers and similar liquids. Just $34.95* wherever garden products are sold.

Makes Outdoor Living Fun again!

BVI CORDLESS ELECTRIC GRASS CLIPPER—Ends blister-raising, finger-cramping clipping with hand shears. Operates on standard flashlight batteries. $9.95*

BVI ALL-PURPOSE ELECTRIC SPRAYER—Built-in motor. Just plug in—pull the trigger to spray paint, varnish, moth-proofers, garden sprays, weed-killers. $13.95*

*Suggested retail price. If your favorite dealer doesn't yet have these BVI products in stock, send check or money order to Dept. HG, Burgess Vibrocrafters, Inc., Grayslake, Ill., for prompt postpaid delivery.

Good Housekeeping

H&G'S GARDENER'S

Garden husbandry— 9 ways to improve it

While the word husbandry was long ago put up for grabs by both men and women, the lexicographers still leave it a slightly masculine ring. This is undoubtedly a good thing. How otherwise could you describe appropriately the special kind of housekeeping skill that men gardeners seem to exhibit more srikingly and more often (when they exhibit it at all) than most women gardeners do? To say that good husbandry is becoming to a man scarcely defines it. But rather than attempt a definition, we prefer to list some of the skills and practices good husbandry involves and suggest ways to improve them. You will see a few specifics across the bottom of these pages. Here are nine basic recommendations for upgrading your husbandry.

1. Understand the true nature of your garden earth. The most important single thing for the gardener to bear in mind when he considers the ground in which he intends to make a garden is that—whatever its original nature—the soil must be converted into a highly specialized blend of sand and clay (decomposed rock), and of organic matter (mostly decayed vegetation). The gardener's true intent should not be to simulate nature but to improve on it. What with the complex requirements of ornamental landscape trees, shrubs and other plants, natural soils would be wholly unequal to the task for more than a season or two on the average small home landscape. Constant renewal of what, in the past, H&G has often referred to as "gardener's loam" is essential. This means not only putting on annual supplements of compost or leafmold or peatmoss but also maintaining a proper balance of mineral and organic matter, of clay, sand or just plain dirt. Good husbandry will dictate that a bale or two of moist peatmoss will be always handy, that at least one leaf or compost pile will be ready to yield a bushel or so of fibrous plant compost, that a shovelful of sand will always be available to add weight—and grit—to fluffy earth. Mere availability is not enough. They should be used.

2. Learn and satisfy the requirements of your plants. In the first five months of this year, H&G dwelt at some length on the great forces that influence plant growth. The good husbandman provides for each of his plants the kind of light, air, soil, moisture and orientation that will enable it to do its best. Books and magazine articles can put these into words. But only the truly interested gardener can translate the words into superior plant performance. As the virtuoso told the aspiring violinist who wanted to know how to score a hit at Carnegie Hall: practice. You can be a good gardener by practicing by the book. You can become a very good gardener only by working at it. This is not as hard as it sounds and is a lot more fun.

3. Step up to a better variety whenever you replace a plant. Sometimes a plant dies over winter and must be replaced. Sometimes a good plant turns out to have been put in the wrong location. Sometimes an entirely new planting is called for either by the working out of a good landscape scheme or by the whim of the perpetrator. In whatever case, the good husbandman—mindful of the inexorable rule that to hold even is to slip backwards—will plant an improved plant whenever he gets a chance. This may be anything from substituting known species for a nondescript one (even that can be a step up) to the substitution of a fine holly with proved fruit-bearing qualities for one of the same species with indifferent berries. TOM LEONARD

MONTH

It's not that men are better gardeners than women, just that some men do some things better sult good mail-order lists and nursery specialists. No bargain or "wonder plants" need apply.

4. Use plants to enhance everyday life. You don't garden in a vacuum—at least most people don't, even men. And a good garden can be a fine adornment to the busiest kind of modern living. This is largely a matter of good planning and common sense. It does not mean that you must confine yourself to flower borders or foundation plantings. Every part of a good garden may contribute to your family's total enjoyment. And fine collections of choice and well-chosen plants can lift everybody's spirit as much as and in the same way fine paintings do.

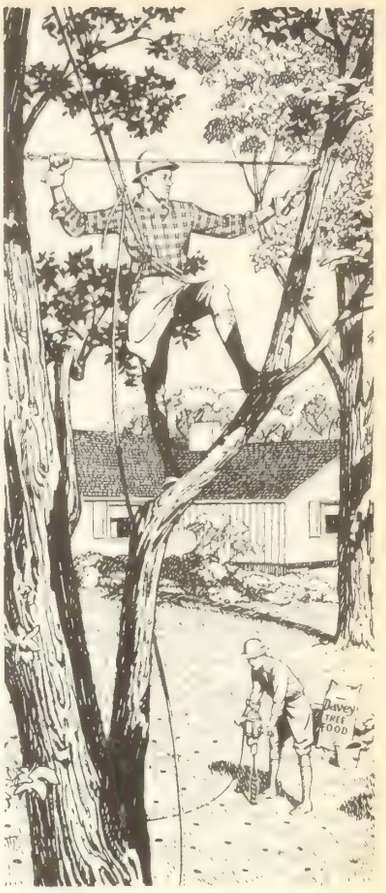
5. Plan landscapes for greatest sensory appeal. This won't mean much until you stop to think about it. Then you will realize that what we have in mind are such things as these: flowers that stay open at night; plants that have fragrant foliage as well as flowers; thick turf that is fun to walk on, a variety of textures in paths and walks; well-placed sculpture (not too much) at strategic points; the sound as well as the sight of moving water; trees and shrubs that offer a new show—of flowers, foliage, fruit or all three—as the seasons change; a landscape plan that offers surprise and stimulation along with restful peace.

6. Let others share your garden's enjoyment. Only the very irascible or the very eccentric will shut their friends out of their gardens. Pride alone can make hospitality a pleasure. Unless the exigencies of raising a certain kind of plant material make it impossible, provide for the enjoyment of your friends, don't merely suffer them. Gardening may be considered a happy accompaniment to either solitude or gregariousness. It is scarcely necessary to add that this is more than providing benches where visitors can rest their feet.

7. Make sure your plants grow as well as they know how. If this smacks of anthropomorphism, rest assured that even the humblest plant seems to sense when it is being short-changed in matters of light, nutrition, moisture or improper planting. And even plants that are given all the routine care the rule books call for will respond, so help us, to the TLC that a good doctor or nurse knows is so important to the care of ill children. It is not alone what the knowledgeable gardener does for his plants that makes the difference, but how he does it—and above all, when he does it. In fact, if we had to pick a sixth sense for gardeners, it would be the sense of timing. So when you add the needed dose of plant food, do it at the right time. Don't water your lawn until it really needs it; then water it—and liberally. When you cut a branch, make sure you know what the eventual effect will be—and that you want that effect. In a sense, the good husbandman is as zealous in husbanding his plant's resources as his own.

8. Risk part of your annual garden budget on new plants and seeds. This is no risk, really. It comes under the head of research and development—as necessary to the well-run garden as to orbital flight. While plant hybridizing is undoubtedly a business in its most effective application, it is a venture business. All of your modern roses, most of your prettiest rhododendrons, many of your loveliest lilacs, the most pest-resistant of suburban street trees and virtually all the blight-resistant fruits and vegetables were the result of informed guesses or patient experiment. The gardener who wishes to excel will be no less aware of the possibilities inherent in new plant groupings, improved foliage forms, more floriferous or colorful displays. This could mean many dollars a year. It could also mean fifty cents.

9. Increase your time for gardening by reducing drudgery. To the aficionado, garden work is not work. But also to the aficionado, time is of the essence—and there is never enough of it. So even though you enjoy chopping weeds or trimming edges, beware such luxuries. There are more important things for the gardener to do. So put first things first—or at least second.



RALPH BAILEY

FERTILIZE FREELY (roses, left) for best performance. Most garden varieties of ornamental plants simply will not excel unless cared for like thoroughbreds. PROTECT FROM PESTS, center, and that doesn't always mean to spray against insects. Netting keeps birds from slashing these 'Baron Solemacher' strawberries. KEEP A NEAT HOUSE—or in this case, right, a tidy utility space. Incidental asset is the heavy-duty wheelbarrow.

Notes for July Gardeners

In some cases the triumph of mind over muscle is simply the triumph of muscle

First weekend

Power play. The power lawn mower and the power tiller are operated these days by almost everyone in the family. But there are still many heavy-duty appliances, available for purchase or for rental, that are wholly unsafe for any but a careful and able-bodied male to use. Heavy tillers, all mold-board plows, most tractor-drawn earth-moving utensils and, above all, portable chain saws should never be operated by anyone without previous supervised experience in handling such machines. So much for the general, and emphatic, caveat. On the positive side, a chain saw, for example, will fell more trees and cut more cordwood in an hour than any two amateur handymen could accomplish in a full day's toil. The romance will be missing, the racket will be excruciating, the risks of careless handling will be very real, but so will the results of well-directed effort.

To fell a tree—even a smallish one—requires a knack that approaches art. And muscle as well. Certainly if you are going to fell a tree over 25 feet tall, you will hire a specialist. For the rest, while the knack of using a chain saw is really not hard to learn, you may do as well to hire an itinerant sawyer. He will work faster, make less mess and take all the risks. But he will cost more, probably, than if you hire a saw from a tool rental concern (the countryside is full of them) and do the work yourself. If you have used a chain saw before, you are probably quite capable of doing your own work. To cut more than a cord of wood (a pile of 4-foot logs that measures 4 by 8 feet or the equivalent), you will need help unless you are in tip-top physical shape. But all concerned should remember that a working chain saw is like a loaded gun. It shoots where you aim it.

Every reader's ploy: Far from inconsequential, though not likely to shake the world, is Janet Gillespie's delightful new book, "The Joy of a Small Garden" (Dodd-Mead, $3.75). Actually what the book communicates is the joy of a gardener who has a sense of humor and a wonderful way with growing things. Touched on are such subjects as planning, transplanting, mind-changing, people-wheedling, husband-rearing, budget-balancing and other horticultural performances. A lovely book—taken either all at once or in pre-sleep chapters. (For one chapter, on plant scrounging, see H&G, May, 1963.)

Second weekend

Real spadework. Double digging is all but a lost art. Yet, by no other means can a topnotch flower border be so well fitted to receive such long-lived perennials as peonies, oriental poppies, dictamnus, astilbe and roses, or such demanding bulbs and tubers as lilies and dahlias. There is nothing mysterious about the theory of double digging: you take out one layer of soil to a spade's depth, then take out the layer underneath, then put the first layer back and spread the second layer on top. But in practice this is not quite as easy as it sounds. The difficulty comes in handling the spade dexterously enough to keep the soil from sliding back into the trench as you move backwards to dig the next spadeful. And nothing but practice will teach you how to do it successfully. You can think about it until you are purple in the face, but until you try it, you simply won't know what a trick it can be. Nor how satisfying once you have mastered it. As we said, for really deep soil preparation (up to 18 inches if you are adept) there is nothing to compare with this procedure. Especially if you incorporate compost or other organic matter in the bottom layer before you cover it.

Books again: Two on the all-important subject of woody landscape plants deserve mention. James Bush-Brown's "Shrubs and Trees for the Home Landscape" (Chilton, $5.95) is a disappointingly pedestrian formalization, in tabular arrangement, of available information. From this author, it seems unwontedly routine, though accurate enough. Robert Clark's "Flowering Trees" (Van Nostrand, $6.50) is a far better if more limited work. The judgments are discerning and helpful as well as completely authoritative. If the prose is less than deathless, at least it is clear, simple and direct.

Stanley Schuler's brisk and concise "1001 House Plant Questions Answered" (Van Nostrand, $5.95) puts a lot of practical information where it will do the most good—at your fingertips.

Third weekend

Leverage plus. An ordinary male, given a day away from his desk, can push 200-pound rocks around his garden without straining a muscle if he knows how to handle a crowbar—and if he has the muscle to begin with. To move weights you cannot readily lift, you must employ leverage. And like running a chain saw or double-digging a flower bed, this takes fully as much energy as skill. A good unabridged dictionary, or your memory of high school physics, will explain the theory of using a lever. All we would add here are a few simple pragmatic hints.

First, make sure any lever you employ is adequate to the task. Most planks, many 2-by-4's and all tool handles are undependable if not positively unsafe (try letting even a 100-pound boulder roll back on your instep sometime). A crowbar is the best lever and will last a lifetime. Second, make certain that the fulcrum you place under the bar will stay in place, whether it is a billet of wood, a piece of heavy pipe, or another rock. Third, keep your fulcrum well up under the forward end of your lever at all times, because that's the way you get your best leverage. Fourth—and most important—move slowly. Never jerk or lunge, never let your feet get off the ground, and never let go of a bar that is "working." One more point, having little to do with the others: you may find, perhaps to your surprise, that it's easier to inch your burden forward slowly than to roll it over. Safer, too, sometimes. Above all, don't be afraid to look lazy. Experienced workmen will understand, and the rest don't count.

Counterirritant. Marjorie Johnson Dietz's new "Concise Encyclopedia of Favorite Flowering Shrubs" (Doubleday, $4.95) is a worthy successor, in the realm of woody plants, to her earlier compilation of garden flowers that set the pattern of factual coverage and informed opinion.

Fourth weekend

On the level. There is nothing especially muscular about laying out a grade either with a surveyor's instruments or a simple peepsight level that you can buy at any hardware store and carry in your pocket. A child could do it. So could a woman. But only men ever do. (Atavism? Balboa on a peak in Darien? George Washington?) Major grading operations, on less than a professional scale, are infrequently required. But minor problems of contouring, path laying, wall and step construction, and terrace surfacing arise far more often than they are solved, if we make ourselves clear.

With the aid of a sight-level, three stakes and a mallet you can run grade lines, therefore measure and equalize slopes, with ease and something approximating dispatch. The idea, of course, is to sight from the top of your master or "home" stake to the top of another stake driven at some useful reference point to the same level as the first. Then, without disturbing the first stake, you can hedgehop all over your landscape, measuring up or down by marking your second and third stakes by reference to your sighting level. If you wonder why we left the master stake way back there, it was so you can start over if you made a mistake or, more importantly, so you can check your measurements backwards to the starting point to make sure you did the job right. Back-checking and cross-checking (as, for example, making diagonal surveys across a broad slope) are an essential part of even the simplest kind of surveying. Your satisfaction when your work proves out will be out of all proportion to any minuscule engineering virtuosity you may have displayed.

DISCOVERY

At every age, we are constantly discovering new and significant things in the world around us. Wherever we look, we find that ideas and customs are constantly being replaced by something new—different—and very often, better.

Among the new developments which are changing our lives today are improvements in the field of building materials. Longer-lasting, better-looking products are available to today's home buyers and home owners. From the CERTAIN-TEED family of fine building products come magnificent Jumbo Woodtex "300" Asphalt Shingles, offering the ultimate in roof protection and opening new horizons in roof beauty; new Ceiling Tile with exceptional harmony of design, sound absorption, and insulation value. From BESTWALL comes new Eternawall Vinyl-Clad Gypsum Wallboard with chip-free, fade-free surface and beautiful linen-weave texture; and the famous Bestwall team of "fire-fighters", gypsum wallboard and gypsum lath and plaster, providing vital protection against fire and other hazards.

You'll discover the great advantages of these and other fine products — lasting value, and protection against weather, wear-and-tear, unwanted noise — when you visit your Bestwall Certain-teed dealer. Or write direct to

Bag and baggage:

For the stag away

H&G's queries on how men like to live elicited the fact that today's traveling man—whether he goes stag or with his family, on business or vacation—packs his own suitcase. His luggage wardrobe, therefore, should include well-equipped cases that proclaim for themselves exactly the kind of trip they are meant for—overnight, over the weekend or over eighty days around the world. The suitcases on these pages are designed and fitted for every contingency: Himself could pack any one of them in a flash.

For an overnight business trip, any one of this quartet will carry a man's paper agenda, plus a change of linen, et al. The "Showcase" (flat) includes a detachable briefcase (Eastern Case Co., $30.75); the "Executive Flite" (standing on end) has a removable portfolio (T. Anthony, $137.50). Open for inspection (see below) are the "Diplomat" and the "Ready-Pack."

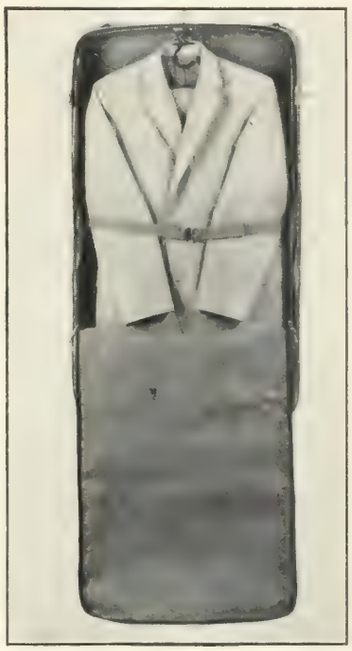
For a man who must keep well groomed for a week, a good-sized case that's well partitioned will neatly hold everything. Packing bars, hangers and pads (see below) keep three suits in the pink, with plenty of room for shirts, socks, etc., and toilet articles. The scuff-proof vinyl case has magnesium frame and nicely rounded corners. Oxford gray, brown, tan or olive. Samsonite, $49.50.



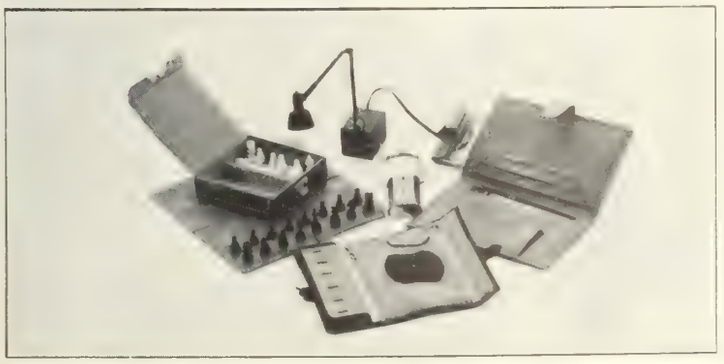
If he must take a week's wardrobe but is traveling by air, a lightweight hang-up case would be advisable. The "Slim Garment Pak" tips the scales at only 7 pounds. Of scuff-proof "Dura-Vinyl", it has a keyless, combination lock. In tan, black and brown. Ventura, about $65. See it open and packed to the gunwales, below.

Zippered, waterproof gusset pockets of the "Slim Garment Pak," above, take good care of crushables such as shirts. Hung at its full 40-inch length, right, the "Pak" becomes a traveling closet. In far-flung places, where a hotel closet is no more than a peg on the wall, this bag could be a godsend.

A [illegible] 10 percent Federal tax whenever it is applicable.

EDWIN ISAACS

When a man sets off on a three- or four-week journey, he would do well to take both hang-up suitcase and duffel. The "B-4 Bag", left above, holds four suits and everything to go with them. In olive brown or black vinyl lined with beige twill. Mark Cross, $87.45. The tall duffel bag—made by the same firm, in the same colors, same vinyl—is $27.50.



A reasonable Beau Brummell bound for Hong Kong and on and on from there—might choose a capacious hang-up bag (see it open, below) and a matching suitcase of leather-trimmed canvas. $85.25 and $63.25 respectively. In them he might pack a small cowhide case fitted with pill vials ($7.50) and a zippered cowhide case for toiletries ($12.65). All, T. Anthony. He can add a leather stud case ($11, Mark Cross).

Open, the "Jumbo Air Pack," right, is a kind of canvas armoire that holds eight suits. A properly designed hook fits over the top of any door, a slide bar locks all hangers to prevent suits from slipping. Marsupially, the pack is equipped with two pouches (removable, zippered cases with handles) that can go traveling on their own. This Admirable Crichton is to be had in blue or green plaid, solid red, blue, black or brown: Whatever the color, the trim is a complementary shade.

A boon to the man who wants to bring home plenty of treasure from his trip is a carryall, left, that starts out folded into a 10-by-17-inch envelope. Open, it is a 21-inch-long satchel as roomy as a hammock. Called the "Bottomless Carry-All," this paragon is of canvas, comes in several colors and leather trims. T. Anthony, $26.95.

Easily packable extras: A tiny chess set, magnetized so chessmen won't slide into the Indian Ocean, $12. A folding lamp with a magnetic base, which fits into a red, tan or black case, $14.50. An air-lift scale to warn of overpoundage, $6.95. All: Mark Cross. A passport case that will also keep traveler's checks flat, $9.35, and a jewelry case, $10.95, both from T. Anthony, would certainly be additional welcome fellow travelers.

one's apéritif of Punt e Mes. In fact, Locarno and Lugano first became fashionable as winter resorts, for even the January climate is gentle enough for magnolias, wisteria, wild aloes and orange trees.

The two towns are quite dissimilar, rather like the two sisters in "Gigi": one a well-endowed courtesan, the other preferring the qualities of honorable refinement. Locarno has only a quarter the number of summer visitors, but by far the superior hotels (in the grill room of the Palma, you dine off gold plate). From here you may explore some of the prettiest and least exploited country in the whole of Switzerland, the country of the Centovalli or "Hundred Valleys" which lies between the lake and the Alps. An extraordinary little three-carriage electric train sets off from the city center like a tram, and runs on a single-line track through the back gardens of cottages, over spindly little bridges and past a succession of gorges and waterfalls, fat green fields, chestnut forests, vineyards and orchards.

Lugano, a little further south and east, presides over its lake like a baby Naples, the steep hillsides of Castagnola rising Vesuvius-like beside it. The lake steamers ply Italian as well as Swiss ports. You can make a brief crossing to the Italian enclave of Campione with its casino or to a superb outdoor restaurant, the Romantica at Melide. Even shorter trips, a morning and an afternoon apiece, take in two little villages close by Lugano itself: Gandria and Morcote. Gandria, which I remembered from a previous visit, is a picturesque red-roofed village piled up on the northern shores of the lake. The village consists of a long labyrinth of stone steps leading in every direction. One extended flight disclosed a pretty little church with charming rococo frescoes. I found again the café I had remembered, where they serve local white wine in a jug from which you are also expected to drink. Nothing could be nicer than to lunch here on lake fish while sitting on a vine-shaded terrace overlooking the water.

Morcote, a village of subtropical vegetation on the tip of the peninsula that juts into the lake, was new to me. I arrived there at the unlikely hour of nine in the morning to see women already sluicing their doorsteps and setting out ceramics, rush baskets and copper kettles for the benefit of whatever tourists might pass by. I climbed a prodigious flight of steps through arbors of olive trees to see a church which I would now list as a doubtful objective, but the view was worth every uphill tread.

A Byzantine surprise

The treasure of this little town, for me at any rate, was the Rieder Museum. The listing in the local guide book: "Collections of Ikons" was my only clue. My interest increasing as I looked at the exhibits, I asked the somewhat taciturn guide who showed me around: Was M. Rieder still alive? He was. Then where did he live, and might it be possible to meet him? Finally the guide doffed his cloth cap, bowed slightly, and said: "C'est moi." He also admitted that he generally gave less than his best to English, American and his own fellow Swiss visitors, whom he considered peasants in the matter of Byzantine art. He told me how he had spent twenty years, pre-war, at the court of Queen Marie of Rumania, amassing this remarkable collection which now fills an enchanting fifteenth-century house and included furniture, silverware and wonderful Rumanian embroidery as well as ikons. It is a great labor of love and, to those interested, well worth the visit—not least for its unlikely setting and for the fount of information which M. Rieder may be persuaded to pour forth.

One other excursion from Lugano which I commend is to Baron Von Thyssen's Villa Favorita at Castagnola, which contains one of the greatest private collections of pictures in Europe. The villa is regularly open to the public only from March to October, and it would be wise to check locally as to the hours.

As far as shopping in the Italian area of Switzerland is concerned, you would be well advised to cross the Italian border close by, especially since customs formalities for visitors are almost entirely relaxed. There are some excellent shops in Como, particularly for silks, leather products and casual resort clothes. The prices are way below those of Switzerland, although not, of course, for watches, cameras and other precision instruments. The best places to shop for these are in the tax-free shops of the Geneva or Zurich airports when you are leaving the country for home.

with me and still sat under my desk, but on a rug from Kairouan.

I went to receptions but, firmly, only those given to do honor to famous men of my profession. A considerable number passed through Rome. The years passed. The dog grew old and blind, and I grew careless of my resolves. I even went to a fashionable tailor.

Here I was surrounded by three master tailors and a special assistant was called whose only duty was to kneel in front of me and help me take off my trousers.

There were many fittings, and once when he did this, I noticed with acute embarrassment that, in a moment of abstraction, I had forgotten to put on my shorts. I apologized. I lied. I said that as I was dressing I had suddenly heard of the news of the death of Albert Camus. He had, indeed, died the night before, but I had never cared a jot for his works. The assembled tailors listened. Then the chief tailor said, in the tone of a priest giving absolution:

"It does not matter at all. Mr. Mel Ferrer was here before you. He never wears shorts."

So it was all right. I had no need for Camus. Mr. Ferrer had preceded me. Effortlessly, as though to the manner born, I had adopted the habits of the élite of the world.

The suit was beautiful. It led to invitations from wearers of equally beautiful suits. Nobody asked anymore how I was doing, because it was clear that I was doing all right. In the eyes of the world I had arrived.

Then one day, last summer, the dog who had been born in the house of the rich American retired to a corner of the house of a man with sixteen coat hangers and died. I buried her at midnight: my dog—and much else that I shall always miss.

AUGUST, 1963

VOL. 124 NO. 2

TOM LEONARD

On the cover: A quiet corner of the master bedroom gives you a brief glimpse of the serene world of light, color, comfort and technical efficiency we have created in our 1963 House of Ideas in Houston, Tex. Through sliding doors of a new transparent acrylic you can walk directly from the bedroom out to the brick-walled courtyard and mosaic-tiled pool that are spread out in front of the house like a gala carpet. Indoors, a selection of antiques such as this Directoire burl writing table and a few fine reproductions like the shell-crested, rush-seated chair mingle with contemporary furniture in which the lines of classic tradition are interpreted with a new simplified elegance. The rooms are also enriched by a diversity of contemporary craftwork and paintings by contemporary Texans. The four-panel screen behind the desk is by David Adickes. For more about this room, see page 98. The whole story of our House of Ideas designed by Roger Rasbach and decorated by H&G starts on page 81.

P-944. PICASSO: HARLEQUIN. A stunning silk-screen reproduction of Paul, the artist's son, aged three, painted in 1924. The pensive child in a blue and yellow harlequin costume is on a rich dark green chair against a beige background. 23" high x 17" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-865. KLEE: SINBAD THE SAILOR. A completely captivating silk screen reproduction of the most famous Thousand and One Nights hero, in spectrum blues ranging from sky to midnight and highlighted with vivid pinks, marigold, red, white, black and warm oranges. 16½" high x 23" wide. Special 3.95

P-736. MATISSE MURALS. Two of the last works of Matisse, Snow Flowers and Vegetables; each of these highly decorative panels measures 35½" x 14". Brilliant white design flowers set against vivid blocks of green, orange, maroon and beige; highly stylized vegetables in white, green, yellow and blue against panels of orange, gray, red, tan and maroon. Silk screen. Special 3.98

P-998. LION HUNT DAGGER BLADE. An original silk-screen print, on special handmade rice paper, of the inlaid bronze blade of a dagger excavated from the Citadel of Mycenae, of Minoan origin, circa 1570-1550 B.C. Metallic gold and silver on a background of deep blue and black; 10" high x 32" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-226. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. This decorative panel of medieval lutes, harps and zithers in metallic gold, outlined in rich wood-brown, with a metallic gold border, has been silk-screened onto a handmade, white rice paper. A handsome and unusual conversation piece for your home. 9½" high x 32" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-958. MUSICIANS. This handsome sixteenth-century woodcut panel is silk-screened onto a special, handmade rice paper. White figures are outlined in brown against a metallic gold background. 10¼" high x 31¼" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-938. FRANZ MARC: TWO BLUE COLTS. A beautifully silk-screened reproduction, duplicating the exact tones of blue in the horses, with black and gray outlines and yellow-green fronds against a rich creamy background. 18" high x 20" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-953. FRANZ MARC: RED HORSES. The modern German master of animal studies is well represented by this lively group; the expert silk-screen reproduction matches exactly the brilliant reds, blues, blue-greens, yellow and yellow-greens on an orange background. 15" high x 23" wide picture area. Silk-screen. Special 2.98

P-891. JAPANESE CRANES. A handsome serigraph from the lid of a Japanese writing box, attributed to Korin Ogata, 1653-1716, original in the Seattle Museum of Art. Red orange, greys, black and metallic gold duplicate the original black lacquered wood with gold paint and inlaid lead and pewter. 17" high x 19" wide. Special 2.98

P-867. MOSES SOYER: GIRL IN YELLOW. A poignant study of a young girl reproduced beautifully in soft green, brighter yellow and subtle brown. 19¾" high x 16" wide. Special 1.98

P-264. PARTRIDGE PANEL. A glowing example of Russian folk art has been expertly silk-screened onto a special, handmade rice paper in deep, clear tones of blue-green, aquamarine, pale blue, yellow-greens and shades of yellow. A handsome decorator item that will enhance any room. 12" high x 39" wide. Special 2.98

P-248. KAETHE KOLLWITZ: MOTHER AND CHILD. A fine silk-screen reproduction of this sensitively rendered charcoal drawing in black and white on a heavy, 26" high x 20" wide sheet. Special 1.98

P-247. KAETHE KOLLWITZ: SLUMBER. This superb black and white charcoal drawing, with its soft grays, has been expertly silk-screened onto a sheet of heavy stock 26" high x 20" wide. Special 1.98

P-997. DUFY: DEAUVILLE. A beautiful silk-screen reproduction of this famous masterpiece. The yellow and green boat on the blue-green sea, the blue sky and warm sandy shore and colorfully dressed strollers evoke the true holiday atmosphere. 17" high x 25" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-962. UTRILLO: SNOW IN MONTMARTRE. A winter landscape of crystalline purity, painted during Utrillo's white period, has been silk-screened with great fidelity to the original now in a private collection in Milan. White, gray and blue predominate, with accents of green, red, pink and yellow. 17" high x 21" wide picture area. Special 3.95

P-965. CEZANNE: BLUE VASE. Glowing blues dominate this popular still-life with contrasting yellow and highlights of green and red; original in the Louvre. 20½" high x 17" wide picture area. Special 3.95

P-964. VAN GOGH: DRAWBRIDGE AT ARLES. A superb silk-screen reproduction of this dynamic landscape, original in the Wallraf-Richartz Museum in Cologne. Vibrant tones of blue, yellow, green with touches of red. 22" high x 17" wide picture area. Special 3.95

P-892. VAN GOGH: SUNFLOWERS. A superb silk-screen reproduction of this popular masterpiece, duplicating the vibrant palette of pure yellow, green-yellow, brown and green. 26¼" high x 20" wide picture area. Special 4.95

P-996. VAN GOGH: ROAD WITH CYPRESSES. The deep blue-greens of the trees, lighter sky and vivid yellows in the field brilliantly depict the mood quality of this famous work. Silk-screen. 26" high x 20" wide. Special 5.95

P-991. VAN GOGH: WHITE ROSES. A splendid silk-screen reproduction of this famous painting, with every brushstroke clearly delineated; white flowers in a dark blue-green vase and Van Gogh's well-known yellow-green as a background. 25" high x 20" wide picture area. Special 4.95

P-995. VAN GOGH: HOUSES AT AUVERS, 1890. Clear blues, blue-greens and greens contrast with the reds, burnt-orange and browns; each brushstroke is clearly defined in this handsome silk-screen reproduction. 26" high x 20" wide. Special 5.95

P-972. CHINESE HORSE ON SILK. This splendid coal-black charger, with regal trappings of metallic gold, olive green and charcoal gray, has been silk-screened directly onto a reinforced silk background. 37" high x 29½" wide. Special 5.95

P-989. DUFY: RIVIERA. A striking seascape in blues, greens and mauve, with touches of red, yellow, black and white. Silk screen. 21½" high x 26" wide picture area. Special 2.98

P-971. JOSEPH MARGULIES: GLOUCESTER REFLECTIONS. A dreamy sense of peace pervades this lovely harbor scene, beautifully reproduced in tones that range from pastel to vivid green, blue, cocoa, lavender and sand. 22" high x 29¾" wide picture area. Orig. $10.00. Only 2.98

P-967. VAN GOGH: FISHING BOATS AT STE. MARIE. High-keyed blues predominate with bright greens, yellow, orange, beige and brown tones; silk-screened with great fidelity to the original masterpiece. 20¼" high x 26" wide picture area. Special 4.95

P-263. FEININGER: RED SEA YELLOW SHIPS. A sensitive seascape with fine linear detail by the popular cubist master, the red sea and yellow sails are set off by the blue and white flags against a gray sky. Silk screen. 18" high x 28" wide. Special 2.98

P-262. FEININGER: SHIP WITH BLACK SAILS. The handsomely outlined sails glimmer with purple and charcoal against an orange-toned sky, the flags are blue and white and the hull of the ship is yellow. A fine silk-screen reproduction of this inspired cubist masterpiece. 18" high x 28" wide. Special 2.98

P-845. EIGHT CHINESE STONE RUBBINGS. Each on a 16" x 20" sheet, all 8 in a portfolio with informative text on the pictured deities, dragons, Confucious and princess, among others; from the S'ung, T'ang, Wei and Chou dynasties, dating from 1122 B.C. to 1279 A.D. Special 2.98

P-814. UNICORN IN CAPTIVITY. A serigraph after the most famous of the Unicorn Tapestries; a late 18th century masterpiece in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at the Cloisters. The white unicorn in a pale brown enclosure stands out vividly against the predominantly green background. 23" wide x 36" high. Special 5.95

WHAT'S NEW FOR LIVING

CAMPERS TAKE NOTE: Camp Top is the name of a 350-pound Fiberglas trailer-like unit that—instead of trailing—fits over the back and top of your station wagon. It is equipped with a gas stove, lights, ice chest, water, sink, storage space and a bed, and should make life at any campsite much more comfortable. Equipped, Camp Top costs $1,599, plus freight. By Q Associates, 1423 Chandler Drive, Fairlawn, N. J.

NEW DRINK, NEW TWIST: There's a new frozen punch that blends the juices of fruits familiar and exotic: orange, lemon, lime and pineapple with coconut, papaya, banana and passion fruit. Terrace dwellers and backyard sitters are enjoying it this summer, and it's said to appeal especially to the roller skate set. Orange Samoa concentrate, with the usual addition of water, makes 1½ pints of punch. The can has a tab opener that spirals the top off—no can opener required. Two cans, 37c.

BAREFACED FURNITURE reflects a new trend. Now you can buy well-designed unfinished furniture made of fine woods in almost any style. You add the finish yourself—stain, hand-rubbed oil or paint. (See "Fantasy Finishes," page 126, for the first of a three-part story on how to achieve several decorative painted finishes.)

Two New York stores, W&J Sloane and Bloomingdale's, are leading the way in this new trend by showing extensive lines of unfinished furniture. Designs, many of them imported, include Italian bombé chests, old Spanish armoires, Swedish settees and eighteenth-century secretaries.

PARADISE TENNIS, a game from Paradise Island, Nassau, Bahamas, is a version of lawn tennis—played on a table. The 9- by 18-foot table is marked off like a lawn tennis court, and the rules and scoring are similar to those for lawn tennis. Devotees can set up the table on the terrace in warm weather, move it to the playroom to enjoy a moderately athletic winter. $275 for table and equipment, including racquets. The Paradise Tennis Co., Inc., 138 E. 57th St., New York 22, N. Y.

SAILORS TAKE WARNING when a red light shines on their Sentinel Fume Detector. This three-part safety device, installed in power boats, signals a dangerous build-up of gases. (Turning on the ignition in the presence of gas can cause an explosion—a primary cause of accident on pleasure craft.) The detector consists of an on-off switch and indicator, a relay box and a sensing unit of platinum-coated wire that reacts to gases by turning on the warning light—or sounding a whistle. $69.95. Sentinel Fume Detector by Ravenswood, Annapolis, Md.

AN AUTOMATIC RAIN COMPENSATOR can function as a check on your time-controlled sprinkler system. While an automatic sprinkler system waters your garden willy-nilly with a predetermined amount at preset intervals whether it rains or not, this new gadget measures each rainfall and decreases accordingly the amount of water that the sprinkler will supply. So, if a rainfall occurs, the compensator causes the sprinkler to skip a watering or two to compensate for the amount of rain that fell. The mechanism consists of a collector cup and tube, mounted where they will receive direct rainfall and connected to a control box which should be housed in the shelter of a garage or utility room. Write to Austin Products, Inc., 247 Newtonville Avenue, Newton 58, Mass.

VEST-POCKET MOTOR SCOOTER: A sturdy Valmobile folds up into a 27½- by 14- by 24½-inch, 90-pound package—totable for a stout fellow. A sportsman can easily stow one in a plane, boat or car trunk and take it along when he needs auxiliary transportation. A city dweller might keep one in his hall closet, ready for short spins. Available in blue, orange or ivory. Standard scooter, $245; side-car luggage attachment, $69.50. Occo Manufacturing Corp., 8 Romanelli Avenue, South Hackensack, N. J.

Will you be one of the privileged Americans to share in this unique experience?

AN EXTRAORDINARY new project — greater in scope and significance than any art publishing project ever seen — is causing great excitement among people with a serious interest in the cultural life of our time. It is the new Encyclopedia of World Art, embracing in 15 volumes of surpassing beauty all of man's greatest achievements in the visual arts through the centuries. To turn the pages of these prodigious volumes . . . to read, to learn, to explore their visual delights . . . is an experience unlike any you have ever had before.

In hundreds of absorbing factual articles, prepared by the most eminent art authorities — and over 7,000 full-page plates measuring a full 9 inches by 12 inches in size — you will view rare treasures of renowned museums and private collections all over the world; not only paintings, sculpture and architecture — but every art from armor to textiles, ceramics to tapestry, fashions and furniture, ivory, jade, and stained glass, jewelry and silver, and much more.

The magnificent color plates alone, showing 2,000 art objects (many of them never before reproduced) are a totally new and striking achievement. Due to the extreme care being lavished on these plates, the Encyclopedia is issued just one splendid volume at a time — three times a year. Should yo become a subscriber, you therefore have the advantage of budgeting yo purchase over the full period required to complete the set.

To learn how you may examine the first volume at leisure in your hon and, if you wish, become a Charter Subscriber to the Encyclopedia, mail th attached card. MEISSEN MONKEY BAND

I have inherited a number of porcelain monkeys, each bearing a musical instrument. The colors are sharp and the glaze is deep. They all have a crossed-swords mark on the bottom. Any information would be greatly appreciated. M. S. B.—Detroit, Mich.

Your figures bear the mark of Meissen, which first made monkey figurines such as these in 1747, but none earlier than 1763 are now extant. Kaendler, head modeler of the Meissen factory, modeled a band of more than twenty monkeys, including a conductor, to ridicule a personal enemy, Count Bruhl, the leader of the Court orchestra of the Elector of Saxony.

SALEM FLAT-TOP DESK

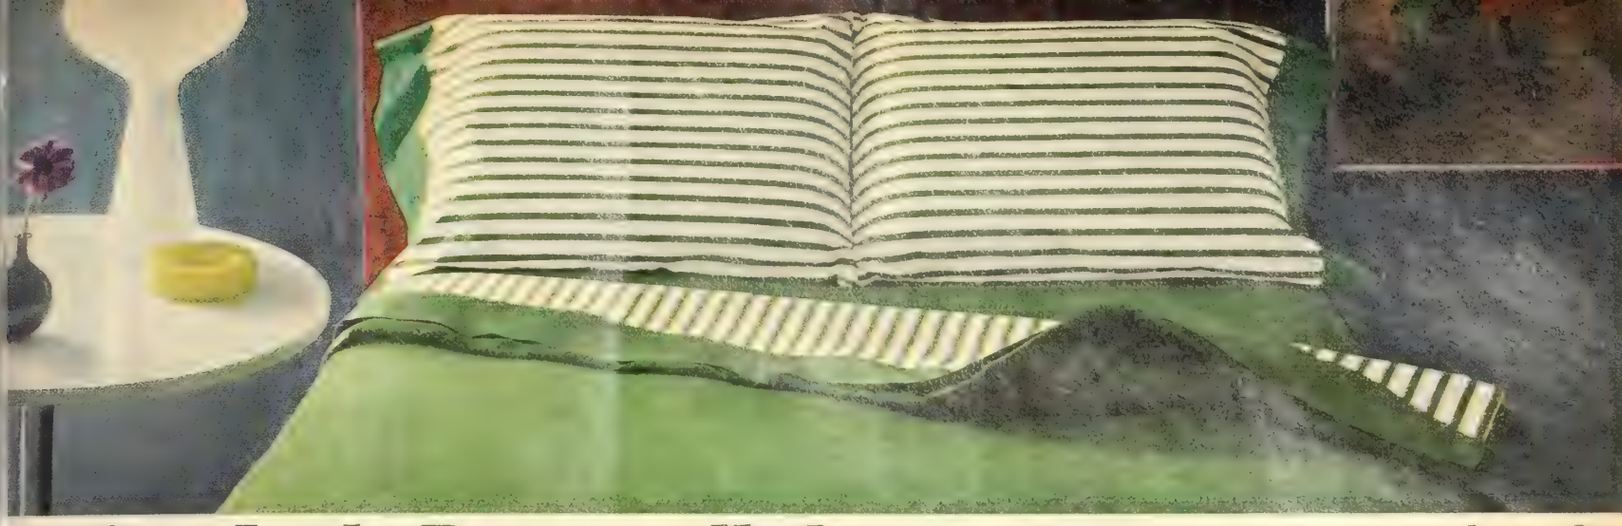
This desk was a wedding present in 1922 from a Worcester, Mass., lady over eighty who said it was very old. Can you tell its style and age? C. B.—Ramona, Calif.

Flat-top desks with serpentine front and reeded tapering legs are American Sheraton, dating 1810–1820. Yours looks like a Salem, Mass., piece.

VALLERYSTAHL GLASS

My footed glass dishes are marked around the inside at bottom "Vallerysthal." I wish to know their origin. J. R.—Chicago, Ill.

Vallerystahl (modern spelling), located in Alsace-Lorraine, made fine glass from the fifteenth century until World War II, when the factory was wrecked by a bomb.



AMERICAN EMPIRE PIECE

Can you tell the age of this cherry chest of drawers with original brass handles? The back is walnut.

A. L.—South Bend, Ind.

The full rounded pilasters and turned feet indicate an American Empire piece, dating 1820–1830. The walnut back suggests Pennsylvania origin.

Are Lady Pepperell sheets more expensive?

No!

And they cost even less in August

You don't have to pay more for Lady Pepperell, but you do get more. These soft, long-wearing percales have over 180 threads per square inch. Bottom sheets are elasticized around both ends—go on with one finger. Shown: three of the many colors and patterns available (with matching blankets)—"Vivid Tone" (Solo Stripe), "Daisy Dream," "Vivid Tone" (Solid Color). Add a NapGuard/SuperLoft blanket—thick, light, ever so warm—and have the best-dressed bed in town.

Lady Pepperell

Now, the famous Borg Scale is available in beautiful period designs. This French Provincial model, finished in Antique and Gold, is $12.95—the matching Provincial clothes hamper, $49.95—at leading stores. Borg-Erickson, Chicago 51.

Method

absorbs this soil without ruinous soaking—without harsh mechanical scrubbing

Don't permit your costly carpeting and lovely upholstery to be worn away with harsh machine scrubbing. Don't permit your floor coverings to be soaked with water and risk the chance of serious shrinkage. The quick drying DURACLEAN Foam—applied gently, removed at once—cannot wear down the pile or fabric, cannot soak your rugs or carpets.

Swiftly this aerated foam separates the greasy soil from the fibers, then absorbs it so it can be sponged away with soft, clean sponges. In just a few hours your carpets are ready to walk on; your furniture ready to use. And, it's all done in your home without upsetting your daily routine. The notes of a happy housekeeper

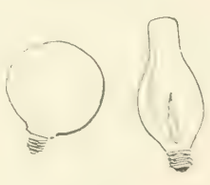
BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER



The children are away at camp and the quiet is positively unnerving. I do miss them, but Tom and I are enjoying being at home and doing exactly as we please. In fact, Tom has even chosen to take a week of his vacation right now. He's doing much of the cooking, which he loves, and in our own sweet time with no pressure we're catching up on all the projects on the household repair agenda. We sleep late, work in the garden and play golf most afternoons and go out in the evenings whenever the spirit moves us.

As we've been spending nearly all our time outdoors or on the cool screened porch, this seems like the perfect moment to send the living room furniture out to the upholsterer and to have the painters in to paint the downstairs. I hope the children are having as much fun as we are.

We have always liked Durolite electric light bulbs for hard-to-reach places around the house—like flush ceiling lights or outdoor lanterns. They last about three times as long as regular light bulbs, so we're not forever having to get a ladder and replace them. The other day I came across two new types of Durolites—the Globe-lite and the Flamescent Chimney-lite.

The Chimney-lite is about 6 inches long, a delicately frosted bulb shaped like a kerosene lamp chimney with a filament designed to look exactly like a flame when lit. Installed in the outdoor lamppost, it looks for all the world like a good old-fashioned gaslight. Its strength is 40 watts, but it throws out a surprisingly good flood of light.

The Globe-lite is a completely round, white frosted bulb, about 15 inches in circumference, which is a combination light globe and fixture. When screwed into a standard socket, it makes a simple, good-looking lighting unit. We have one in the laundry room and one in the ceiling of the screened porch and they look quite handsome. They are as effective as more expensive fixtures, yet cost only about twice as much as an ordinary electric light bulb. You can get both 60- and 100-watt Globe-lites.

Tom, after buying every ice cube tray ever manufactured and still complaining every time he made a drink, has finally hit on a tray that suits him. This one, the Magic Touch, works smoothly, doesn't warp, and so far gives every sign that it will withstand wear and tear. It's the same basic lever design that's foiled us many times before, but this tray seems to be stronger and more carefully engineered. It's made of a light, textured aluminum that resists sticking and sliding.

Traipsing through the hardware store to get to the garden supplies the other day, I caught sight of something that looked like a very fancy breadbox. I paused for a second look and saw a little sign that said, "No, I'm not a breadbox, I'm a Brisker." Well, I was hooked and immediately went into this interesting subject in depth.

A Brisker looks like a roomy breadbox, but actually it's an electric dehumidifying storage box for all dry foods. It holds a dozen or more boxes of crackers, cookies, cereals and the like and will keep them fresh indefinitely. The Brisker runs on 12 watts of electricity and takes up little more storage room than the foods themselves. It will prevent salt and other granular foods like gelatin from caking and will actually restore freshness to any food that has gotten soggy when it's meant to be crisp. All this in a neat chrome and black box with a magnetic catch, and an electric cord attached. N.B. The manufacturer also makes a battery-operated Brisker for boats.

GAS AIR-CONDITIONS BETTER FIVE WAYS

GAS Air Conditioning by ARKLA gets the women's vote for year-round comfort!

At home more than men, women are especially partial to Gas air conditioning. They find it so clean. Dust and dirt are filtered, draperies and furnishings stay cleaner longer. So healthful, too. Babies can play on the floor and you don't have to worry about drafts. Even housework is easier and faster when the family can enjoy all-year, whole house comfort. Arkla Gas air conditioning cools or heats at the touch of a dial . . . freshens air, controls humidity, filters pollen. Call your local Gas company, your Arkla-Servel dealer or write Arkla Gas Air Conditioning Co., 812 Main Street, Little Rock, Ark.

AMERICAN GAS ASSOCIATION

5 reasons why men prefer Arkla Gas Air Conditioning:

1. Long life. With none of the friction that limits life of compressor-type units, Arkla lasts years longer! 2. Low maintenance. No moving parts in the heating-cooling cycle to break down. 3. Constant capacity. Peak capacity for unit's entire life! 4. Permanently low operating costs. Unlike other units, Arkla's fuel consumption rate does NOT increase with use or unit's age. 5. Service. Backed by your Gas company or dealer with long records of responsible service.

it's REVOLUTIONARY!

...but this is a peaceful revolution... taking place on lawns all over America. The cause of it all, the most revolutionary power mower on the market today.

This uprising is a result of Mr. Homeowners' desire for quality, dependability, and a way to do the job without working at it. We're the instigators of this revolution and we're proud to say we've got the machine to bring you FREEDOM!

KING O' LAWN'S NEW SELF-PROPELLED ROTARY MOWER has all of these revolutionary features:

- DUAL AUTOMOTIVE TYPE CLUTCH – Starts with the lightest pull because you start only the engine! The drive and blade run independently or simultaneously allowing the operator to run the drive without blade rotating or cutting blade without the mower drive in operation.
- COMPLETE HEIGHT ADJUSTMENT – Adjusts from ground to 3" within seconds. Cuts up to 20" wide.
- STEEL CONSTRUCTION – All steel decking of ⅛" steel. All moving parts are equipped with roller and ball bearings.
- VACUUM EQUIPPED – Special alloy, suction type cutting blade cleans the lawn carpet clean while mowing!
- SULKY AVAILABLE – With the KING O' LAWN sulky attachment you can have a self-propelled riding rotary mower at half the cost of competitive units.
- POWERED by 3 h.p., 4 cycle, recoil starting engine. Briggs & Stratton or Tecumseh available as desired.

JOIN THE REVOLUTION TO FREEDOM... from the chores of lawn care. You can be a part of this movement to relaxed living & have more time for revolutionary ideas!

She has her eyes on you

And her wonderful, story-telling eyes are saying that there are a great many people, a lot of them helpless youngsters, who are desperately in need of your help. Some of them are sick, some handicapped, and some homeless. There are puzzled teen-agers in need of a guiding hand, troubled families in need of counseling and people who are too old to work, but too young to sit around doing nothing. Going places, finding things in

The Far East

Where every prospect pleases, fine craftsmanship flourishes and eating out is a delicious adventure

By Dorothea Walker

Among Kyoto's temples and shrines is the Kinkakuji or Golden Pavilion

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Richard Walker of San Francisco, a constant traveler and H&G contributing editor, frequently reports on her overseas finds in furnishings and food. When she took off on a joint air-and-sea tour of Japan, Hong Kong and Bangkok, H&G asked for a full account of the shopping highlights of her trip.

A Japanese girl, a teen-ager, had come fresh from the suburbs of Hiroshima to live with us in San Francisco after World War II. So Japanese charm, humor and sensitivity were no surprise to me when we arrived in Tokyo. Nor were the city's hustle, the neon glare, the surging crowds, the traffic jams or the racing-car taxi drivers.

The customs officers, drawing their breath in sibilantly, politely bowed us through the airport, even though we were carrying two saplings of giant sequoia with scraped roots brought by my husband for the botanical gardens of Dr. Ryotaro Azuma, Governor of the Tokyo Metropolitan Government. The following day, in Dr. Azuma's office, we saw the tree I coveted, a full-blown potted bonsai chrysanthemum. The blossoms were perched on a 3-foot-high tree trunk and the exposed roots climbed down the trunk. While Dr. Azuma was telling us that Tokyo may become civilization's first ten-million-person city, I was speculating about bonsai chrysanthemums in California.

We stayed at the Imperial Hotel. Enthusiasts for the newer Okura, with its delightful roof restaurant, have reason to defend their choice. But the Imperial has an advantageous location, within walking distance of the Ginza shopping area.

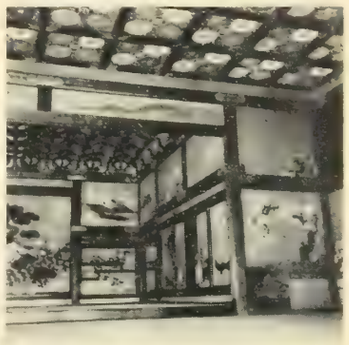
Our first day in Tokyo was Sunday, an active shopping day in Japan, and we went immediately to Takashimaya, Tokyo's finest department store, where a ride in the escalator dispelled any idea that Western dress had replaced the kimono. On the sixth floor we found rows of the Japanese standing stoves with and without kettles, priced from $12 to $70. (The Japanese use the hibachi as a hand warmer, not a cooking stove.) We also saw—for less than $10—a beige porcelain tea set with tan stripes on its bulging corrugated pot, a welcome contrast to the usual blue-and-white sets that flood San Francisco's Japanese shops. To use in my bedroom where I have orange Haitian bedspreads, I bought a black lacquer basket-shaped container lined in dusty orange with a slim curved abstract spire for a handle. My experiments with Mexican pottery and contemporary sculpture for this room had failed, but suddenly I knew that black lacquer was the solution.

In the second basement of Takashimaya where antiques are placed on consignment we bought six old handmade blue-and-white outsize plates with bamboo design for $1 each. Since I was planning to return to San Francisco on an American President Lines' ship, the size and weight of my purchases were unimportant. Often it is ill-advised to buy inexpensive pottery unless you can carry it, because the cost of packing and shipping exceeds the cost of the purchase.

Later that day we went to look for folk pottery, country furniture and handmade paper at Takumi, a craft shop on Ginza-Nishi Street. We also found inexpensive scrolls decorated with stylized birds, fish, flowers and bugs depicting the four seasons, which we bought for our house in the mountains at Sugar Bowl.

The best contemporary Japanese paintings are the modern wood block prints. We saw them at Yoseido on Namiki-dori.

For serious sight-seeing, the environs of Tokyo are far more interesting than the city itself. At Kamakura, a half-day trip away, is the famed Daibutsu or Great Buddha.



Miyanoshita, in the Fuji-Hakone-Izu National Park area, is an overnight trip. There the rambling Fujiya, one of the finest resort hotels in the world (ratio of maids to guests is three to one), roams around a steep garden with waterfalls, a waterwheel, goldfish, hot springs and baths.

Kyoto, 320 miles west of Tokyo and about six hours by limited express train, is the cultural center of Japan. With its 2,200 temples and shrines Kyoto presents a stupefying problem of selection. Even if you have only a few days to spend, there are several places that should be seen.

First, without question, the Katsura Villa. Its garden, designed by famed landscape architect Kobori Enshu (1579-1647), is a series of miniature framed forest scenes, lakes, ponds, bridges and teahouses. The villa itself has exquisite inlaid door handles, flowers of silver and gold in the overhead beams and rare woods in the corner shelves. It is open every day except on Saturday afternoons, Sundays and national holidays, but a permit to enter must be obtained from the Imperial Household Agency. This can be done through a hotel or through the Japan Travel Bureau, but it must be arranged twenty-four hours in advance.

Nijo Palace, in contrast to Katsura, is spacious and luxurious with elaborate wood carvings in the large well-proportioned buildings. It was originally built in 1603 and was the Kyoto residence of the first Tokugawa Shogun, Ieyasu. We were fortunate to be there in November when a chrysanthemum exhibition was in progress and chrysanthemums were falling like streams of water out of tubs and troughs and over trellises.

Ginkakuji, the Silver Pavilion, is less pretentious than Kinkakuji, the Golden Pavilion, and has a small but exquisite garden created by Soami, the famous landscape architect and follower of Zen. You should also see the stone garden of Ryoanji Temple, considered Soami's masterpiece and possibly the most talked-of garden in the Kyoto area.

Nijo Palace in Kyoto is noted for magnificent interiors, wood carving

Nara is an hour away from Kyoto by train, forty minutes by car and certainly should be visited by anyone who has more than a day or two to spend in that area. Nara has been left undisturbed by the vicissitudes of modern civilization. The old houses remain intact and the temples and shrines seem to be isolated in time and space. The main attraction, the Daibutsu or Great Buddha, the largest bronze statue in the world (71 feet 6 inches high), dates from the eighth century.

November is an ideal month to enjoy the wealth of treasures in the Kyoto area. The sun is warm, but the air is crisp. Sometimes the floors of the temples are cold, though, and since shoes are for-

Window walls glazed with Thermopane for year-round comfort.

You're more comfortable 365 days a year with Thermopane® insulating glass

In summer, your air-conditioning unit works better. Your cooling bills are lower. In winter, Thermopane insulating glass makes your heating more efficient. And less costly. Thermopane is made of quality glass. A layer of clean, dehydrated air is sealed between its two panes—providing a transparent, insulated wall. It is also available heat-treated to make it stronger for greater safety.

Plan now to use Thermopane in your new home. In window walls, sliding doors, in every window in your home. It eliminates storm windows for good. Your builder can include the cost of Thermopane in your mortgage, adding little to your monthly payments. For full details on Thermopane and its use in all kinds of windows, write to L·O·F, 3283 Libbey·Owens·Ford Building, Toledo 2, Ohio.

MADE IN U.S.A.
L·O·F GLASS
THE QUALITY MARK TO LOOK FOR

It's marked for your protection. Look for the Thermopane trade-mark etched in the corner of the insulating glass you buy. It's the sign of the original insulating glass developed by Libbey·Owens·Ford 25 years ago.

It's comfort, built in . . . thanks to a vapor-tight seal. Only Thermopane insulating glass has the Bondermetic Seal® that fuses metal to glass. Thermopane also is available in smaller sizes with a glass-to-glass seal.

When you build or buy ...look for Thermopane

It's a sign of extra comfort and extra value in your home. Be sure to get the heat saving and convenience of having Thermopane insulating glass in every window.

Thermopane is available from L·O·F glass distributors and dealers. It is also used by manufacturers of all types of quality windows, as well as sliding glass doors.

"Modern Living"...starring GAS

QUICK, CLEAN, EFFICIENT, THRIFTY GAS GETS TOP BILLING ALL OVER AMERICA

Continuous performance . . . Enjoy "conditioned" air the year 'round—and save money! Have "fresh air" heat with Gas—cleaned and filtered, constantly circulated, so much more pleasant and healthier to live in. Gas heat-and-cool central systems are dependable, efficient, and economical—since the heart of every system is a simple, silent flame that can't wear out.

Double Feature . . . Better washes—shorter washdays! Get clothes truly clean, with gallon after gallon of hot water. With a Gas water heater there's always plenty of hot water, delivered at low cost, because Gas is so quick and efficient. And your Gas dryer—so safe and gentle with every fabric—starts drying faster, gets done sooner, every time! No wonder, in automatic dryers, the trend is to Gas.

Long run hits . . . Fully automatic ranges built to Gold Star standards. New Oven-with-a-Brain* cooks, then holds whole meals without resetting! Automatic Burner-with-a-Brain*, rotisseries, meat thermometers, griddles, all respond quicker, more accurately because they're Gas!

Show stopper . . . A dishwasher that kills bacteria! New Gas dishwasher with built-in water heater, assures 180° super-hot water to get dishes "hospital clean." Gas refrigerator-freezer keeps food dependably, economically. There's no frost anywhere, makes ice without trays.

WHEN YOU SEE THIS GOLD STAR ON A RANGE, YOU KNOW IT COOKS FASTER, COOLER, CLEANER—AUTOMATICALLY

Economy encore . . . You can save thousands of dollars during the life of your mortgage just by choosing Gas. The efficiency and dependability built into Gas appliances today means you can save money, time, and maintenance. Look for the Blue Star sign (shown above) on quality new homes . . . ask your architect or contractor how to plan and build the modern, money-saving advantages of Gas appliances into your present home.

Where Pride of Craftsmanship Comes First

Time is important only in living with Empire furniture—not making it. From the meticulous selection of the solid hard woods through the tedious nine-coat, 14-step finishing process, extra attention is given to each detail. Generations of Empire craftsmen have adhered to this same standard of quality. It's why you get so much more joy out of living with your Empire selections—and so will your grandchildren and their children when it is passed on to them. ☐ *For a folder on this complete collection, send 15¢ to Empire Furniture Corp., Dept. bidden, it is well to carry a pair of airline booties or heavy wool socks.

We had time for a few important shops in Kyoto: Mr. Yamanaka's shop has Japanese and Chinese works of art; Tatsumura is a famous silk mansion with yards of glorious chiffon and taffeta, and a lovely garden with a pondful of enormous goldfish; Uchida's wood block print shop is worth visiting as are the Shin-Monzen Street antique shops.

In Kyoto a private dinner was arranged for my husband and my son at Komori, a restaurant in the famous Gion Geisha District, and I was allowed to go along. A little maiko-san, the 13-year-old novice, and a full-fledged geisha who was 21 years old, danced separately and together, placing their feet delicately from under their red and gold kimonos, interpreting the Kyoto ambiance, mountains, moon and trees. They were accompanied by a third girl who played the samisen.

For the benefit of anyone who is as confused as I was, I might explain that the geisha has a privileged position. She is trained to sing, dance and converse. Eventually she may have a patron, but she has the right to select him. To me, the epitome of the geisha's subtlety was exhibited when the girls served raw fish, delicately arranged with thin sliced radish and yellow cucumber flowers, and I ate it before I knew what it was.

We returned from Kyoto to Tokyo by train. Trains in Japan are fast and comfortable, but they stop briefly. If our guide hadn't placed us advantageously on the station platform at Atami Station, then pushed us through a surging crowd, we never would have boarded the train on time.

From the train window we saw Mt. Fuji wreathed in clouds. A few days later we saw it clearly—too clearly—at the beginning of our Air France flight to Hong Kong. In bright sunshine, the pilot dived over and around the crater until I was pushing myself away from the window muttering about the guidebook which read, "All hope to see Fuji but few succeed."

Exploring Hong Kong

When our plane zeroed in over Kowloon, I was appalled at its size. I hadn't realized that two million of the British Crown Colony's three million people live there. Hong Kong has changed, the British will tell you, but they still adore it. Horse racing at Happy Valley is a lobster-and-champagne occasion with well-dressed box parties of British, foreigners and handsome Chinese. The British seldom leave the island of Hong Kong, which forms one-third of the colony—and many of the tourists seldom leave the Kowloon Peninsula of the mainland.

Later when I looked out the window of the Peninsula Hotel in Kowloon and reflected that in order to explore Hong Kong I might spend half of my days on a ferry boat, I began to worry. I started calling on the telephone. Busy signal for twenty minutes from Charlotte Horstmann's shop. Hong Kong is like that. People have moved, or the building has moved, or the telephone number has been changed—and the result in every case is a busy signal. Discouraged by my failures, I decided to explore the Peninsula Hotel Arcade. I spent a half hour at Dynasty Silk, the retail shop of the firm that makes the brocade dinner dresses and coats, kimonos and blouses which are exported to the U.S. Then I went outside, walked down Nathan Road to the Peninsula Court and quite by chance ran into Charlotte Horstmann's.

Once inside, my arms were reaching in four directions. First to a simple blackwood armchair which looked Scandinavian, but was actually copied from Ming (which is similar), with cushions covered in rough-textured lemon green Thai silk. The price of $280 for two, delivered in the United States, included packing and shipping, Certificate of Origin, insurance and duty. Then I saw a low rosewood tray-table for $15 which would make an ideal resting place for an ashtray or teacup when I sit on my daybed at home with my feet curled under me. I bought a blackwood Lazy Susan, $45, for friends who have a 6-foot round dining table, then an enormous rosewood fish-shaped platter, 36 by 11 inches, for serving steak at buffet dinners in Sugar Bowl.

While the money was rolling out of my purse, Charlotte Horstmann was allaying my fears about the Hong Kong Star Ferry. Two blocks from the Peninsula Hotel, it runs every five minutes from 6 A.M. to 2:30 A.M. and takes six minutes between piers. Several mornings later I went to Victoria House in Hong Kong to visit the acting Governor-General's wife, Mrs. Claude Burgess. Then I lunched at the English Club, returned to Kowloon to change, went to Hong Kong to tea with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fung-Ping Fan (he is one of the great philanthropists and industrialists), saw their lovely terraced vegetable gardens at Repulse Bay, returned to Kowloon for the opening of the Chatham Galleries (where we saw some charming abstract water colors by Lui Shu-Kwan) and then crossed again on the ferry to dine at one of Aberdeen's floating restaurants. After all that, I was far less tired than I might have been fighting traffic up and down Fifth Avenue.

I loved the ferry ride. The air and water of the South China Sea are fresh, moving in crosscurrents around the island. Indians, Chinese, Japanese and British line the rows of seats, peering out at junks with patched sails, at smart yachts, ocean liners and gigantic aircraft carriers. The Peak, in fading light or bright sun, or ringed with electric lights, is an awe-inspiring sight even to a view-spoiled San Franciscan. Taxis are lined up on both sides of the ferry, and most of the drivers speak some English. Rickshaws also are available. The taxis have meters, but the rickshaws have not, and it is wise to arrange a price first.

Hong Kong Bargains

Everybody bargains in Hong Kong. An American friend of ours, Mrs. John Liddell, who married an Englishman and has lived in Hong Kong for seventeen years, coached us. "Wave your arms," she said. "Shake your fist. Walk away. It pays."

Citizens of the United States may not bring home goods made in Communist China, but this fact does not curtail tourist purchasing since there are 237 shops that are authorized to give Certificates of Origin, which are absolutely essential for bringing goods through U.S. Customs. Today the Hong Kong Chinese are making brocades and scrolls, carving jade that comes from Burma, cutting stones from Europe and making their own furniture and wallpaper. The pitfall to be avoided is the shop that carries such articles as "Ching Dynasty" clay figures, which the shopkeeper will insist are over 100 years old. In all likelihood, they were made the previous week in Communist China, for the molds are still in the hands of the Communist Chinese. Some of the least expensive of Hong Kong's wares are also banned from the U.S., for example, seagrass mats, straw squares and peasant pottery. A visit to the American Consulate, where a list of certified shops is available, is the best safeguard.

Since Hong Kong is a free port, Italian straw hats, Swiss watches, Japanese pearls and English leather goods are cheaper there than in the country of their origin. Furniture is also a great bargain, particularly if you plan to return to the United States by ship. I had my purchases delivered to the President Cleveland during its Hong Kong stop. Then I flew on to Bangkok and back to Tokyo with no extra luggage, and when I boarded the ship at Yokohama, I found my boxes safely stashed away in the ship's baggage room.

Articles of straw and rattan are displayed in a typical Hong Kong shop

It used to be risky to purchase furniture in Hong Kong since it did not, as a rule, stand up to the excessive dryness in our steam-heated houses. Within the past year or two, however, the most reputable Hong Kong furniture makers have improved their wood-drying techniques, and their furniture is now said to be withstanding our climate successfully.

Charlotte Horstmann took me to her work rooms in the New Territories where the Chinese refugees are turning out handsome chests, coffee tables, dining tables and chairs. The flowing lines are the result of handwork and footwork, and the patina represents hours of rubbing with a lump of beeswax. Charlotte Horstmann's own antique furniture, brought many years ago from Shanghai and Hankow, has been the inspiration for much of her design.

The New Territories are on lease to Britain until 1997, when they will revert to Chinese ownership. Although they border Com-

DAYDREAMS

Beneath a host of beguiling, fanciful daydreams, the mind of a child is simple—uncluttered—even serene. Well cared for and warmly loved, today's child has few fears, almost no worries.

Many things contribute to this sense of security. One is the protection enjoyed by children and parents in a well-built home . . . a home that can withstand the elements and keep the family safe and comfortable. The makers of BESTWALL and CERTAIN-TEED building products know the importance of home protection. Their research facilities are dedicated to the improvement of products including fine quality roofing, siding, fiberglas insulation, sheathing, walls and ceilings. For example, the fire-resistance of Bestwall's famous "Firestop" Gypsum Wallboard has been substantially increased over its previous high rating . . . and Certain-teed roofing shingles meet or surpass the new higher standards for safety and quality established by Underwriters Laboratories.

For greater safety, protection, beauty and value in materials for building and remodeling, it will pay you to see your Bestwall Certain-teed dealer—or write direct to munist China, only the deluded sight-seer takes the Kowloon-Canton Railway with the hope of poking a finger behind the Bamboo Curtain. The end of the line for visitors is Lo Wu where China-bound passengers change to a train on the Communist side for Canton. The best procedure is to buy a ticket for any one of the six stations between Kowloon and Sheung Shui, the last station before Lo Wu, then get off and explore the lovely Shatin Valley or the bustling marketplace at Taipo. The view from the train window of old villages, rice fields, pagodas and coastline is charming and pastoral, totally unlike bustling Hong Kong. The trip out and back takes two-and-a-half hours, and about a dozen trains run daily.

One day I climbed five flights of stairs in Kowloon to visit a delightful Pekingese woman who was supervising the painting of the wallpaper that is sold in New York through Charles R. Gracie & Sons, Inc. Mrs. P. C. Kiang could speak only Mandarin, and my Chinese friends who introduced me could speak only Cantonese, but no precise language was needed to share a cup of tea nor to express the joy we felt at seeing the exquisite white and yellow flowers coming to life on the handmade gold paper.

On my next visit to the Crown Colony I might be tempted to stay at the new Hilton Hotel on the Hong Kong side. The decoration includes craftwork from France, Italy, Germany, Japan, Scandinavia and Thailand. Some of the bedrooms open out onto a lanai and an 80-foot swimming pool. At the guests' command is the Wan Fu, a 110-foot luxury brigantine on which I took a cruise with Mr. Robert Drummond to the fishing villages and outer islands. Lunch parties or dinner parties can be arranged on board.

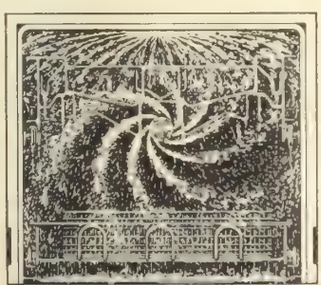
Two other trips well worth taking are the tram ride to the top of Hong Kong's Peak and the drive to Repulse Bay. The Peak Tram ride is a delightful ascent through tropical foliage to a spectacular view of the colony. Below lies the capital, Victoria, and the harbor, beyond that Kowloon, then the New Territories, and in the distance the mountains that conceal the mysteries of Communist China. Equally glorious is the twenty-minute drive from Victoria to Repulse Bay. Every curve in the road reveals a sheltered cove beneath a cliff, an island or a flash of the shimmering South China Sea and lazily drifting junks.

If you like Chinese food, no city in the world can compete with Hong Kong. There are Chinese dishes from every province, and each is prepared with authentic ingredients. My gastronomic high moments came at the North China Restaurant on Hart Avenue in Kowloon. The background is drab but the food is superb and the cost is nominal. It is important to ask for such specialities as: chicken breast with Chinese parsley, duck livers in wine sauce, Szechuan duck, stewed sharkfin, pounded shrimp with sesame seed and apple fritters.

Visitors who prefer Western food will enjoy lunch at the City Hall (Hong Kong side), a cultural center where movies, lectures and art exhibits are presented. Other favorite meeting places are the Parisian Grill, which is somewhat like New York's "Twenty One," the Ambassador Roof, Kowloon, and Gaddi's in the Peninsula Hotel, also in Kowloon.

Buying in Bangkok

Out of the twenty-four airlines that fly into Bangkok we chose BOAC. This network of communication should have warned me that Bangkok is the hub of the Far East. President Sukarno of Indonesia had just arrived. General Phoumi of Laos was scheduled to arrive. West German President Dr. Heinrich Luebke was there. H.R.H. Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands was about to leave. The lobby of the Oriental Hotel was cluttered with tour groups from four countries. In spite of all this, the Thais have remained a relaxed and smiling people, and the Oriental Hotel lawn at the edge of the Chao Phya River is a haven of peace.



A delightful morning excursion in Bangkok is the boat ride to the floating markets. Your progress through the klongs (canals) past hanging orchid gardens, past a handsome girl in a black sarong taking a morning dip, past the Thai families at breakfast, becomes confused with the progress of vegetable and meat vendors bargaining from their boats. Now and then there is a complete stop for the passage of an upcountry barge laden with rice. The perfect balance of the women who stand on the back of their boats and step rhythmically backward and forward as they row had my profound respect. I crossed the klong in such a boat to visit James Thompson's weaving establishment, and I sat paralyzed in the center afraid to wiggle my ears.

James Thompson, Managing Director of The Thai Silk Company Ltd., chose to live in Thailand after World War II. One day he followed a girl wearing a beautiful multicolored silk skirt to try to discover where and by whom the skirt was made. He found that her

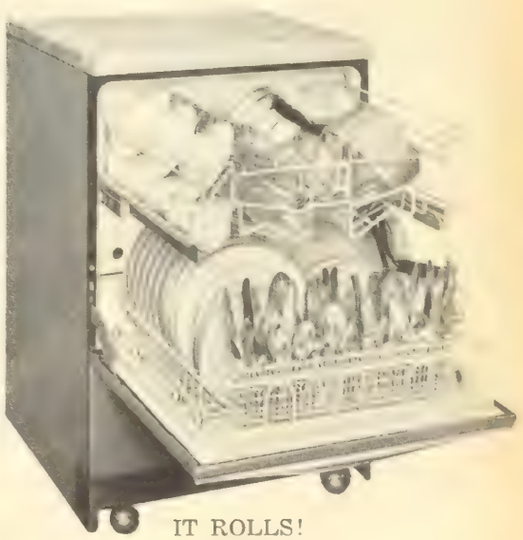
Are her dishes as clean as her food?

A Frigidaire Dishmobile – with Swirling Water Action – gets dishes more sanitary than handwashing



Exclusive Swirling Water Washing Action. No dish can hide.

Her health and happiness are reason enough to own a Frigidaire Dishmobile. Her dishes and spoon can be washed at germ-killing temperatures many times longer than during handwashing, high-temperature rinsed and dried too, untouched by dish-rags, towels or hands.

Dishmobile capacity is big enough for all day's dishes for an average family of five. So, happily, you'll probably do dishes just once a day, with less than 5 minutes preparation.

Dishmobile loads easily from the front, glides where you want it. In your choice of four colors, it will be one of the happiest, most satisfying buys of your life. Frigidaire Under-counter Dishwashers offer same satisfaction. Frigidaire Division, General Motors Corporation, Dayton 1, Ohio.

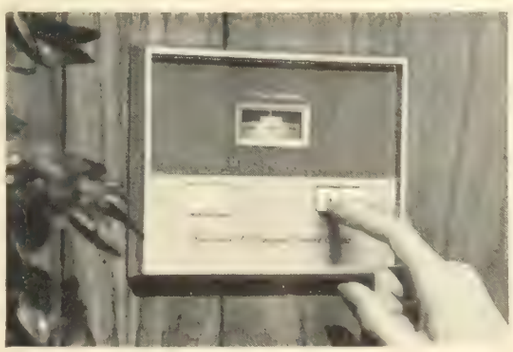
New Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 95% of airborne dust and pollen

Out comes clean air to fill your home . . . to help free your wife from daily dusting and cut your cleaning bills. The Honeywell "whole-house" Electronic Air Cleaner fits in the return air duct of any forced air heating—cooling system, removing up to 95%* of the pollen and other particles passing through it.

Air in your home contains millions of impurities. You only see the larger particles of dust that settle on table tops and shelves. It's a time-consuming . . . sometimes even a daily dusting job to get rid of them. But that's only half the story. The smaller invisible particles—over 90% of the total—the pollen, soot, smoke, cooking grease, bacteria and industrial wastes do most of the real damage.

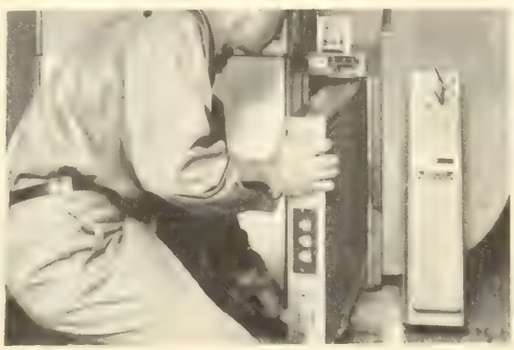
They may cause discomfort, soil furniture and draperies, put a dingy haze on windows and mirrors, and leave white areas or "ghosts" lurking behind pictures. The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner is highly efficient when it comes to catching these smaller particles—the ones that can pass right through ordinary filters.

You'll notice the difference! Your family will enjoy the comfort of purer air. Mirrors, windows, walls and furnishings will stay and look cleaner. You'll save money on cleaning bills. Of course, your wife won't throw away her dust cloth—no air cleaner can remove particles that settle before they enter the system. But her dusting time will be reduced. And the money you save can pay for your air cleaner.



Get the benefits of the same filtering system used extensively in hospitals. On a 3-year FHA loan, it costs as little as $14.38 a month, installed in your present home. In a new home it may be included in the mortgage for under $2.00 per month.

If you don't have a forced air system or are renting a home, the Honeywell Portable Electronic Air Cleaner could be your answer. Ideal for your office—or conference room, too.



Do yourself and your wife a favor. Just mail the coupon for information on Honeywell's whole-house or room-portable Electronic Air Cleaners.

*As measured by the National Bureau of Standards Dust Spot Method.

Honeywell

Handsome and Handy, this wall-mounted Control Center in the living area shows you when your air cleaner is working at peak efficiency, and when it needs washing.

Only 7 inches deep, the cleaner is easy to install in the return-air duct work of any forced air heating or cooling system. It takes no more current than a 40 watt bulb.

Tear out and mail.

THE ORIGINAL PORTRAIT KIT

We, the originators of oil-portrait number kits, have enabled thousands of people with no prior experience to paint quality portraits of loved ones. Our exclusive system gives you the finest reproduction at the lowest possible price. No misshaped abstracts! From your photo or color slide (any size) every brush stroke area is outlined and numbered on a fine mounted 16" x 20" canvas (standard portrait size). Twenty-four cups of individually-mixed artist's oil paints marked for the numbered areas are provided with screw cap lids to preserve freshness. The kit also includes: an artist's palette, fine brushes, brush cleaner, and a color reproduction with instructions to show you how to make each brush stroke for maximum effect. Please indicate hair and eye coloring. All photos returned unharmed.

Develop A Powerful Memory?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique for acquiring a powerful memory which can pay you real dividends in both business and social advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, necessary self-confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by remembering accurately everything they see, hear, or read. Whether in business, or social functions, there are ways in which you can dominate each situation by your ability to remember.

To acquaint the readers of this magazine with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in remembering, the publishers have printed full details of their self-training methods in a new book, "Adventures in Memory," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. No obligation. Simply send your request to: Memory Studies, 835 Diversey Parkway, Dept. 185-C, Chicago 14, Ill. A postcard will do.

family were weavers. Today, Thai silk is sold around the world, and James Thompson's company has eighty competitors.

At 8:30 each morning Mr. Thompson is greeted by his weavers holding baskets of multicolored bobbins of silk from which he selects the colors for the Queen's new evening coat or for the thousands of square stoles that are sold in his shop. The weaving is done in the workers' homes. In each tranquil house, the housework and vocational work move simultaneously. More like a fire sale, Mr. Thompson's shop on Suriwongse Road is a madhouse of stylish but grabby ladies in a whirling sea of brilliant yardage.

Mr. Thompson's home, a compound containing six Siamese houses, is open to the public two days a week and will be given after his death to the government of Thailand. Six of us dined there one evening on the brick terrace in front of the drawing room. The table was laid with pink-red mats and Thai plaid napkins to complement the bowl of hibiscus and the large hibiscus bushes that surround the garden. While our host told us the history of the house (the seventeenth-century brick in the stair bases had come from upcountry in Ayudhya, the antique green tiles of the parapet were used as ballast in the rice boats that came from China), we dined on Siamese food. We served ourselves from four plates of hot food at each end of the table. There was a bowl of rice at each place, then the hot soup was brought on after the main course, Chinese style. The servants removed the dishes to serve the dessert. It seemed so simple that one day I might try to imitate it. I bought the place mats next day, also the bronze and buffalo-horn utensils at S. Samran Thailand.

Coffee was served in the drawing room, a room that was originally built about the year 1800 in Bankrua, a weavers' village on the opposite side of the klong. The wall panels have been reversed so that the carved windows face inside. Since there is no glass, the tropical foliage is in direct competition with the Khmer and Cambodian sandstone figures, with paintings from the Vessantara Jataka done on cotton cloth, or with a Sukhothai stucco head of Buddha. A bronze statue of a Brahman priest stands in a wood niche beside a lively Thai silk upholstered chair. Below, on a table, is a squat bowl of yellow plumeria.

In Bangkok the "Thieves Market" is tempting. But it is wise to buy Cambodian carved stone heads and hands at reliable antique shops: Sukhothai, Peng Seng or the Monogram Shops. The Sawankaloke (fourteenth-century) turtles, birds and bowls are reasonably priced and easy to carry. A dozen shops sell the bronze cutlery at a dozen different prices, but inferior bronze turns green and poorly made handles split. S. Samran Thailand has a good selection of quality bronze wares. The Thais also make beautiful celadon. At La Boutique I saw a lamp for $55 with a 2-foot-high green celadon base and a handmade beige silk shade.

Thailand would seem to be the obvious place to buy gold jewelry, but I saw no gold necklaces or bracelets to compare with those at the Trio Pearl Company in Hong Kong.

H&G'S HOUSE OF IDEAS FOR 1963

Our newest House of Ideas, built in the Inwood Oaks section of Houston, Texas, is a big-family house with two-story roominess and one-story practicality.
Designed for today, it is a house that can take change in stride, a house that will still be young twenty years from now.
From foundation to roof beams
it is crammed with provocative new ideas you will want to borrow for your own home.
We invite you to examine this exciting house room by room on the next thirty-six pages

Inside these doors you will find a magnificent surprise

THE HOUSE MIRRORED IN A SHIMMERING POOL

Through the carved wood doors, you enter an enchanting courtyard adorned by a blue-tiled swimming pool that dramatically reflects the main façade of the house.
Built of redwood
and lime-washed brick, its four great columns and the deep, raftered overhang of its pitched roof eloquently express a spirit of welcoming shelter.
From the front door,
at the left of the pillared porch,
a covered walk leads past the entrance gates to a self-sufficient pool house with a big deck that overhangs the water.
The glass doors
at the right of the porch open the master bedroom to this private outdoor world

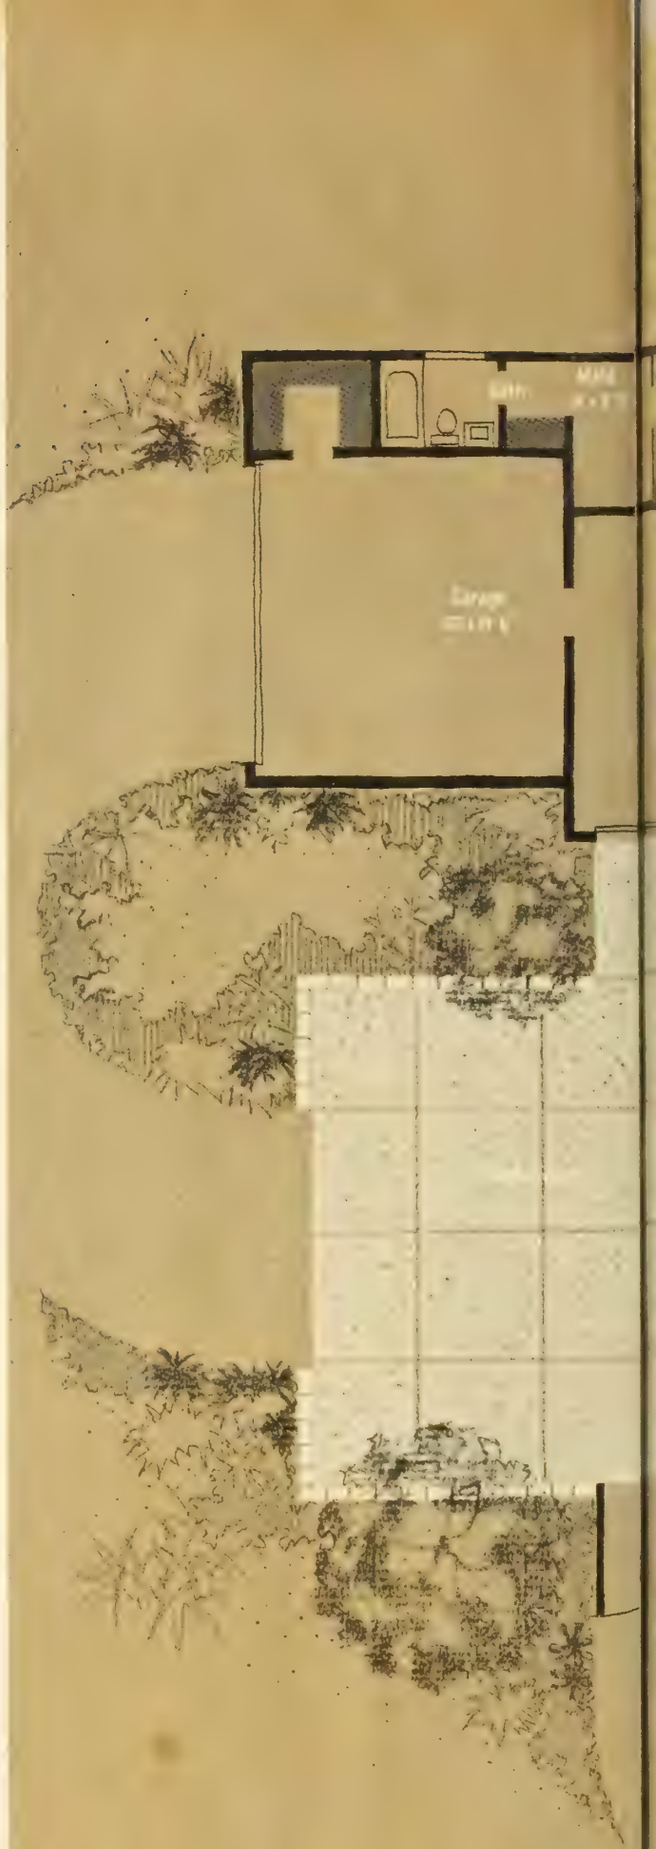
OUR HOUSE OF IDEAS CAN TAKE CHANGE IN ITS STRIDE



Designed by Roger Rasbach and decorated by H&G, our House of Ideas was planned for a hypothetical young couple with two children in their early teens. But as our young family grows and matures, the house around them is designed to change, too—adapting itself to their new ways as pliantly as a form-fitting skin of supple plastic.

Today the house reflects the realities of contemporary living. The plan recognizes, for instance, that today's family wants a dining room even though two out of three meals might be served almost anywhere else in the house. It recognizes the importance to a growing family of a second kitchen. It takes account of the facts that father more often than not brings work home from the office, that mother's day includes half-a-dozen activities that do not fit serenely into living room or bedroom, that doing the laundry still requires a certain amount of space and that in ten minutes or less two children can become a crowd. These facts have inspired new ideas for the use of space, new kinds of rooms—like the party pantry, the leisure room, the studio-office—that can play many different roles today and still others tomorrow.

To meet our hypothetical family's present needs, the house has three full-time bedrooms. But in later years, as Mr. Rasbach points out, it might well become a five-bedroom house—or later still, be reduced to one bedroom. For instance, the two children's rooms on the upper floor (see upper floor plan, page 103), might become a bedroom and study for one college student, or the floor might be closed off entirely. The studio-office with its adjoining bath is admirably located to be used as a nursery for a new arrival—or as a bedroom for an older relative. And the pool house, both now and later, might be many things to many members of the family: a dressing room for swimmers; a children's playroom where electric trains and such might be left undisturbed for weeks at a time; a party room; a guest room; a private apartment for an older son; headquarters for visiting grandchildren.

The house is also designed to take time in its stride. Its mechanics and equipment are as advanced as current technology can provide (see page 114). The materials it is built of, however, and the finishes specially created for it were chosen specifically because they look mellow while still brand new, but will age gracefully. There are no contemporary clichés to date the house as the years pass, but there are dozens of timeless details that add to its individuality—the handcrafted hardware designed by Mr. Rasbach, the decorative tiles by sculptor-ceramist Martha Mood, the massive hand-carved doors.

This is a house where a family can live as they please today, tomorrow, twenty years from now. And because of that, it is a house that is destined to become more deeply rooted in their affections with every passing decade.

The flexibility of the plan stems largely from the fact that every room on the main floor has direct access to the outdoors as well as to an adjoining room with which it may be used in tandem. Across the back of the house, laundry, breakfast area, leisure room and studio-office all open to a spacious sweep of terrace, lawn and garden. Even the little sitting room, tucked away in the bedroom wing, has a private high-walled patio for sun-bathing. For plan of the upper floor, see page 103.

THE ROOMS THAT WELCOME GUESTS

The free sweep of space across the front of the house is a marvelously flexible area for entertaining as well as a warm human environment for family living.
The dining room is quite separate from the living room,
since the foyer lies between them.
But each room is enhanced by its open view of the other

From one end of the living room in our House of Ideas, space flows without interruption across the entrance foyer to the dining room. Yet each of these three areas is clearly defined by changes in ceiling height and floor level, and by a series of four glazed wooden posts that duplicate those outside in the courtyard. The living room floor is 6 inches lower than those of the rooms around it, and its set-apart atmosphere is further emphasized by the arrangement of three loveseats in front of the fireplace—an irresistible invitation to genial conversation. The walls of the room, like those throughout the house, are finished with a subtle blend of H&G colors—in this case Pastel Citron glazed with Mushroom. (Over a flat base of Pastel Citron a paint glaze tinted with Mushroom is applied, then wiped with a rubber comb so that some of the contrasting color shows through.) Drawn across the sliding doors that open to the pillared portico are two sets of sheer curtains—one Pastel Citron, the other Butterscotch—on two electrically operated traverse tracks. Thus the push of a button can give the room any one of three different color effects. There are no lamps because all the lighting is built in—four recessed ceiling lights plus two swivel-bowl fixtures focused respectively on the fireplace and on a painting. All operate on dimmers.

TOM LEONARD

ROOMS THAT WELCOME GUESTS

MAURICE MILLER

A planter bed recessed in the floor, above and above left, greets your eyes first as you walk in the front door. Light pours down through a deep well overhead, topped by an acrylic plastic skylight.

On the left of the foyer, the dining room, above, seems much larger than it is because one side is wholly open and because its redwood ceiling, following the lines of the roof, slants upward to a point considerably higher than the foyer ceiling. The dining table is a permanent fixture: an hexagonal pedestal of brick with an oval top of reconstituted marble (for details of this remarkable material, see page 117). The cherry buffet topped with laminated plastic, standing against the brick wall, is a contemporary version of a Sheraton huntboard.

On the right of the foyer, the ceiling continues without changing level across the living room, below, but the lowered floor gives that room added height. A change of flooring to pre-finished oak also helps to underline the transition from the foyer to the living room.

Dining room, foyer and living room are all clearly defined, but the absence of solid partitions makes each seem more spacious

TOM LEONARD

The festive powder room, above, holds one of the many delightful surprises in which the house abounds: a floor paved with lavishly flowered Italian ceramic tiles. Harmonizing finishes on woodwork are but two of the specially created series used variously throughout house. All interior doors are of stock design, some finished like this one with H&G Mushroom frames, Espresso moldings, Mushroom-spattered Antique Gold panels—some in an alternate scheme. All are embellished with specially designed pewter-finished hardware. Hexagonal terra-cotta tiles of foyer, left, hand fired in Mexico, vary softly in color, need no waxing, eventually acquire the patina of old leather.

THE INGENIOUS PARTY PANTRY

This brand new idea for serving and storage triples the usefulness of the dining room, giving it a flexibility that ranges from seated dinner parties to intimate pick-up suppers

A seated dinner party, opposite page, may be served in formal fashion in the dining room of our House of Ideas—or the guests may serve themselves from an attractive buffet in the adjoining party pantry, right. Installed in the ceiling over the plastic-topped hexagonal-based table is an infra-red warmer that keeps the food at serving temperature no matter how long diners may linger over the meal. When the party numbers more than eight, extra tables can be set up in the foyer where the guests will still be close enough to serve themselves from the pantry buffet. The dining room chairs upholstered in Lemon Peel leather offer a strong starting point for an almost infinite variety of table-setting color schemes.

For family meals the party pantry is equally practical, and for pick-up supper parties it might serve as the main base of operations with or without the services of the food warmer. No small part of its usefulness is the fact that it is pleasant to look at from the dining room. The pedestal of the warming table matches that of the dining table and a handsome copper hood shields the infra-red warming unit. Antique Gold laminated plastic tops cabinet that houses an ice cube maker and a sink.

On the other side of the pantry is an open wine rack, below, surrounded by cupboards and drawers for the convenient storage of china and linen.

TOM LEONARD

THE ALLURING KITCHEN

Pretty enough for a party, the competent all-gas kitchen is finished in soft unkitcheny colors that make it pleasant to look at from whatever room you happen to see it

Our House of Ideas kitchen, opposite page, is as invitingly decorative as any room in the house. This is due partly to the colors—predominantly Antique Gold and Bronze Green—and partly to the sophisticated but easy-to-care-for finish on the cabinets (the result of an undercoat of Bronze Green, a surface coat of Clay Beige, an overglaze of Espresso applied with a graining comb). Ingratiating decorative details like the white porcelain knobs and pewter-finished plates on the cabinet doors and the series of ceramic vegetable plaques sculptured by Martha Mood also contribute to the kitchen's living room look. An acoustical plaster ceiling absorbs clatter.

The peninsular cooking counter, right, divides the work area from the storage and breakfast area, and the round section at the end makes each of the surface burners equally easy to reach. Below the oven built into the wall next to the door to the party pantry is a pull-out broiler. All the appliances are gas, including the dishwasher.

The breakfast area is like a second dining room—a cheerful place for children's meals or family suppers. Table top of plastic-laminated walnut has wrought-iron base painted Antique Gold. Sheer wool curtains are drawn across sliding doors that open to rear terrace.

TOM JONAS

THE LOFTY LEISURE ROOM

The visual excitement of this glorious two-and-a-half-story room is held in reserve until you round the corner of the entrance foyer.
Primarily a feet-up room designed for the relaxed enjoyment of family pleasures, its great scale makes it also a noble partner for the living room

The magnificent space of this second living room at the back of the house and its wall-to-wall, floor-to-roof view of the garden are, in themselves, conducive to relaxation. Since in a room of this size even the most brilliant colors are rarely overpowering, we chose a bold combination of Tangerine, black and white. An antique oriental trunk makes the brilliant coffee table. The rest of the furniture is simple and easy to care for (all the upholstery is vinyl) but not so informal as to mark the room "for teen-agers only." The soft pinky tone of the redwood wall and ceiling was achieved by applying one coat of white-pigmented paint stain, then rubbing it lightly with a lint-free rag. Four swiveling bowl lights in the walls near the ceiling flood room with light at night.

Four-fold doors at left of fireplace open to living room so that the two rooms may be used together for extra-large parties—or separately in the case of simultaneous parties for parents and children

TOM LEONARD

From the balcony, opposite page, that runs the length of the room (disappearing behind the chimney—see plan, above), you can get the full sweep of the transparent wall. The glazing, like that used throughout the house, is shatter-resistant acrylic plastic that makes sliding doors lighter in weight and screens the sun's rays to retard the fading of indoor colors. Between the two huge weathered beams that support the roof is a series of six skylights that balance the light from the window. The room is divided into three areas by three matching striped rugs—one for the piano, one by the fireplace and one for a game table and chairs in the opposite corner. Between the folding doors to the family breakfast room and the doorway to the foyer is a bar cabinet on wheels that may be rolled around to any part of the room or out to the paved terrace.

The same lime-washed, rough-faced bricks used on the exterior of the house built the huge chimney, above right. The fireplace, tall and powerful, has a circular back, a copper shield at the top of the opening and a bow-front hearth. Hanging under the balcony by doorway to foyer is "Burning Bush," a handwoven tapestry in red and black by Jan Yoors.

For a family who loves music, there is a sound center, right, at the far end of the room, opposite the piano, that offers the most advanced and precise equipment for listening and recording. Built into the first cupboards: speaker, record changer, heavy-duty professional turntable, multiplex stereo FM radio, control center, record storage; in the lower sections of next two cabinets: tape recorder, tape player, more record storage. All of these compartments plus the speaker at the far right can be closed off by doors so that only the niches for books, TV and objets d'art are visible. In addition to two speakers for this room, there are ten other listening stations throughout the house, each with two speakers.

THE VERSATILE BEDROOM WING

Buffered from household distractions, the parents' bedroom,
a corner of which you see on our cover, is adjoined by a room for work and another for daytime resting.
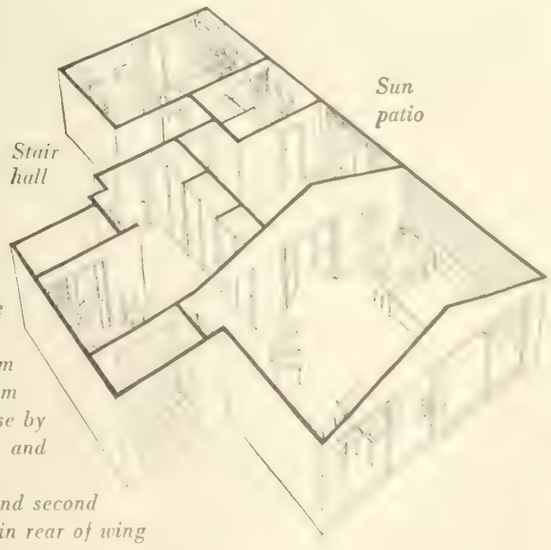
But both are ready to serve other needs
now or in the future



On a sunny summer morning, the parents of our young family can step outdoors from their bedroom, opposite page, and breakfast in the courtyard. But when doors are closed and curtains drawn, room has total privacy. Linen curtains were printed to order with border design in three H&G greens to match ombré stripes of custom-made quilted silk bedspread. The sleigh bed with white leather headboard panel, the marble-top table and tall cane-back chair are all cherry.

Adjoining bath-dressing room, above right, is partly paved with marble, partly carpeted in Empire Green of bedroom. Ceramic frame of mirror over marble-topped lavatory counter is an enchanting composition of three-dimensional leaves and flowers by Martha Mood. Cabinets are finished in one of antiqued multichrome effects used in all bathrooms throughout house. Opposite the lavatory on the carpeted side of the room is a wall of closets with sliding mirrored doors.

Between sitting room and studio-office (see next page) is another bathroom, right, which might be earmarked for the man of the house or reserved for guests. The colors—Mandarin Orange, browns and beiges—form a bridge between greens of bedroom and sitting room and bright hues of studio. Latticed door in wall is a recessed medicine cabinet. Ceramic mirror frame is by Robert Weimerskirsch.

Only a few steps from the heart of the house, bedroom is buffered from household noise by dressing room and sitting room. Studio-office and second bathroom are in rear of wing

A new idea in furniture arrangement, above left, adds marvelous convenience to one corner of bedroom. Two myrtle burl tables—console and coffee table—set at right angles to each other serve respectively as dressing table and bedside telephone table. Tub chair swivels easily from one to the other.

Sitting room, above, is most secluded spot in house for reading or taking a nap. Or a sick-abed child might be cared for here rather than upstairs. Antique iron daybed, armchair and ottoman are upholstered in black-and-white checks. Sliding doors in wall opposite bed open to the enclosed sun patio.

Multipurpose cabinet of aluminum and oil-finished walnut, above right, is stocked with everything needed to make the room a self-sufficient retreat. On the counter are a hot plate for making afternoon tea or early morning coffee and a new ⅕-cubic-foot thermoelectric refrigerator for fruit or cold drinks.

TOM LEONARD

All creative crafts projects as well as any odd job from mending to paying bills may be carried out in the studio-office, opposite page. Here, too, father can concentrate on his homework from the office, and upon occasion the room can become a guest room. White walls, black-banded white linen curtains and black-and-white wallpapered ceiling make a crisp background for the riot of colors in boxes, baskets, yarns and other materials ranged around the room. Sliding doors open one wall of room to back garden; other walls are lined with a series of oiled walnut storage units arranged to leave spaces for a loom and a desk. Desk chair is an old office chair painted Mandarin Orange and upholstered in tweed. Four-drawer taboret for small tools (paints and brushes, perhaps) rolls on wheels to wherever needed.

The other side of the desk, above left, makes a stout and steady surface for a portable sewing machine. Cabinet in corner conceals fold-down guest bed, above. Antique brass trivet doubles as bedside table.

FOR THE SON: SHIPSHAPE BUNKS

U-shaped second-floor plan borders upper reaches of leisure room. Arms of U under eaves contain dead storage. Children's rooms open to outdoor balcony across pillared portico

1 For the youngest member of the family, an enthusiastic 12-year-old sailor, we chose sturdy oak furniture that refuses to reveal tell-tale signs of vigorous use. Lower section of bed pulls out trundle fashion, or upper section may be raised to height of an upper bunk. Walls of Clay Beige and floor covered with off-white terrazzo-patterned sheet vinyl make a practical neutral background for Green Olive upholstery fabric and the Mexican rug. The painting over the bed is "Beach Scene" by David Adickes.

2 Sheer wool plaid that curtains sliding doors to outdoor balcony inspired the bright color accents of this room and adjoining bathroom. A cedar chest topped by an upholstered cushion gives the young man a window seat as well as extra storage for his sports gear. The seats and basket-weave backs of his oak chairs are stout cowhide.

3 All storage is built in. In the corner opposite the door to the bathroom is a built-in chest of drawers as well as a man-sized desk, both finished in one of the multichrome schemes used elsewhere in the house. The continuous top is white plastic laminate.

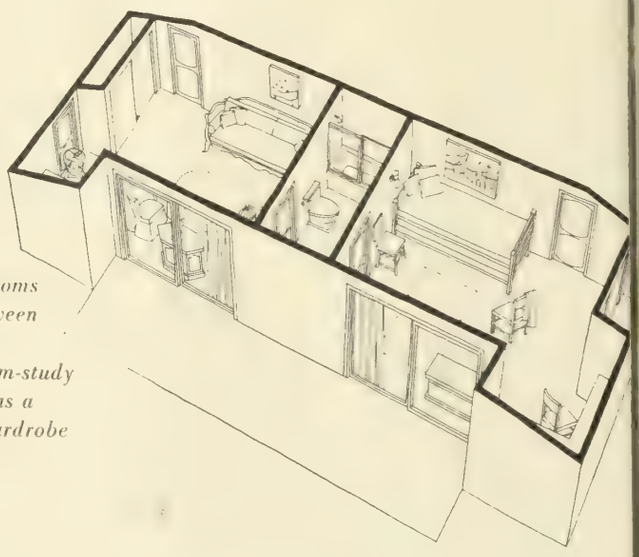
4 For the children's bathroom we chose colors that would go equally well with either of the bedrooms that flank it. Striped towels in two different color combinations inspired the striped ceramic tiles Martha Mood designed to border lavatory. Recessed in wall at each end of the room is a lattice-door medicine chest, one for each child.

5 A short hall that turns the corner from the leisure room balcony leads to top of stairway. Door to long narrow storage space at left is narrower variation of doors used throughout house. Over stair well is large skylight screened with translucent acrylic.



6 The soft pinky tones of redwood glazed with white like that in the leisure room glow in the natural light of the stair well. Sides of stairs, too, are redwood, but treads are planks of oak. Antique carriage lamps flank "Still Life" by Francis Skinner.

FOR THE DAUGHTER: LIVELY PINKS

The two upstairs rooms with bathroom between might be converted later into a bedroom-study suite. Each room has a spacious built-in wardrobe with sliding doors

For the daughter still in her early teens we created a bed-sitting room, opposite page, in colors similar to those of her brother's room, but with a switch of emphasis. Here the deep pinks, reds and yellows of the sheer wool curtains comprise the main theme rather than the accents. And they are reflected even in the painted furniture: the Curry-finished high chest for her smaller possessions, the dark red drum table that doubles as a writing stand. To set off these gay hues, walls are Crystal Pink.

A Provincial daybed finished in white, above left, emphasizes the sitting room atmosphere and has the practical advantage of converting into two single beds when a schoolmate comes to spend the night. A covered basket lacquered to match the room's predominant colors serves as a stash-away cache and night table. Set high in the wall over the bed (over her brother's bed, too—see page 102) is a pair of stereo speakers that form one of the eleven listening stations of the housewide high fidelity music system.

Tucked in one corner of the room is the young lady's built-in dressing table, left, with a multichrome finish and a white plastic laminate top. To the right of it, around the corner from the wardrobe, a door leads into a large walk-in clothes closet generously fitted with built-in storage.

THE HOSPITABLE POOL HOUSE

A delightful satellite of the main house,
the little house in the courtyard offers a constant welcome to guests, to swimmers, to children.
Planned especially to expedite poolside activities, it is also a self-sufficient retreat where long-term guests can enjoy complete independence and privacy

Linked to the main house only by the covered walk at one side of the courtyard (see page 82), the pool house reflects the big-house design as closely as if it were an integrated wing. Its pitched roof has the same deep overhangs and projecting beams. The framework of the roof has been given the same "weathered" finish of charcoal gray washed with white, and the overhangs, like those of the big house, have been stained Antique Gold. As large in area as the pool house itself is the redwood deck that overhangs the water, tying house to pool.

The pool will be a joy to look at—as any pool should be—winter or summer, empty or full, for it is lined with Venetian glass mosaic tiles—260,000 of them. Three gradations in their color from top to bottom create an effect similar to the natural variations in color of a body of water that changes in depth. A gas-fired heater attached to the pool's recirculating system can warm the water to a comfortable temperature the year round.

The all-weather furniture on the deck is of Sagebrush-finished aluminum, with chair seats and backs of aluminum mesh and table tops of mesh or glass. Only the chair cushions, along with the oversized canvas-covered deck cushions, have to be rescued from rain—a job speedily done with a canvas-covered cart (see page 110). At night the deck is lit by lamps mounted on courtyard wall and screened by pierced ceramic shields.

The pool house is always ready for guests. A pair of roll-out beds, opposite page, retire cozily into curtained, fabric-lined niches framed in redwood with the same weathered finish as the exterior beams and trim. Extra blankets and pillows are kept in the stack of mammoth books—actually a top-opening chest. One long narrow rug adds its soft warmth to the sleeping area without obtruding on the swimmers' route from pool to dressing room.

The other side of the room, right, is furnished as a game and dining area with a rattan hour-glass table and club chairs lacquered Tangerine and upholstered to match the bed niches. Dark stained wood-slat blinds over the sliding doors provide privacy and shade the room for sleeping without cutting out all the light. A ceramic lantern from Mexico lights the table for dining, and the deck outside is presided over by a ceramic doll by Robert Weimerskirch.

Multichrome finishes, latticed doors, specially designed decorative tiles embellish the pool house lavatory, opposite page, lower left, as they do the bathrooms in the main house. But here there is additional drawer space for the convenience of guests. The rest of the bath-dressing room is divided into three compartments for toilet, shower and a good-sized wardrobe (see plan, below).

A wonderful way to store party accessories so they are easy to reach and pretty to look at was devised for the pool house kitchen. One whole wall is lined with open shelves and compartments, some tall enough for oversized items such as party coffee makers. Small accessories are kept in boxes covered with decorative paper or fabric, trays are filed in a plastic rack and wine bottles are stacked in plastic containers that may be added to as needed.

Sleeping niches, bath-dressing room and cooking facilities make pool house a self-sufficient apartment. A fully equipped "second kitchen," the kitchenette contains an undercounter refrigerator, a single-bowl stainless steel sink with a plug-in appliance center and a range with four burners and oven

Our House of Ideas is admirably designed for entertaining outdoors any number from one to one hundred. The little kitchen in the pool house makes it as easy to serve small-to-medium parties in the courtyard as in the dining room of the big house. But when the guest count reaches fifteen or more, an outdoor party anywhere calls for a quantity of dishes, glasses, bottles and food that takes innumerable trips to transport from the house. So H&G decided to test the feasibility of a party on wheels.

To this end, we furnished the house with five pieces of wheelabout equipment: a large folding table, a gas barbecue, a refrigerator, an ice-maker and a dishwasher. In addition, we designed wheeled carriers for deck cushions and other poolside accessories. These are ordinary office mail carts fitted with bright canvas covers that include flaps to protect the contents from dust. Storage for everything was easily found in one of the two double garages, only a few steps away from the courtyard entrance gates (see plan, page 84).

Our party was set for 5 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon and we invited eighteen guests, mostly in their mid-teens. Around 3:30, the girls who were to serve as hostesses stopped by and performed a few preliminary chores. They rolled the mail carts to the poolside and distributed the cushions. They wheeled in the barbecue, the refrigerator (loaded with bottles of Coke and ginger ale) and the ice-maker. Finally they brought in the 10-foot folding table and set it up near the pool house. We couldn't dissuade them from also setting the tops on the table's twelve attached stools in spite of the fact that our party was to be a buffet.

Very little pre-party cooking was required for our menu:

Cold crawfish with a hot sauce
Barbecued beef, ribs and links
Rolls
Mixed vegetable salad
Cake and ice cream

And we did not have to wait until the last minute to set out the food, for we had a series of serving dishes with ice compartments and plastic dome covers to keep everything fresh and crisp. The rolls went into a basket on the lower shelf of the barbecue.

When our guests arrived, some changed immediately into swim suits and headed for the pool. Others lounged on the deck and listened to records, and everybody consumed quantities of Coke. As soon as the meat was ready, dinner was served. When all had had their fill of barbecued ribs, two boys rolled in the last of our wheelabout equipment—the dishwasher—which was loaded with first-course plates and forks

On the portable barbecue, another round of barbecued ribs is ready for second helpings

At dusk, candles in clay hurricanes are lit

while the ice cream and cake were being served. Later the dessert dishes, too, disappeared into the machine, and it was wheeled to the pool house kitchen and set to work.

After dinner, everyone took to the dance floor—the pool house deck. When the party was over, all that was left to be done was to fold up the table, collect the cushions and wheel everything home to its shelter in the garage.

THE GENEROUS ARRIVAL AREAS

Like a solicitous host,
our House of Ideas encourages you to enjoy its hospitality a little at a time.
The face it turns to the outside world inspires pleasant speculation.
What lies behind the brick wall?
Where does the driveway end?
What is the small, separate building?
The answers are revealed, one by one,
as a series of delightful surprises

1 The driveway paved with a compound colored a mellow terra cotta leads you past the broad brick-walled forecourt. Punctuated with sections of iron grillwork backed by planting, the wall provides the house with an adequate measure of privacy whereas a solid wall would have seemed inhospitable. Tall live oaks and pines, long standing on the site and carefully preserved by the builder, contribute a look of maturity that is seldom realized in brand new houses. (No shadeless saplings here!)

2 The motor court is not merely a place to park your car; it is a distinctive design adjunct to the house itself, and fulfills the psychological purpose of making guests feel welcome even before they get out of their automobiles. Bounded by the wall of the pool court, the garage and another, lower brick wall, the parking area has the character of an outer courtyard. Its surface is concrete aggregate with redwood dividers. Automated garage doors are redwood boards stained to match the house.

3 The two garages designed to satisfy the ever-growing need for family mobility are part of a storage-service complex which also includes the laundry and the housekeeper's suite. The garage facing the motor court houses two cars and the other, approached by the curving driveway, houses three. Heating and air conditioning units are built into the wall of garage on right; the other garage has square bulk-storage room.

4 The covered walk leading to the front door introduces three materials used prominently inside: terra-cotta floor tiles, lime-washed brick for the wall and redwood in the ceiling which is stained Antique Gold.

5 The entrance gates are the real front doors, and their hand-carved panels establish the importance of craftwork in the house you are about to enter. Each fir door weighs 300 pounds, boasts real dowel joinery.

OUR HOUSE CREATES ITS OWN POWER

If a house is a "machine for living," as some architects have been accused of saying, then our House of Ideas can be credited with literally generating the machine in a new way. As far as we know, this is the only house in the world that furnishes all of its own energy, full time, by means of a 30-kilowatt natural gas generator. This is saying a great deal, since the house requires an extraordinary amount of energy. Major kitchen appliances, washer and dryer, heating-air conditioning system, swimming pool heater—all of these use gas. In addition, the on-site gas generator provides all electricity needed for lighting, ventilating fans, the two automatic hot water heaters, the music system, thermostatic and garage door controls and the dozens of small appliances common in every home today.

You can't buy the House of Ideas "total-energy" generating system in a store, but neither is it merely an engineering stunt. Already such on-site energy producers are now a reality in numerous commercial and school buildings, and engineers believe the day is not far away when energy packages also will be available for single-family houses as well. In theory, an on-site energy system offers greater architectural freedom to the designer of a house where difficult terrain or local ordinances restrict the manner in which the utility lines may be brought into the building. It may also be feasible in the near future for a builder to establish a central energy generating unit that can supply the needs of a group of houses.

Energy-producing natural gas frequently emerges from the earth accompanied by petroleum, and the two are both represented importantly in our House of Ideas by an imposing array of products and materials developed by the prodigious applied science called petrochemistry. With the chemicals derived from natural gas and oil, the petrochemical industry has created a world of synthetic fibers, rubbers, plastics and epoxies. Some are brand new products, others have already become household familiars.

For instance: a petroleum derivative introduces color to a place where it has never been satisfactorily achieved before—the pavement of the driveway. Instead of terra cotta, we could have chosen green, blue, yellow or white because these are all integral colors in a new petroleum-derived "binder" material. You simply mix the colored binder with an aggregate of sand and gravel and apply the mixture just as you would asphalt.

The sheets of shatter-proof acrylic plastic that are used to glaze all the windows, skylights and sliding doors throughout the house also stem from petroleum.

The reconstituted marble used for the dining table top, the floor, walls and counter of the master bathroom and the countertop in the guest bath is made by combining real marble dust with a petroleum-based epoxy. This material has the beauty of natural marble plus a notable advantage: it can be molded to any shape you want such as, for instance, the oval form of the bathroom basins.

Among the more familiar petroleum-based products in the house are:

The acrylic paints used to develop the variety of imaginative finishes on the walls and cabinets.

The nylon and Dacron that give the curtains and upholstery their long-wearing, easy-washing qualities.

The plastic laminates used to make durable countertops in bathrooms, kitchen and laundry.

The vinyls that show up in nearly every room of the house as flooring, wallcovering, cushion covering or upholstery.

Without the many products that trace their origin to the wizardry of petrochemical scientists, our House of Ideas would clearly have taken a very different and, we believe, less sparkling form.

Laundry-solarium invites ease-taking, plant-tending

Even with the most efficient equipment and the most miraculous of detergents, doing the family laundry takes space (whoever saw clothes sort and fold themselves?). But since no one washes clothes all day, every day, the generous laundry in our House of Ideas has been designed to double as a solarium-flower room: cut flowers can be arranged at the deep sink and any surplus moisture in the atmosphere will be gratefully received by a collection of growing plants on a specially designed wrought-iron stand. Located next to the kitchen, the room's sunny disposition is assured by the window wall that opens to the grassy terrace. Washer and dryer are finished in H&G's Bristol Blue, and above them hangs a series of ceramic plaques by Martha Mood depicting the weatherman in all his moods: wind, rain, storm, scorching sun and benignly fair.

THE MARKS OF INDIVIDUALITY

Every room in the house boasts at least one new idea designed to ease a care, add a comfort or, best of all, to multiply the sources of delight

MAURICE MILLER

The vast dimensions of the leisure room's transparent wall (22½ feet across, 21 feet from floor to ridge of roof) are further dramatized by the strong pattern created by 9-inch-wide mullions, based on proportions of sliding doors.

Deft details in unexpected places

Some of the most delightful touches turn up where you least expect them: •Living room fireplace (1) is framed with slate edged by a molding of wormy chestnut with a mellow weathered finish. At the back of the hearth is a gas pilot light to start the logs burning without kindling. •A parade of benign insects on ceramic tiles (2) marches in friendly fashion around the countertop of kitchenette in the pool house. •A series of twenty-four ceramic bas-reliefs depicting luscious vegetables (3) decorates the whole wall over the sink and counter of kitchen in the main house. Both series, like tiles that edge counters of bathrooms, are by Martha Mood.

Handsome housing for gas heaters

The gas that supplies all the power for the house also controls the temperature, but its sources are pleasantly unobtrusive. •A series of six semi-portable infra-red heaters set around the pool terrace (7) radiate enough heat to extend the season for courtyard living by several weeks in early spring and late fall. Each heater is mounted vertically in a gaslight post. •One of the central heating and air conditioning units and the gas-fired incinerator (8) fit neatly into closets designed for them in the wall of the garage. • Infra-red food warmer in party pantry is actually installed in ceiling, but copper hood (9) hides working parts and directs rays to buffet table.

Distinctive co-ordinated hardware

The specially designed doorknobs, handles and pulls, combined with the specially developed finishes, give the standard doors and cabinets a made-to-order look. Like a well-planned wardrobe, this repertoire of hand-crafted hardware allows for refreshing variations from room to room, but each of the designs is repeated often enough to contribute decorative unity to the whole house. •Pewter-finished knobs on lacy escutcheons (4) embellish most of the bedroom doors. •Simple porcelain pulls with leaf-like pewter escutcheons (5) are used in the kitchen and some of the bathrooms. •Sturdy spool handles (6) grace double doors of leisure room.

Synthetics in new roles

In places where all materials have to take a beating, petroleum-derived synthetics combine uncommon endurance with good looks. •The terrazzo-patterned vinyl plastic sheeting that covers floor of housekeeper's bathroom (10) also lines three walls of bath-shower niche (a single sheet turns corners without having to be cut or joined by moldings). •Reconstituted marble makes an elegant surface for master bathroom's step-down tub and shower compartment (11). Fabric used for curtains of adjoining bedroom (see page 98) was laminated to window shade, waterproofed with plastic coating. •Accordion panels of plastic (12) line tub enclosure of guest bath.

EZRA

The eighth in H&G's series of essays on the fascination of the simple, humble things of daily living

THE UBIQUITOUS SPOON

Not long ago my young son and I were in India visiting my family and re-acquainting him with the Indian half of his heritage (the other half is American). While we were there, in consideration of the more orthodox members of his Indian family—great-aunts, second cousins and all of the relatives that Indians consider "close kin"—I had to instruct him in the etiquette and technique of eating a meal properly with his fingers. It isn't simple.

First he had to learn to be served and not to behave in the way that we do in our American home where we expect him to serve himself. The servant with the large ladle or cooking spoon comes to each member of the family and places rice on the large, round silver trays we call thalis. Then, into the small silver bowls, or cutoris, the servant spoons various kinds of curries, vegetables, yoghurt, pickles, lentils. Once served, my son had to learn to eat only with his right hand, never to touch food with his left hand, to use his fingers in such a way that they do not get dirtied beyond the first knuckle, to be sure to begin eating before his hostess because this is expected of any man or boy, and to master the countless other details of correct behavior at a formal Indian meal. By the end of our stay in India, my son was quite adept in the complexities of the Indian eating ritual.

When our Bombay visit ended, we went to London for a few days as a break in the long trip back to New York. There my son was invited to a children's tea party. The British, as everyone knows, make quite a performance out of the ceremony of High Tea—everyone, that is, except my son on that occasion. I will never forget his look of bafflement when he sat down at the tea table and faced a formidable array of food and of spoons. Which spoon went with which of the many delicious dishes? There were, of course, teaspoons to stir the very milky tea in the children's cups, then there were the spade-shaped spoons that the English like to use for ice cream, dessert spoons for the various jellies and trifles, large serving spoons next to each bowl of goodies, but, just to confuse matters in my child's mind, he found that he could eat the sandwiches and the cake with his fingers.

In America there was further instruction in this small area of living waiting for him. His father, an inveterate iced-tea drinker, introduced him to the long-handled spoons used for the cold drinks that are served in tall glasses. He also learned to recognize the wooden spoon I use in making cream sauces, the perforated spoon I use for scooping vegetables out of boiling water, the big mixing spoon, the tiny salt-spoon that I still prefer to use on the table instead of the more popular (in America) salt shaker. Altogether, I could see, it really was an embarrassment of spoons.

But then I began to think about how pervasive and how basic this simple household item is and why it appears in so many different forms. It occurred to me that any woman who does her own housekeeping uses, in the course of a day, innumerable spoons. First, the spoon to measure early morning coffee (instant or regular), then the sugar spoon, the spoons to be set out for breakfast, the spoons to stir the coffee and eat the cereal, the cooking spoons for boiled, poached or scrambled eggs. Spoons all morning if you are a habitual coffee or tea drinker. The simplest soup-and-sandwich lunch requires a spoon, and the cooking of any kind of dinner involves spoons ranging from the ladle to the miniature spoon you use for measuring spices.

A friend of mine, an industrial designer, once told me that one of the first assignments her class in training school was given was to think up an implement that would serve all the purposes of eating a complete dinner, something that would combine the functions of the knife, fork and spoon. Most of the class, she said, finally settled for chopsticks because meat and vegetables can always be cut up in the kitchen, as they are in Chinese or Japanese cuisine, and consequently virtually anything can be eaten with chopsticks. Anything except soup. None of the students could think of a substitute for a spoon. Even in China and Japan, where long metal chopsticks are the main cooking implements, there is no way of serving most of the cooked food except with a spoon, and though knives and forks never appear on the table, soup spoons at a formal dinner are essential.

In Indonesia, in Ceylon, in the most obscure African village, people will fasten the scraped-out half-shell of a coconut to a stick to make, once again, that necessary implement—a spoon—to scoop water out of a brook for drinking, to use in the kitchen, to use as a measure in buying at the market or judging a recipe. A primitive variation, certainly, but don't we, in effect, do the same? After all, a "spoonful" is a standard measurement appearing in recipes the world over.

In a way, this taken-for-granted household implement carries its own important psychological significance. Thinking about it, I was rather surprised to find how evocative a spoon is of our earliest associations. It is, for instance, the first feeding instrument that a child knows after he is weaned from the breast or bottle. By now, in these psychology-conscious times, all of us have learned, one way or another, of the expression of love implicit in the offering of food to a child. The hand with the spoon in it, giving sustenance and satisfaction to the baby, will inevitably be a symbol of security, cherishing and consequently love. Indeed, this is only one part of a long tradition—a tradition that possibly has grown out of the early needs and dependencies of children on the people that feed them.

In virtually any country in the world, eating is a kind of ritual with its own rules, sometimes rather bizarre rules. Whether it is the Masai tribe of nomads in Kenya who will ceremoniously offer you fresh cow's blood sipped through a reed inserted in the vein of a living cow, or whether you are courteously handed the special delicacy of a fish-eye in Japan, or whether you are surfeited with caviar and vodka by a Russian host, the principle is still the same. Food and the serving of it is a fundamental part of hospitality, a gesture from one human being to another of generosity, friendship and finally—to put it pretentiously—the brotherhood of man. If you can offer the first and basic need of mankind, food, to another person, you are to some extent expressing your wish for his good, for his survival, for his camaraderie, as well as your acknowledgment that both you and your guest share in "the human predicament," as the great English novelist, E. M. Forster, has called it.

By Santha Rama Rau

If the most casual stranger walks into an Indian house, the owner, by the traditions of our society, must offer him something to eat and drink. In fact, an Indian friend of mine has, as her recurring nightmare, the dream of twenty-five people dropping in unexpectedly to dinner—and there is no food in the house! She always wakes consumed with guilt after this dream. How, she asks herself when she is still half-asleep, could I not have seen to it that there was enough food for even the most unplanned number of visitors? There is so great a feeling about hospitality in India that there is even one day a year set aside for the worship and appreciation of household utensils. These, after all, are the objects that not only help to keep us alive, but also make it possible to show cordiality to other people. No wonder, then, that entertaining anywhere in the world usually involves the serving of food and drink, and that the objects that make this possible deserve individual attention.

In the West as much as in Asia, the classic present to a bride is the silver and cooking utensils she will need. Out of this basic sense of necessity combined with the higher sense of social grace grew the practice of creating ordinary household objects that are works of art. From the need to include elegance and beauty in daily living, great masters like Cellini fashioned with equal brilliance a statue as impressive and on as grand a scale as the Perseus and Medusa in the Loggia dei Lanzi in Florence, or small silver saltcellars for a dining table with their exquisite matching spoons. An artist like Jacques Rottiers put so much imagination and work into designing a 168-piece Louis XV silver dinner service that it recently sold for $579,600 at Sotheby's in London. Or think of the silversmiths of Queen Anne's period in England who labored to put the greatest artistry into the making of everyday table cutlery. They, too, knew the importance of delighting the eye with the most mundane utensils of our daily lives.

Even now, a sense of the value of both design and utility continues equally in the minds of housewives and manufacturers of household equipment. How stylishly the modern table silver is modeled, how sleek even the cheapest sets of stainless steel knives, forks and spoons appear, how well constructed for line and usefulness are the cooking spoons you can buy in any dime store. It is hardly surprising that so many kitchens these days are decorated—and I do mean decorated—with hook boards on which the cooking spoons hang proudly on display. This is partly for convenience of access, yes, but the sight of them is also esthetically pleasing. In the end the purpose of all the designers, from the most eminent artist to the anonymous draftsman, is the same: to bring grace and beauty into the home. And, as a result, the housewife's most monotonous tasks become that much more enriching.

Sometimes, through history to the present day, the whole ritual of eating and drinking takes on a religious aspect as well. This is very understandable when you remember the form of the communion service in a Christian church, or the traditional offerings of food from the worshippers to the gods in a Hindu temple, and the token handful of rice or fruit that a Brahman priest gives in blessing to attendants at a temple festival. It seems natural, then, in the West, that a logical decoration for the handles of spoons would be representations of religious figures, and in fact there are those charming sets of a dozen spoons known as "Apostle Spoons," each bearing the picture of a different apostle. In India the connection is somewhat different; still, it exists. After the religious ceremony of her marriage, a girl may take from her own family kitchen only the mortar and pestle for grinding spices, the silver pitcher for measuring milk and a cooking spoon. These make it possible for her both to set up her own kitchen and to have the means to prepare offerings for the gods.

The dignity of religion, the charm of beautiful workmanship, the earthy reality of the mechanics of living are all things that we become aware of as children. The instruments we use for cooking, serving or eating food have associations far beyond their simple utility. They are, for example, an intimate part of our feeling of hospitality—any hostess would bring out her best silver to honor special guests. And what is hospitality? Essentially a giving and receiving between people, a gesture of graciousness, the acknowledgment that the courteous offering of the fundamental necessities of life to another person distinguishes the civilized human being from the suspicious boor.

My son said to me the other day (in the incurable and only occasionally comprehensible jargon of small boys), "Hey, Mom, Billy and Peter are coming for supper. Neat, isn't it?"

"Neat" is exactly what I knew it wouldn't be if the three of them got together at table. However, with motherly self-restraint, I asked only what they would like to eat.

"Nothing creepy, O.K.? Like, I mean, no kind of liver or anything."

"Well, what?" (I've long since given up on liver anyway.)

"Something real cool, O.K.?"

"You mean cold cuts?"

"Oh, Mom, don't be such a spaz. I mean, like soup, maybe, and hamburgers and ice cream and like that, O.K.?"

It was certainly O.K. with me, and I started setting the table with the appropriate dishes and spoons and spoons and spoons. Hamburgers, like sandwiches, should be eaten with the fingers: a wonderful convention, since then there are no forks to wash. But I washed an amazing number of spoons that day.

EDITOR'S NOTE: India-born journalist, novelist and playwright Santha Rama Rau had a grandmother who thought Westerners were barbarians for eating with forks and spoons. "After all," she used to say, "you know if your own hands are clean. But who knows if the servants washed the silver properly?" But even in her house, reports her granddaughter, a spoon was used for the serving. Although Miss Rama Rau has traveled and lived in many parts of the world and now resides in New York with her American husband and young son, she has always been "engaged with India," as she puts it. Her recent play—the first ever on Broadway about India by an Indian—was a dramatization of E. M. Forster's "Passage to India." Rumer Godden, another contributor to H&G's essay series, once commented about Santha Rama Rau's literary accomplishments: "The balance remains: cool and warm, East and West, wit and kindness, journalist and woman."

Hanging basket plants are as old, probably, as Babylon, but they have lasted a lot longer. There is a good reason for both their antiquity and their longevity: A hanging basket provides a means of displaying plants that is unsurpassed for ease of planting and for dramatic show. Whether you fill a porch from floor to eave (opposite page and below), arrange a whole sky full of soaring color in a connoisseur's collection (page 125), or simply put a begonia in celestial orbit across your living room window, the results differ only in degree. The principal requisite for a good hanging basket, of course, is a plant that will grow down as well as or better than it grows up. You will need to water the plant or plants you choose for your baskets about five times as frequently as you would the same plants in a garden, adding soluble fertilizer to the water fortnightly. This could be just a matter of a few extra minutes of regular attention (for details, see Gardener's Month, page 140). On these six pages, the lovely results.

HOW TO PLANT BEAUTY IN A BASKET

Right:

Episcias, long known for their yellow, orange or red flowers and their ribbed and colorful foliage, are relatives of both African-violets and columneas and of the gloxinias on the shelf below them, but they are dissimilar except in technical flower structure. Like all the gesneria family, they need warmth, but protection from noon sun. Once these conditions are met (and a moist soil maintained) they bloom, at least a little, all the time.

Opposite page:

Begonia, episcia, columnea —three "basket greats"—hang above the plant staging on Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Webster's living porch in Islip, Long Island, N. Y. Other begonia types that would serve equally well above eye level are on the low shelf, with a new miniature cymbidium in the foreground and a tubbed lemon at far end. The Websters use the old reliable bamboo roller shades to control sun, have an automatic humidifier to keep winter air buoyant, reduce winter evaporation.

There are as many uses for hanging baskets as there are plants for baskets

EZRA STOLLER

Ferns are marvelously textured even if their colors are largely limited to greens. From the bold fronds of nidulariums to the daintiest of maiden hair species, the range of fern types for basket use is wide. And the spongy kind of moss that is so suitable for lining hanging plant baskets is really a second home for most ferns. Chief growing requisites are protection from hot sun and, of course, plenty of moisture. Ferns grow best in wire baskets lined with sheet moss, available from most florists (see pages 140 and 141), but may be wired into "balls" of moss to cover a sphere, or grown in decorative pots. These baskets and those below hang in courts outside Mr. and Mrs. David Frame's house in Houston, Tex. Architects: Neuhaus & Taylor.

Here is proof that a good fern basket can be decorative and useful wherever you put it. When the great tree around which the Frames planned their terrace lost its top, a fern basket clothed the remaining bare trunk. Other fern baskets at varying levels add height as well as depth. Notable in all these fern arrangements are species of nephrolepis, of which the familiar and durable Boston fern is one. Other suitable genera for similar conditions of shade and humidity: adiantum, cyrtomium, davallia, lygodium, platycerium (including the bold staghorn fern). Best way to water outdoor jungles: early and often with a fine spray from a garden hose.

ERNST BEADLE

Begonias are almost without equal as hanging basket candidates. Not only is the foliage of the many species and varieties wondrously varied, but the pretty bursts of pinkish florets that come as the days lengthen are a constant delight. The plants will stand well a humid climate or endure considerable drought (when they wilt from dryness, they straighten up only minutes after they are watered.) Their roots will thrive in almost any container and a soil that holds gritty sand and plenty of leafmold. Three groups of heracleifolia varieties, including 'Ricinifolia,' grace Mrs. H. G. Safford's Houston, Tex., house.

Lantanas fill the arches all summer long of an outdoor Cape Ann, Mass. produce market, below. (Even the food may seem more appetizing for the beneficent garnish of hanging baskets.) Summer residents of Rockport, Mass., honor this establishment equally for its merchandise and for the baskets, which emerge each season from greenhouse hibernation brighter and more luxuriant than ever.

RALPH BAILEY

Baskets for their own sake, apart from the particular plants they may contain, are what counts. Even in spring and in a relatively cool climate, before the ivy-leaved geraniums have substantial foliage or any flowers at all, the mere presence of the baskets within the frame through which the garden is seen provides focus and increased perspective. Now in tight bud, these plants in the Wilmington, Del., garden of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dudley Clark will bloom without letup all summer long (see next page).

Fly a single basket in a window or spread a collection across a greenhouse

BARBARA WOLFF

Staples in the inventory of basket plants would include these four plus the others on these pages: Browallia, far left, top, one of the very best and brightest of the trailing plants and easily grown from seed. It requires greenhouse warmth in winter and plenty of sun, and will continue outdoors all summer. Best variety is B. speciosa major. Most adaptable of a numerous clan, ivy-leaved geranium, left, top, has graceful but starchy leaves, almost continuous summer bloom. Nasturtium, far left, below, is as valued for its cool cucumber-green leaves as for its hot yellow-orange flowers. This, too, is easily grown from seed, likes heat and sun. Fourth species is climbing jasmine, making a shrubby tangle of green and white all summer. All four plants will flourish in the open as long as they are not allowed to dry out or blow apart.

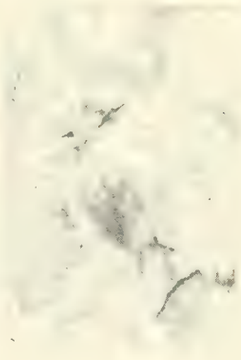
Showmanship, even of a restrained sort, is the real secret of displaying basket plants well. Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Webster have added a fine sense of style to an unimpeachable knowledge of suitable plants, well grown. Their greenhouse, left and opposite page, was modeled after the classic orangerie, but on a smaller scale. Plants at greenhouse end, left, include bromeliads, sedum, skinny rhipsalis, and, on both sides, fuchsia and begonia. Columneas, recently "discovered" kin of the African-violet, form the basis of these two groups and are at their spectacular peak of flowering, opposite page. The flowers of all the principal species run red to yellow. All the basket plants on these two pages are suitable for growth either under glass or indoors. (The four at top of page are also good for summer outdoors.)

FANTASY FINISHES

First of a three-part guide to the decorative art of creating trompe l'oeil finishes with paint

The art of using paint to simulate precious marble or rich hardwoods is as old as the Egyptians and as new as today's enterprising craftsman. The technique is not child's play, but it can be mastered by a practiced amateur who has patience, imagination and enough space to set up a long-term workshop. With paint, brush and a steady hand, you can turn a humble wooden table top into fantasy marble, or a plaster column into trompe l'oeil porphyry.

Fantasy or faux finishes have been popular with artists and decorative craftsmen in all parts of the world. The Chinese and Japanese were early adventurers in the techniques of imitating exotic woods. In the sixteenth century, the Italians developed trompe l'oeil painting to a high degree in the course of decorating their villas and palazzos. Michelangelo painted an architectural framework of faux marbre for his great frescoes in the Sistine Chapel. You can see columns of faux porphyry in the Pitti Palace and architectural details of faux marbre combined with real marble at Fontainebleau. Among the earliest artisans who came to America were house painters who brought with them the knowledge of simulating marble and wood grains which they used to handsome effect on the pilasters and paneling of Colonial mansions such as the Hunter House in Old Newport. Fantasy wood-graining was a popular finish for furniture throughout the nineteenth century. Even today you will see very fine new (and expensive) furniture with fantasy finishes, particularly marble and tortoise.



Some fantasy finishes are faithful trompe l'oeil imitations of real materials. Others, with more exaggerated patterns and fanciful colors, imaginatively suggest marbles, woods and precious stones that never were. Both types are included in the collection of samples, opposite page, executed for H&G by the Isabel O'Neil Studio Workshop. For Mrs. O'Neil, who has adapted the traditional methods, encourages her students not only to master the techniques, but to employ them to execute imaginative finishes of their own creation. She urges them to study the patterns of natural materials, but never to copy a specific piece of stone or wood.

Step-by-step instructions for achieving the three fantasy effects in the top row of our sampler may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to H&G's Reader Service, 420 Lexington Ave., N. Y. 17, N. Y. Techniques for other finishes will be taken up in future issues.

1 Faux porphyry feigns the dark red or purplish hue of real porphyry enlivened by its characteristic metallic sparkle. This finish is achieved by a spattering technique—first with varying colors and values, then with white, black and brassy gold for the highlights. It is appropriate for any surface that might logically be made of stone: a table top, a console shelf or perhaps a pedestal for a statue.

2 Faux marbre in the stylized manner is a quite painstaking technique. The pattern is worked on a dry surface with small floats or patches of paint. By applying droplets of turpentine to each float you set it in motion to form a pattern. Then the many intricate little hairline veins of marble are painted freehand. This technique is practical for small objects such as pedestals, boxes or lamp bases of simple shape.

3 Faux marbre in the floating manner is so called because the surface is flooded with a base color, and while the paint is still wet, other colors are laid on with a feather and made to move with turpentine. This technique is recommended for horizontal surfaces such as table tops and shelves. With practice, it may also be adapted to vertical surfaces such as moldings, in which case the base paint is allowed to dry before the other colors are floated on in a similar but more controlled fashion.

4 The tools that work the magic, left to right: brush and paint for base coat; cotton to absorb excess turpentine used in "floating" colors for marble patterns; turkey feathers and jars of paint for "floating" colors; turpentine to move color; block of wood for heavy spatter work; sponge and crumpled newspaper for forming patterns with paint; chamois and water for removing excess paint. In foreground: brush for spattering and palette knife for mixing paint.

Opposite page:

As varied as the riches of the Indies are the luxurious and imaginative effects you can achieve on plain wood with fantasy finishes. Top row, left to right: wood before finishing; faux porphyry; faux marbre in the stylized manner; faux marbre in the floating manner. Center row: four versions of faux tortoise. Bottom row: faux lapis lazuli, faux malachite, two kinds of faux bois. Top and bottom: two imaginative versions of bamboo.

Delightfully different summer drinks—

FRUIT SYRUPS, WINES AND RATAFIAS

By James A. Beard

Summer is the season of fruits and refreshing fruit-flavored drinks. What could be more appealing on a hot day than a tall vermouth cassis, sparkling with soda bubbles, scented with lemon zest? This estival hankering for fruits is nothing new. Long before the era of soda fountains and ready-bottled fruit drinks, the meticulous housewife prepared fresh fruit syrups, homemade wines, ratafias and shrubs and stored them in the cellar or pantry so that she might offer her guests a choice of cooling refreshments. Family recipe books are full of instructions for making raspberry syrups, for example, or dandelion or rose-hip wine. Today we can buy a good selection of commercial fruit syrups and wines that can make the basis for some delicious thirst quenchers. Ratafias are seldom available commercially, but if you would like to try your hand at making them, you will find it an adventuresome way to use the bounties of summer.

SYRUPS

Raspberry Syrup

There are several varieties, some domestic and others imported from France or Switzerland. Use raspberry syrups in any of these ways:
1. Plain with ice and soda or water.
2. Combined with fresh fruit juices.
3. With vodka, rum or cognac, ice and a little lemon or lime to cut the sweetness.

Cassis Syrup

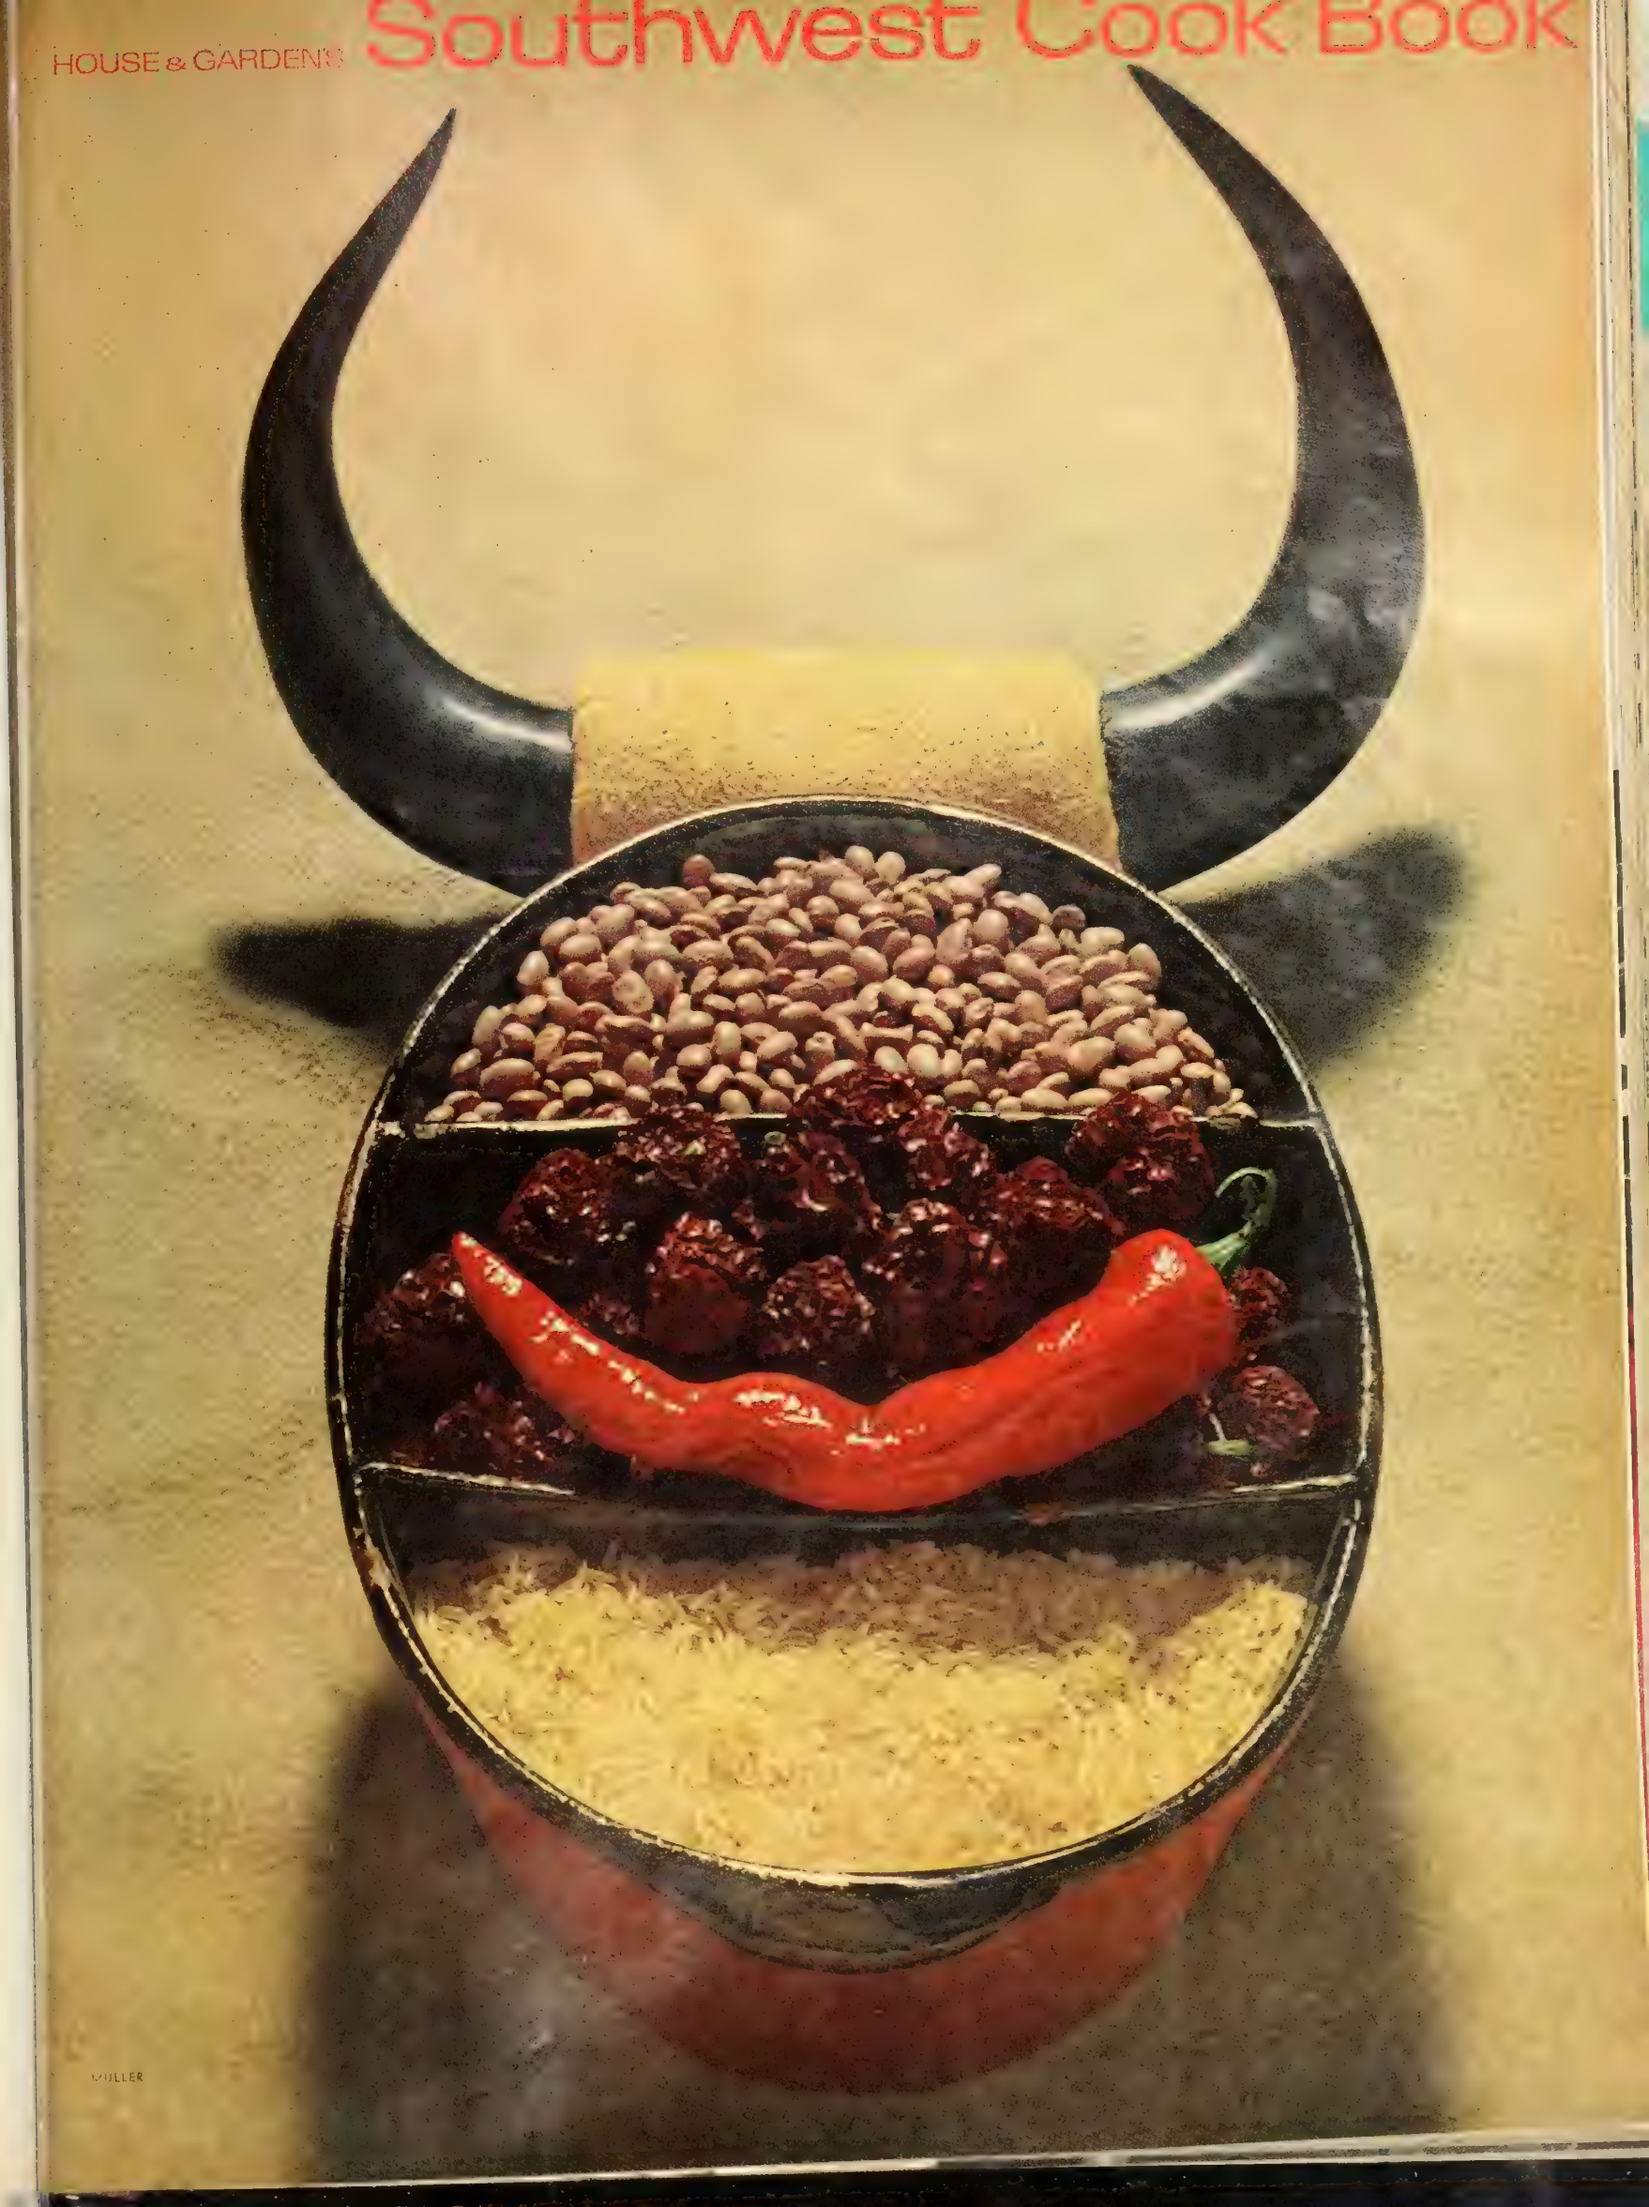
A delectable confection made from black currants, cassis has many uses. Its sharp, rich flavor is decidedly different. Try it:
1. Plain with ice and soda or water and a slice of lemon or lime.
2. As a substitute for crème de cassis in vermouth cassis. Pour dry vermouth over ice, add a dash of cassis syrup and a splash of soda. For a headier drink, add a jolt of cognac or vodka.
3. Added to a glass of chilled dry white wine or brisk champagne. Use just a few drops.
4. Mixed half-and-half with raspberry syrup and poured over ice. Add soda.

Strawberry Syrup

This is pleasant but not as pungent as other fruit syrups. The flavor is less brisk and it needs livening. Use it as follows:
1. With raspberry or pineapple sherbet added to give it zip.
2. Plain over ice with soda and a good dash of lemon or lime juice.
3. Mixed half-and-half with orange juice and poured over ice.

Orgeat

The typically European flavor of orgeat may seem strange to some American palates, but once you are accustomed to it you will welcome its addition to the home bar. Orgeat is made from sweet and bitter almonds, and its cool delicacy is most appealing. Try:
1. Orgeat over ice with soda and a touch of lemon.
2. A few drops in a Vodka Collins.



Wild Blackberry Syrup

This specialty comes from Oregon and is made from the native wild berries. Offer it in the same ways suggested for raspberry syrup or cassis syrup.

HOUSE & GARDEN'S

Southwest Cook Book

By Helen Evans Brown

The Southwest region of the United States, especially southern California, Arizona, southern Nevada, New Mexico and parts of Texas, has a rich heritage of cuisines. The Spanish and Mexican influence is strong in Texas and southern California (of late, California has also shown a growing tendency toward Oriental and Hawaiian dishes). Nevada still clings to some of the old recipes, notably saffron buns and Cornish pasties, brought from England by Cornishmen who came to work in the mines. Yet another form of sustenance, dating back to the heyday of cattle raising and ranching, is the chuckwagon chow of the cowhands, with lashings of rib-sticking stews, hot breads and steaks—in Arizona frequently cooked over a fire of mesquite wood, the hardy tree that is second only to cactus in its ability to survive the temperature extremes of the hostile desert. The Southwest specializes in big, gregarious cookouts, with poultry and meat—anything from a turkey to a whole steer—barbecued over an open fire. From the varied coastline and terrain come such native products as sand dabs, Gulf shrimp and Dungeness crab, California lemons and ripe olives, avocados and almonds, all to be turned into delicious and distinctive dishes. Apart from one or two purely local foods, the simple but appetizing dishes of the Southwest can be duplicated anywhere. The hearty chili con carne of Texas, California's unique Caesar salad and the Mexican-style dips are easy to make in quantity. Salads and vegetable dishes, often served with plain charcoal-broiled meat or poultry, are especially inventive. People eat well in this part of the country, and their freehand manner of cooking, truly American in the importation and adaptation of recipes that go with the way they live, is well worth adopting for outdoor eating or for informal entertaining.

Appetizers

The Southwest has appetizers in great variety, many of which show south-of-the-border influence, although the pupus of Hawaii and tidbits from the Orient often appear, as do variations of French hors d'oeuvre.

Chile con Queso

This dip is very popular in the Southwest and rightly so. It's both easy and inexpensive.

1 large onion, minced
1 small clove garlic, minced
4 tablespoons butter
1 pound, 13-ounce can tomatoes
4-ounce can peeled green chiles, rinsed of seeds and chopped
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup cream or evaporated milk
Salt
Tabasco
½ pound Cheddar or Jack cheese, finely diced

Cook onion and garlic in 2 tablespoons butter until soft. Add tomatoes and simmer until thick. Add chiles.

Make a sauce with the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter, the flour and the cream or evaporated milk. Cook until smooth and thick. Then add to the tomato mixture. Season to taste with salt and, if you wish, Tabasco.

About 3 or 4 minutes before serving, stir in cheese until melted. Serve, keeping mixture warm in a chafing dish or a casserole over a burner. Serve with corn chips, Fritos, crackers or tostados (toasted tortillas).

Josefinas

These appetizers are definitely influenced by Mexico, although they come from California.

4 to 5 hard dinner rolls or 24" French bread flute, cut into ¼" slices
½ pound soft butter
1 cup chopped canned green chiles, rinsed of seeds
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 cup mayonnaise
½ pound shredded Jack or Cheddar cheese

Toast bread on one side. Mix butter, chiles and garlic and spread on untoasted side of bread. Top with mixture of mayonnaise and cheese (spread topping clear to edges). Broil until brown and puffy and serve at once. Makes about 60 Josefinas.

Note. If canned chiles are unavailable, steam chopped green pepper for 4 or 5 minutes, then add a good dash of Tabasco.

Seviche-Stuffed Cherry Tomatoes

½ pound firm, raw, boneless fish
Lime or lemon juice
3 to 4 dozen cherry tomatoes
Salt
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 teaspoons minced cilantro (Chinese parsley)
1 tablespoon minced canned green chiles or dash Tabasco
Parsley or cilantro sprigs for garnish

Cover fish with lime or lemon juice and let stand in the refrigerator for 1 hour. Meanwhile, cut tops from tomatoes and scoop out pulp with a demitasse spoon or a ¼ teaspoon measure, sprinkle the insides with salt and put the tomatoes upside down to drain.

Drain fish and chop or shred it. Combine fish, onion, minced cilantro, ½ teaspoon salt and chile or Tabasco. Fill tomatoes with this mixture. Decorate tops with sprig of parsley or cilantro. Serve cold.

The seviche also makes a delicious filling for avocado halves. It may be served as a first course or as a light summer entrée.

Soups

Most of these soups are good either hot or, with the exception of the meatball soup, iced. All have distinctive touches of the Southwest.

Minguiche Fria (Cold Sour Cream Soup)

1 cup diced onion
2 tablespoons butter
4 canned peeled green chiles, rinsed of seeds
1 cup milk
Salt
1 small clove garlic, crushed (optional)
2 cups sour cream
Lemon juice
Minced cilantro or chives

Cook onion in butter until just tender. Add chiles, milk, ½ teaspoon salt and garlic. Bring to just under a boil, then whirl smooth in a blender. Stir in sour cream, then correct seasoning, adding salt if required. Add a few drops of lemon juice if needed, chill, and serve in cups, sprinkled with cilantro or chives. Serves 6.

Sopa de Albondigas (Mexican Meatball Soup)

6 cups rich beef broth or 5 cans beef bouillon
½ cup canned tomato sauce
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 small onion, minced
½ cup cooked rice
1 egg
½ pound ground meat (beef, beef and pork, or veal)
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
2 teaspoons minced cilantro, fresh mint or parsley

Mix beef broth, tomato sauce and garlic. Combine onion, rice, egg and ground meat, season with salt, pepper and cilantro and form into marble-sized balls. Bring broth mixture to a boil, drop in meatballs, cover pot and again bring to a boil. Reduce heat to a simmer and cook 25 minutes. Serves 6–8.

Ripe Olive Soup

2 4-ounce cans minced ripe olives
1 small clove garlic
3 cups chicken stock
2 eggs
1 cup cream
Salt, pepper to taste
Minced dill for garnish

Simmer olives and garlic in chicken stock for 15 minutes. Discard garlic. Beat eggs with cream and add about 1 cup of the hot stock. Mix well, then add gradually to the remaining soup. Heat, stirring until slightly thickened; do not boil. Correct seasoning and serve hot or iced, garnished with minced dill. Serves 6.

Artichoke Soup

2 large or 3 medium artichokes, split
3 cups chicken stock
8 or 9 slices lemon
2 tablespoons minced shallots
1 cup cream

Cook artichokes in stock with 2 or 3 lemon slices until tender, about 30 to 45 minutes. Discard lemon and remove artichokes from stock. Reserve stock. Cool artichokes. Peel stems and mash with one of the artichoke bottoms. Dice and reserve remaining bottoms. Scrape pulp from leaves and combine with the mashed artichoke and reserved stock. Add shallots and cream. Simmer 5 minutes, strain, correct seasoning and add diced artichoke. Serve topped with a thin slice of lemon. This soup is also good iced. Serves 6.

Cold Avocado Soup

1 avocado, fully ripe
1 can jellied consommé
Lemon juice
Salt
Dash Tabasco
Sour cream
Diced avocado for garnish (optional)

Halve avocado, remove pit and peel. Rub through a sieve and combine at once with jellied consommé, or put in a blender with the consommé and whirl until smooth. Add a few drops of lemon juice, salt to taste and Tabasco. Serve topped with sour cream and, if you wish, garnished with diced avocado. Serves 3.

Snacks and Breads

The Southwest has many favorite breads, of which the tortilla is probably the most distinctive, although sour-dough French bread is also a favorite, especially in southern California. The pasties of Nevada and sopaipillas of New Mexico are very typical of those states. If you live in the Southwest or on the West Coast, you will find tortillas in almost any market. Spanish food stores in New York City also carry them. Elsewhere in the country, you can buy canned tortillas at specialty shops, or they can be made at home from masa harina, which is tortilla flour made by The Quaker Oats Company. Directions for making them are on the package; tortilla presses are also available through the same company.

Saffron Buns

1 cake or package yeast
¼ cup warm water
1 cup milk
⅛ teaspoon powdered saffron
Sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup (2 ounces) butter
2 eggs
Flour
½ cup raisins or currants

Crumble yeast cake into the warm water and stir, or dissolve the package of yeast in the water. Warm the milk with the saffron and combine with 3 tablespoons sugar, the salt and butter. Stir until the butter has melted. Beat 1 egg and add to milk mixture with 1 cup flour and the yeast mixture. Beat well, then add raisins or currants and enough additional flour (about 2½ cups) to make a soft but not sticky dough.

Knead lightly, put into a greased bowl, turn dough upside-down so the top will be greased, too. Cover with a cloth and allow to rise until double in bulk.

Knead down, turn out on a lightly floured board and form into a long roll. Cut into 18 to 24 pieces, depending on how large you want the buns, and form into smooth balls.

Put on buttered baking sheets, flatten slightly and let rise until double in size. Brush tops with remaining egg, slightly beaten, sprinkle with sugar and bake in a preheated 375° oven for 20 minutes or until nicely browned. If preferred, the dough may be baked in muffin tins.

Nevada Cornish Pasties

"Cousin Jacks" is the nickname for these filling meat-and-potato pies which are hearty enough to make a meal. The true ones must have suet crust.

½ pound beef suet
4 cups flour
Butter
1½ teaspoons salt
Water
4 medium potatoes, peeled and thinly sliced
1 pound round steak, sliced thin and cut into 1" squares
4 onions, peeled and thinly sliced
Salt, pepper
Cream or melted butter

Put suet on a chopping board, sprinkle with ½ cup flour and chop finely. Work in remaining 3½ cups flour, ¼ cup butter, salt and just enough water to hold mixture together. Divide pastry into 4 parts and roll in 12" by 12" squares, making one square at a time.

On one side of each square of pastry arrange layers of potatoes, meat and onions, sprinkling each with salt and pepper. Dot with butter (about 1 tablespoon for each pasty). Fold pastry over filling to make turnovers, moisten edges, turn under and seal firmly. Slash tops to allow steam to escape. Brush tops with cream or melted butter and bake in a 375° oven until crust is brown and filling tender when pierced with a skewer.

Sopaipillas

These puffed-up pastries are a great favorite in New Mexico, where they are served as a hot bread, with butter. Actually, they are fritters, or buñuelos, and were originally served as a dessert with honey, powdered sugar, anise-flavored syrup.

1½ cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg, slightly beaten
Water
Fat or oil for deep frying

Combine flour, salt, baking powder and egg and add just enough water to make a stiff dough. Knead until smooth, then roll out very thin and cut in triangle or diamond shapes. Fry in deep hot (400° to 425°) fat. Turn several times to make them puff evenly. When brown and puffed, drain on paper towels and serve at once. Makes 1½ to 2 dozen, depending upon size.

Hottest news on the outdoor scene

Brand new blessing for those who could not light a charcoal fire if their lives depended on it is a pint-size grill of heavy aluminum foil with special Sparkcoal briquets that spring alight at the touch of a match, bed down to glowing coals in seconds. The briquets present no disposal problem: after hors d'oeuvre kebabs or hamburgers are cooked, briquets can be dissolved with water, poured away.

Quesadillas con Chile

These make wonderful snacks and a happy substitute for hamburgers or hot dogs.

Put a slice of Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese, 3" or 4" long and 1" wide, on one half of a fresh tortilla and lay a piece of canned peeled green chile on top. Fold over like a turnover and sauté in butter, holding the tortilla down with a spatula so it won't pop open. Turn and brown on other side. If you prefer, fasten quesadillas together with a toothpick and toast under the broiler.

Salads

The Southwest is probably most famous for its salads. This is natural, for the ingredients flourish year-round and the mild climate is particularly suited to salad eating. Salads are often offered as a first course, taking the place of an appetizer.

Caesar Salad

Although this famous West Coast salad was supposedly invented in Tijuana, it was first popularized in Hollywood.

2 cups croutons
Olive oil
2 cloves garlic
2 large heads romaine, chilled
Freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 lemon
4 or 5 anchovy fillets, cut in small pieces (optional)
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Brown the croutons in oil flavored with 1 clove garlic. Drain and reserve. Rub a capacious salad bowl with the remaining garlic clove. Break romaine into pieces and put in bowl. Pour about ¼ cup olive oil over the romaine, add a few grindings of pepper and the salt. Mix gently until every leaf is glistening with oil. Break the egg into the center of the romaine, squeeze on the juice of ½ lemon and mix thoroughly until it looks creamy. Add the anchovies, if desired, and the cheese. Mix again and taste; you may need more oil, lemon, salt or pepper. Finally add the croutons, mix quickly and serve at once. Serves 6.

Bean Sprout Salad

This unusual salad goes especially well with charcoal-broiled chicken or spit-roasted pork.

½ pound bean sprouts
½ cup thinly sliced celery
2 tablespoons minced green onions
1 teaspoon grated fresh or preserved ginger (optional)
½ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Slivered toasted almonds (optional)

Combine bean sprouts with celery, green onions and ginger. Make a dressing with the mayonnaise, soy sauce, curry powder and lemon juice. Mix gently with the bean sprouts, arrange on lettuce and, if you wish, sprinkle with almonds. This salad is excellent mixed with ½ pound of crab meat and a little additional dressing.

Electric skillet takes over terrace cookery

Nowadays all you need is an outlet and you're an outdoor chef. California version of Japanese butayaki is cooked in an electric fry pan, which regulates the temperature for fast or slow cooking. Each guest picks up with chopsticks a selection of meat and vegetables from the platter and drops them into the pan. Small dish of mixed-to-taste sauce stands by for dunking the cooked meat.

Celery Victor

Allow 1 celery heart for each serving. Split hearts lengthwise, trim root and lay in a shallow pan such as a chicken fryer. Cover with chicken stock, add a bouquet of bay leaf, parsley and thyme and simmer until just tender. Let cool in the stock, then drain, carefully pressing out excess stock (save the stock for soup). Arrange celery hearts on individual dishes, two halves to a serving, and sprinkle with coarsely ground black pepper, minced parsley and chervil. Make a dressing with 1 part tarragon vinegar to 2 parts olive oil and salt to taste. Pour the dressing over the celery hearts and chill thoroughly. Garnish the celery hearts with anchovy strips and pimiento strips before serving.

Persimmon and Grapefruit Salad

This is an old favorite in southern California although a new version, papaya and grapefruit, may soon supplant it.

Ripe persimmons or papayas, peeled
Romaine leaves
Grapefruit sections
¼ cup olive oil
¼ cup bland salad oil
3 tablespoons lemon juice
Salt, pepper to taste

Cut peeled persimmons or papayas in long slices and arrange on romaine leaves alternately with grapefruit. Make a dressing with olive and salad oils, lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste and pour the dressing over the fruits. Chill well before serving.

Orange and Mint Salad

Peel oranges, removing all white pith. Slice, discarding ends, and arrange in overlapping slices on plates. Sprinkle with finely chopped fresh mint. Make a dressing with ¼ cup olive oil, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 tablespoon cognac. Pour the dressing over the orange slices and chill well before serving. This salad is served without lettuce, although it may be garnished with a little watercress.

Entrées

Besides the main dishes that are served generally throughout the country, there are some typical of the Southwest, many of them showing the Mexican influence, some the Oriental, and, more recently, the French. Creole dishes are found in parts of Texas on the Gulf Coast and close to New Orleans

Butayaki

This is a Japanese dish, a version of sukiyaki in which the ingredients are cooked in butter instead of in shoyu and stock. In California, an electric skillet is put on the dining table and each guest cooks his own butayaki. The ingredients should be attractively arranged on a platter or leaf-lined basket and each guest should be provided with a pair of chopsticks for cooking and eating the butayaki, a small plate and a dish for sauce, which is made by each guest according to taste.

Butter or beef suet
3 medium onions, peeled and cut in ¼" slices
1½ pounds lean beef, preferably tenderloin, sliced very thin
1 cucumber, peeled and sliced
Choice of: thinly sliced eggplant, carrot, green onions, Chinese cabbage

Melt a lump of butter or beef suet in the skillet, add the onion and cook until just hot but still crisp. Let each guest pick up some beef with his chopsticks and cook it in the skillet. Remove meat and cook any other chosen vegetables. A little soy sauce and a tiny bit of water may be added to the skillet after the meat is cooked; this helps to cook the vegetables, although they should be on the crisp side. Each guest dips his cooked meat in the sauce and eats it with his choice of vegetables. Serves 4.

Sauce. Have on hand in small dishes to be mixed to taste: Japanese shoyu sauce, grated daikon (Japanese radish), grated fresh ginger and seven spices (all of these ingredients are available at Japanese markets).

Chili con Carne

This is not, as many people think, a Mexican dish, but a specialty of Texas. It usually contains plenty of frijoles (beans). Some people grind the meat, but it is better if cut into small dice.

2 tablespoons lard or shortening
2 pounds lean pork or beef, cut into very small dice
2 tablespoons flour
1 pound dried pink beans, soaked overnight and cooked until just tender or 4 to 5 cans kidney beans
2 cloves garlic, finely minced or crushed
1 teaspoon oregano
Pinch ground cumin
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 cups liquid in which beans cooked or juice from cans plus water

Heat the shortening and brown the meat. Add the flour and combine with the beans, garlic, oregano, cumin, salt, chili powder and bean liquid. Simmer for 1 hour, or until meat is tender, adding water if necessary. Correct seasoning and serve in bowls. Serves 6–8.

Gobey Crab Stew

1 pound Dungeness crab meat
½ cup medium-dry sherry
1 large onion, finely chopped
1 green pepper, finely chopped
2 tomatoes, skinned and diced
2 ounces butter
1 small clove garlic, crushed (optional)
1 cup cream
Salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce
Toast

Carefully pick over the crab meat, cover with sherry and let stand 2 hours. Cook the onion, green pepper and tomato in the butter until onion is tender. Add garlic, if desired, and cream. Add crab meat and heat gently. Correct seasoning, adding salt, pepper and a dash of Worcestershire sauce. Serve with toast. Serves 4. This is a good chafing dish recipe.

Texas Gumbo

1 cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons butter
1 pound okra, cut in pieces
2 tablespoons flour
2½ cups skinned, chopped tomatoes
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 quarts water or fish stock
2 teaspoons salt
1 herb bouquet (parsley, thyme, bay leaf)
½ pound raw shelled shrimp
½ pound crab meat
1 pint raw oysters
1 tablespoon filé powder
Tabasco
Cooked rice

Cook onion in butter until soft. Add okra and cook 4 or 5 minutes, then stir in flour and mix until smooth. Add tomatoes, garlic, water, salt and herb bouquet. Simmer for 1 hour. Discard herb bouquet, add shellfish, including liquor from oysters, and cook 10 minutes. Remove from fire, add filé powder and Tabasco to taste. Serve at once, pouring over a generous amount of rice in soup plates. Serves 8 generously.

Wok on wheels cooks in quantity

That classic Chinese cooking pot, the wok, is the latest thing for outdoor entertaining. As an accessory to the round barbecue kettle, the coolie-hat-shaped wok fits on top, over the charcoal. Although it can be used for Chinese stir-fry cooking, here it heats up a mass of chili con carne. Salad makings are nested over ice in a Thermalene stand-up server. New Mexican Junior Goose with Fruit Stuffing

Junior geese, which are young birds without the usual excess of fat, are raised in New Mexico, where they are put out under the pecan trees to keep the weeds down. If you can't get a junior goose in your part of the country, try using a duck instead.

1 junior goose
½ cup currants
½ cup nuts (pecans, almonds or walnuts)
2 cups chopped apple
2 eggs, slightly beaten
3 cups bread crumbs
Cream
Salt and pepper
Prunes, pitted and soaked overnight in red wine

Remove liver, gizzard and heart of goose and cook in water to cover until tender, then drain and chop. (Save the stock for gravy.) Add currants, nuts, apple, eggs, bread crumbs and enough cream to moisten slightly. Season with salt and pepper to taste and stuff the goose. Fasten opening and roast in a 400° oven for 20 minutes. Prick skin, reduce heat to 325°, and continue roasting the goose for 2½ hours or until the juice runs clear when the leg is pricked. Serve garnished with prunes. Serves 6.

Tongue or Ham with Raisin Sauce

¼ cup (2 ounces) butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup bouillon (or liquid in which tongue was boiled)
½ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup blanched slivered almonds
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 thin slices lemon, cut in quarters
¼ cup sherry
Baked ham or smoked tongue

Lightly brown butter in a pan, add flour and bouillon and cook, stirring until thickened. Add raisins, almonds, cloves and cinnamon. Let simmer until raisins are plump, then add lemon and sherry. Serve with hot or cold ham or tongue.

Shrimp Creole, Gulf Style

3 pounds medium-sized raw shrimp
¼ cup (2 ounces) butter
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped celery
3 tablespoons minced parsley
1 clove garlic
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons flour
Tabasco to taste
2 8-ounce cans tomato sauce

Shell and devein shrimp. Rinse under cold water and drain. Melt butter in a saucepan. Add onion, green pepper, celery and parsley and cook until soft. Crush garlic in salt. Add garlic, thyme, pepper and flour. Cook, stirring, for 2 minutes, then add a good dash of Tabasco and the tomato sauce. Heat, add shrimp and just enough hot water to cover them. Simmer for 8 or 10 minutes. Correct seasoning, adding more salt and Tabasco, if needed. Serve with rice. Serves 6.

Chilaquillas

This is a poor man's dish and is made with leftover tortillas.

6 tortillas
Lard or oil for frying
1 large onion, chopped
2 or 3 peeled green chiles, chopped
1 pound tomatoes, peeled and chopped
½ cup water
Salt to taste
1 cup diced Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese
Grated Parmesan cheese

Cut tortillas in strips and fry lightly in lard or oil. Drain well. Cook onion, chiles and tomatoes in 1 tablespoon of the shortening for 4 to 5 minutes. Add water and salt to taste. Simmer a few minutes and add Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese. Cook until cheese begins to melt, add tortillas, mix well, and serve at once, sprinkled generously with Parmesan cheese. (Sometimes cream cheese is used instead of the Monterey Jack.) Serves 6.

Barbecue wagon parks the party

With this all-in-one barbecue, bar and buffet, you can roll the cookout to any likely spot on your own home grounds, with everything handily grouped together. While drinks are mixed on one side of the wagon, steaks can be broiled and salad prepared on the hardwood chopping block on the other. Drop shelf adds an extra serving surface. Outsize salad bowl, 19¾" in diameter, sits on its own stand, which folds for storage when not in use.

Arizona Steak with Salsa

Arizonans love to go out in the desert for a "steak fry" where, in spite of the name, the steaks are broiled, usually over a fire of mesquite.

1 pound ripe tomatoes, peeled
1 large sweet onion
2 or 3 chopped green chiles (canned ones may be used)
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons vinegar
Broiled steak

Chop together tomatoes, onion and chiles and add salt and vinegar. Serve cold on piping hot steak. It is good with hamburgers, too. Makes about 1½ cups sauce.

Pozole with Pork

1½ pounds pork, cut in cubes
1 tablespoon shortening
2 cups chopped onions
3 cups canned hominy, undrained
2 cloves garlic, pressed
¼ cup Spanish-style tomato sauce
Salt, pepper to taste
Minced parsley

Brown the pork cubes in the shortening. Add the onions and cook until soft. Stir in the hominy, garlic and tomato sauce. Add salt and pepper to taste and cook in a 350° oven or on top of the stove until the meat is tender and the sauce reduced. Sprinkle with minced parsley before serving. This is a good casserole or main dish to serve with a salad. Serves 6.

Cracked Dungeness Crab

This is one of California's great dishes because of the superb flavor of the Dungeness crabs. They are usually sold already boiled and any fish dealer knows how to "crack" them. This means cleaning them, cutting them into pieces and cracking the shells. Allow 1 large crab for 2 servings and arrange on a bed of chopped ice, accompanied by lemon wedges, a homemade mayonnaise made with olive oil and lemon juice, and plenty of crusty French bread (preferably sour dough) and sweet butter. A good dry white wine such as Chablis or a Pinot Chardonnay is also in order with this dish.

Note. Dungeness crab is shipped, cooked, to all Southwestern states. It is also sometimes frozen and sent to other parts of the country, but it suffers somewhat in flavor.

California Omelette

2 green onions, minced
2 tablespoons butter
4 or 5 fresh mushrooms, sliced
2 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
1 avocado, peeled and diced
Salt, pepper to taste
6 eggs
1 tablespoon cream

Sauté onions in butter until wilted. Add mushrooms and cook 5 minutes, then add tomatoes. Cook 2 minutes, stirring, then add avocado.

Sprinkle with salt and pepper and remove from the heat while you make a 6-egg omelette. Turn omelette out on a warm platter, add cream to tomato mixture and heat about 30 seconds. Pour tomato mixture around omelette before serving. Serves 3.

Chicken à la Leon d'Oro

This dish can be done at the table in an electric chafing dish or skillet.

1 plump frying chicken, cut in serving pieces
Salt, pepper
¼ cup olive oil
1 green pepper, chopped
1 clove garlic, finely minced
Pinch oregano
½ cup Marsala
6-ounce can butter-broiled sliced mushrooms
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup tomato sauce

Sprinkle chicken pieces with salt and pepper. Brown them on all sides in olive oil. Remove to a dish. Add to the pan the green pepper, garlic, oregano, Marsala, mushrooms, butter and tomato sauce. Simmer 5 minutes, return chicken to pan, cover and cook over low heat until fork tender. Serves 4.

Sand Dabs Meunière

These little fish are among the most delicious on the West Coast, and are best when cooked simply. Allow 1 for each person.

Have sand dabs cleaned and the fins removed. The head may be left on, or not, as desired. Dip them in flour, then sauté in clarified butter until the fish are browned on both sides. This should be done quickly so the fish will not become dry. Remove to a hot platter and add more butter to the skillet, allowing 2 tablespoons for each fish. For each fish add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon minced parsley, heat and serve in a sauceboat. The bones of the fish will lift out easily, leaving a delicately flavored and moist morsel.

Charcoal-Roasted Turkey

Outdoor cooking is taken for granted in the Southwest, and unstuffed spit-roasted turkey is a great favorite for parties.

Truss a 14- to 16-pound turkey carefully, tying the wings and legs close to the body. Sprinkle inside with salt and put a few sprigs of parsley or tarragon into the opening. Run spit from a point on the back just in front of the tail, through the very end of the breast bone; this assures good balance. Roast over a moderate fire for 2 to 3 hours, or until the juice runs clear when turkey is pricked with a fork and leg moves easily. Baste occasionally with a mixture of melted butter, olive oil and Italian vermouth in equal amounts. Serve with charcoal-roasted corn and yams and a green salad. Serves 12 or more.

Vegetables

Southwesterners are particularly lucky when it comes to vegetables, as there is a plentiful supply of them throughout the year. Green vegetables are often cooked tender-crisp, in the Oriental manner, and therefore remain very flavorful and delicious.

Asparagus San Fernando

Clean asparagus and discard the tough ends. Cut in thin (not more than ¼") slices, on the diagonal. Put in rapidly boiling salted water, and when the water again comes to the boil, cook exactly 2 minutes. Drain at once and dress simply with butter and salt. A pound will serve 2 generously. This is a wonderful way to cook asparagus and it goes farther.

.1 economy meat recipes.

Low-level grill is also a fireplace

Ingenious "lobachi" progresses with the party. With a plastic or wood top, it serves as a cocktail table. When grill and charcoal replace the top, it cooks the meal. Afterward, it provides a portable fireplace with footrest for guests seated on straw hassocks or floor cushions. Steel lobachi is lightweight but sturdy, requires only sand layer in the bottom as insulation against heat. For shopping information, write H&G Reader Service, 420 Lexington Ave., N. Y. C.

Colache

This is a sort of succotash, originally made with pumpkin, but any squash, winter or summer, will do. If hard-shelled, peel and remove seeds. Summer squash or zucchini will not need peeling unless it is large and tough.

¼ cup bacon fat or other shortening
3 cups diced pumpkin or squash
1 onion, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 canned green chile, chopped (optional)
1 clove garlic, minced
3 cups stewed or canned tomatoes
1 cup green beans, cut in ½" slices
Kernels of 3 ears green corn, cut from cob
½ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper

Melt bacon fat in a heavy pan and add squash, onion, green pepper, chile and minced garlic. Cook, stirring, for about 5 minutes. Add tomatoes, beans, corn, water and salt. Cover and simmer until the vegetables are tender. Correct seasoning, adding salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. Serves 8.

Texas Stuffed Onions

6 large onions, peeled
¼ pound salt pork, diced
½ cup bread crumbs
¾ cup chopped pecans
2 teaspoons salt
1 herb bouquet (parsley, thyme, bay leaf)
½ pound raw shelled shrimp
½ pound crab meat
1 pint raw oysters
1 tablespoon filé powder
Tabasco
Cooked rice

Cook onion in butter until soft. Add okra and cook 4 or 5 minutes, then stir in flour and mix until smooth. Add tomatoes, garlic, water, salt and herb bouquet. Simmer for 1 hour. Discard herb bouquet, add shellfish, including liquor from oysters, and cook 10 minutes. Remove from fire, add filé powder and Tabasco to taste. Serve at once, pouring over a generous amount of rice in soup plates. Serves 8 generously.

Frijoles

Here is a vegetable dish that isn't found anywhere else in the country. Frijoles are beans, usually dried pink or pinto beans. They are cooked in warm water (sometimes after soaking overnight) until tender, with salt added at the end. Often an onion or minced garlic and a pinch of ground cumin are cooked with them. Usually they are then fried, meaning they are drained, mashed slightly, heated through in lard or oil and seasoned to taste. These beans should be fairly juicy. The most popular version of frijoles is frijoles refritos, or refried beans. Melt some lard in a heavy pan, add the mashed fried beans and cook very slowly, stirring occasionally, until the liquid has dried out and the beans are crispy around the edges. It is impossible to say how much lard, but a generous amount is in order.

Desserts

Except for the fact that a great deal of fresh fruit is used, Southwest desserts are pretty much the same as they are in the rest of the country. These, however, are typical of the region.

Indio Date Cake

1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1½ cups dates, pitted and finely cut
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg, separated
1½ cups flour
½ cup walnuts, chopped
Powdered sugar

Add baking soda and salt to boiling water. Pour over dates. Let stand 20 minutes. Meanwhile, cream together butter and sugar. Beat in egg yolk, flour and the date mixture. Combine thoroughly, then add walnuts. Finally, beat the egg white until stiff but not dry, and fold into the mixture. Pour into a buttered 8" by 12" baking pan and bake in a 350° oven for 30 or 40 minutes, or until it shrinks away from the edges of the pan. Cool, sprinkle top with powdered sugar, and cut in squares to serve. Serves 6–8.

Texas Pecan Torte

3 cups pecans
6 eggs, separated
1½ cups sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons Jamaica rum
½ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate bits
½ cup sour cream

Put pecans in the blender (1 cup at a time) and whirl until very fine. Beat egg yolks until very light, then beat in sugar, flour, salt, 2 tablespoons rum and nuts. Mix well, then fold in egg whites that have been beaten until stiff but not dry. Pour into three 8" or two 10" layer-cake pans that have been lined with waxed paper and buttered. Bake in a preheated 350° oven until a gentle finger pressure fails to leave a mark, about 25 minutes. Cool and remove from pans.

A few hours before serving put together with filling of the cream whipped with the powdered sugar and 1 tablespoon of Jamaica rum. For icing, melt the semi-sweet chocolate bits, fold in the sour cream and spread over the top of the cake. Serves 6–10.

California Deep-Dish Apple Pie

¼ cup almonds, blanched or unblanched
¾ cup butter
¼ cup lard
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups flour
4 pounds tart apples
1 cup sugar
Juice and grated rind of 1 orange
2 to 3 tablespoons rum
Thick cream

To make the crust, put almonds in blender and whirl until fine. Mix ¼ cup of the butter, the lard, salt, flour and enough water to hold the dough together. Form in a ball, wrap in waxed paper and refrigerate while preparing the apples.

Peel and slice apples into a baking dish about 2" deep. Melt the remaining butter and combine with the sugar and the orange juice and rind. Pour mixture over the apples and mix in. Roll out almond dough to fit over the top of the dish (use it all; you don't want the crust too thin). Cut 2 or 3 holes in the dough, then cover the apples, pressing crust down at edges. Bake in a preheated 450° oven for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 325° and cook until the apples are tender (prod with a skewer through one of the holes). Pour rum through one of the holes and tilt pie back and forth so that it will be evenly distributed. Serve warm with thick cream. Serves 8.

Lemon Cake-Top Pudding

This is custardy at the bottom, like a cake on top.

1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons flour
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup milk

Cream the butter and flour. Add sugar, well-beaten egg yolks, lemon juice and milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into an unbuttered 1-quart baking dish. Set in a pan of water and bake for 35 minutes in a 360° oven. Serves 4.

Loganberry Syrup

This much neglected berry has a tart, fruity taste that is most refreshing. Use it:
1. Plain with ice and soda or water.
2. Combined with vodka and ice and a dash of lemon for a delightfully cooling summer drink.

Fruit Punch

A blend of various fruit flavors, this syrup is pleasant served:
1. Plain with ice and soda.
2. Combined with rum, vodka or gin and ice.
3. Blended with fresh fruit juices.

Falernum

This syrup from the West Indies is lightly flavored with almonds and limes. It makes a delightful addition to fruit juices, liquors or blended drinks and is especially excellent with light rum. Many people prefer falernum to simple syrup or sugar as a sweetener.

It is also a good idea to make up some simple sugar syrups for sweetening and flavoring summer drinks. Here are two old stand-bys:

Sugar Syrup

Pour 1 pint tepid water over 2 pounds sugar and allow to stand, stirring occasionally, for 8 to 10 hours, or until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Add almond or vanilla flavoring and bottle. Use at the bar for mixed drinks or for sweetening fruits.

Tea Syrup

This is an ideal flavoring for summer drinks or punches. Pour 1 quart boiling water over 1½ ounces tea and let stand for 3 hours. Strain. Make a syrup by bringing 1 pint water and 1 pound sugar to a boil. Boil two minutes. Remove from the fire and add the tea. Cool and bottle.

WINES

Homemade wines are not entirely a thing of the past. Many enterprising souls still prepare dandelion, rhubarb, elderberry, raisin wines and many others. If you would like to experiment, there are several recipe books available. One little volume which includes complete information on storage as well as preparation is "An Intoxicating Hobby" by Guy Wells, published by Comet Press Books, New York.

Otherwise you can find interesting fruit wines in the shops, many of which make pleasant between-meal drinks. Some need chilling, and most benefit by the addition of a twist of lemon or orange zest. Here are some wines to look for:

Imported Raspberry, Strawberry and Cherry Wines

Some of the best come from Denmark and have been on the American market for some time. Others come from Sweden and France. They are all reminiscent of the old-fashioned homemade wines, but are smoother and have a more finished taste. For those whose taste runs to bone-dry table wines, they are a little on the sweet side, but they have good, true fruit flavor and are justly popular as summer coolers when well chilled. Try the cherry and raspberry wines with a touch of soda and ice.

American Apple, Loganberry and Blackberry Wines

It's worth trying some of these native fruit wines if you can find them. Most are local products sold only in their own areas, but a few are distributed more widely. Blackberry wine, as you may know, was once a home remedy for digestive troubles. Today it is accepted as a tasty fruit drink. Serve all these wines well chilled, or over ice.

Green Ginger Wine

This English import is distributed quite widely in the States. It has a brisk, spicy, satisfying taste. Drink it:
1. Plain, well chilled.
2. As an apéritif, chilled, before a summer luncheon featuring curry. It is equally good served with the curry dish.
3. Blended with fresh lemon, orange or lime juice.
4. As a mildly alcoholic ice-cream soda: ginger wine plus ice cream and soda water.
5. In a tall cooling drink, combined with rum, ice, lemon and soda.

RATAFIAS

In times past, cordials homemade from seasonal fruits, nuts or flowers were a standard household item. Originally they were considered a necessary adjunct in sealing a bargain. The two parties involved ratified the agreement by sipping one of these cordials—hence the name "ratafia."

Ratafias are simple to make, although they do take time to age. Here are some recipes tried and tested by William Veach, a long-time resident of France, who is preparing a book on the subject.

Brou de Noix

This is the most renowned of the homemade brandies in France. It is made from green walnuts. The nuts must be so green and so soft that they can be pierced, shell and all, with a needle.

36 green English walnuts in shell
2 quarts cognac
Sugar

Put the green nuts in their shells in a crock or gallon Mason jar and cover with cognac. Seal so no air can enter and allow to stand for 2 months. Strain and filter the liquor and add 1 pound of sugar for each quart of liquid. When the sugar is dissolved, bottle the liquid and seal it. Allow it to rest for another 2 or 3 months before tasting. The resultant liquor will be quite black in color.

Ratafia of Spicy Carnations

This unusual drink can only be made if you grow the spicy, fragrant variety of carnations or pinks. Bright red flowers are considered the best.

When the blossoms are at their fragrant peak, gather enough to make 2 pounds. Rinse and shake them and place them in a crock with 1 quart of cognac, a small stick of cinnamon bark, 6 cloves and a pound of sugar. Seal the crock and infuse for 6 weeks. Strain and press the flowers well, drawing out all the liquid. Filter the liquor, pour it into bottles and seal.

A Summer Cordial

1 quart ripe raspberries
1 quart ripe red currants
3 quarts ripe cherries (Royal Anne or Bing)
1 quart alcohol or 100-proof vodka

Crush the fruits lightly and put them in a crock or large jar. Add the alcohol or vodka. Seal and infuse for 3 days. Strain, filter and measure the juice. For each quart of liquid add: 1 pint cognac, ⅔ cup sugar, a small piece cinnamon bark, 2 cloves and 3 peppercorns. Seal and infuse for 8 days. Filter again and bottle. Seal the bottles.

Homemade Citrus Liqueur

3 quarts cognac
3 ripe oranges
3 lemons
3 pounds sugar

Place cognac, unpeeled fruit and sugar in a large jar and seal airtight. Let stand in the sun for 39 days. (Cloudy days do not count.) Filter, bottle and seal.

Liqueur of Apricot Pits

Blanch ⅔ cup apricot pits and place in a jar with 1 gallon cognac. Seal and let stand for 2 months. Filter the liquor and add 1 pound sugar for each quart. Bottle and seal.

We left Bangkok on a Japan Air Lines Flight for Tokyo, then went by car to Yokohama to board the American President Lines' ship, the President Cleveland, for the voyage home.

One of the passengers was en route to Honolulu after a five months' flying trip through Europe, Africa and Asia. Another had traveled across the Pacific on the President Wilson, had left the ship in Hong Kong, traveled in Japan and had boarded the Cleveland for the return voyage. (There are innumerable air-sea combinations with the American President Lines' schedules; three days to three weeks in Japan; two to fourteen days in the Philippines; two weeks for a side trip from Hong Kong to Thailand, Cambodia, Singapore or India with a later ship always at hand.)

It was fifteen years since I had been aboard an ocean liner. When I woke up the first morning out and looked around at my gay cabin with crisp green and white curtains, reached for the telephone and ordered my breakfast, knowing that I had no commitments except for a promenade, I fell back in delicious relaxation.

The Pacific Ocean lived up to its name, even in December, and three days out of Yokohama the weather was fine for swimming and sun-bathing and buffet luncheon on deck. Every night we puzzled over which of the twelve courses to select. The embarrassment of riches included caviar,

H&G'S GARDENER'S

How to plant and swing a hanging basket

Pot—courtesy of The Greenhouse

The best way to have a good hanging basket is to make it. To make the basket on these pages, we first borrowed a hand-thrown unglazed pot newly designed by Binetsky, then cadged three plants (an episcia, an aeschynanthus and a hybrid columnea in 3-inch pots) from the Charles D. Websters' gardener, Joseph A. De Marco (whose deft hands we borrowed, too), then assembled the basket. Working time, from ingredients (opposite top) to swivel hook (left) : eight minutes. The slashed pottery basket allows good ventilation but retains moisture better than wire or plastic could. The swivel hook—of stainless steel to avoid rusting and jamming (from the deep-sea fishing department of a good sporting goods store)—permits easy turning of the basket for esthetic or orientation reasons, or both. After the original installation is completed, the key to continuing success is frequent watering and fertilizing. Water may be required twice a day in dry times or where winds are strong or where baskets receive full sunlight. Every fortnight or so, apply soluble plant food according to directions for the particular brand you use. A location out of the wind and strong sun is desirable. The moss with which most baskets (as opposed to mere pots) are lined serves not only to prevent the earth from washing out of the drain openings, but to provide a moisture stabilizing layer between the roots and the world outside. Otherwise common sense rules, as it does with all pot plants.

MONTH

Plain or fancy, good hanging baskets such as those on pages 120-125 all start the same way

The first step in preparing a hanging basket is getting the right basket. While an ordinary clay or plastic pot will do (provided you can figure out how to hang it plumb and level), something that is less obtrusive or more decorative when hung at eye level will be better. Collect your materials, including plants, before you start.

1. Left to right: 8-inch hand-thrown clay basket with nylon cords (very strong, rustproof and all but invisible when in place); three plants: episcia 'Velvet Princess,' Aeschynanthus marmoratus and columnea 'Anna C'; scoopful of fertile loam with plenty of coarse sand and leafmold; a foot or so of sheet moss to line the container.

2. Sheet moss, a standard florist's staple, is fitted into basket and trimmed around top like pie crust. Make sure moss, although bought dry, is moistened enough to keep from crumbling and to hold even more moisture readily when you water it. And fit pieces carefully so that loose earth will not seep through.

3. Put earth directly into bottom of lined basket (without special drainage material since both moss and container have ample draining ability). To avoid undue settling later, earth should be firm below root area but not packed.

4. Turn plants out of their original pots with roots intact and place with care in the soil in basket. Plants should be set, one at a time, around edge of basket in such a way that hanging cords will not damage or interfere with trailing stems, either now or later on.

5. Provide adequate soil around and between individual plants (although, of course, all roots will soon fill entire basket) and press firmly into place. Avoid the temptation to use too many or too large plants at the outset, lest the character of the plants soon be lost in a shapeless mass of luxuriance or—even worse—of starveling stems.

Notes for August Gardeners

This month is a catchall for odds and ends too diverse for categorizing

First weekend

Level look. You dig up a new garden Saturday morning, say, and you rake it smooth and even before lunch. Then you plant it Saturday afternoon and it looks fine. Then you have a hard rain Saturday night. Sunday morning the garden looks as though a giant had stomped among the plants in seven league boots. In other words, the newly turned ground had not been allowed to settle before it was raked and/or planted. Except for compaction by mechanical means, there is no recourse other than time and a little weather if you want to obtain a true surface before you set your plants in a new border. Air pockets, earth clods of variable density, slightly different soil consistencies are inevitable when you prepare a bed, however small it may be. It is well to recognize this before you take advantage of the almost ideal digging conditions of late summer. Your remedy, of course, requires no extra work—just patience. Let your soil sit rough for a week or so—even a few days, if that is all the time you can spare. Then fill the low spots, reduce the highs and rake the whole to whatever degree of fineness you require (which, incidentally, need not be much if only the plants' welfare is concerned; too much raking tends to reduce the soils porosity). Then do your planting and watering.

A brace of books: Two utterly dissimilar volumes commend themselves to the gardener's attention. One, Nelson Coon's "Using Plants for Healing" (Hearthside, $4.95) is far more readable than the nonsense implications of its title. It is full of delightful lore about the once generally (and now less often) practical applications of herbs in healing every human ill you can think of. The other book is an almost bewilderingly complete photographic plant-finder's dream, George W. D. Symonds' "The Shrub Identification Book," with photographs by A. W. Merwin (Barrows, $15). There are more than 3,500 illustrations, the jacket says (and we can believe it), and they are extraordinarily explicit. The book has one fault among its several real virtues—it is very over-organized. You can spend as much time figuring out how to use it as you do in using it. Otherwise, it is worth its price for the permanent shelf.

Second weekend

August white sale. When you use it alone, white is not as cool a "color" as people are inclined to think—it may, on a sunny day, be just glaring. But when you mix it with, or see it against, green foliage, white can be more cooling than a dish of lemon ice (or a tall mint julep, depending on your taste). In flowers, white is not a hard shade to come by. In permanent (woody) plants, the answers are not so easy. Among the best choices, however, you must surely include the stewartias, the clethras and franklinia. There are two stewartia species, either of which is handsome the year round, and one of which is available in a variety that is a little more spectacular than any others you can readily buy. One is S. ovata (see above), which reaches 15 feet or more at maturity and bears in August a profusion of saucerlike white flowers with golden anthers. The variety S. ovata grandiflora differs in having purple stamens. The other, and in some ways most satisfactory, species is S. pseudocamellia, which grows taller and is especially distinguished by flaking brown and gray (exfoliating) bark. Thus its winter aspect is of great ornamental value, either isolated or against a background of tall evergreens. Clethra alnifolia, the durable and fragrant summer sweet or sweet pepperbush, has 6-inch spires of tiny white florets, attractive to bees, and will not only illume but will also perfume the late summer garden—in sun or shade, in dry ground or, especially, in wet. Even though white is the watchword at the moment, we should point out that there is a pink-flowering form of the species that is lovely, too, although perhaps not as fragrant as the white. As for Franklinia alatamaha, it makes a late-leafing, noble shrub, single trunked but low branching, that may reach 20 feet or more. It has striated gray bark, long oval leaves that turn a lovely red bronze in the fall and white camellia-like flowers (it is a relative of the stewartias) with gold anthers from deep summer on until late fall.

Third weekend

Ring around the roses. The ring, of course, is fertilizer. And the eleventh hour for feeding roses is coming up. In most temperate regions, where roses are likely to lose their leaves and go dormant by November, mid-August is about the last date for fertilizing. Any later feeding may tend to produce soft growth which creates energy-demanding buds that the plant will be unable to carry on to successful flowering before frost. But an early August fertilizing will almost certainly pay off in fine October flowers. (Parenthetically, no major rose photograph in H&G during the last five years has depicted any but fall-flowering rose blossoms.) The recommended feeding dates apply, of course, only to conventional dry fertilizers. If you have been using soluble plant foods in liquid applications, all of which become effective more rapidly than any dry types that could be safely used, then you may be able to extend the feeding program even into September. This presupposes that you have been applying the liquid food in relatively mild doses at fairly frequent intervals (even every fortnight or so) ever since early June. The point, of course, is to require of your bushes that they manufacture no more succulent wood during the summer than they can successfully (that implies flowers) ripen before winter. What fertilizer you use is not especially important as long as it is close to a 5-10-5 or 6-8-6 proportion. An extremely high-nitrogen mix (such as 12-6-2, for example) might throw your plants out of balance, producing extra leaves at the expense of buds and blossoms. And if you are a practitioner of foliar feeding, with a hose applicator, look out that you don't give your plants dyspepsia. Roses overfed this way might almost literally burn themselves out.

Fourth weekend

Waterworks. Wasting water is a great American outdoor sport that wouldn't make sense even if the national supply of water were plentiful, which it is not. A good case can be made for the use of plants to conserve and localize soil nutrients and to prevent erosion. This means a good case can be made for using water (other than natural rainfall) to make plants grow better. But if half the water that comes out of your hose is going to wind up in the storm sewers, or otherwise fail of its best purpose, then something should be done about it. That something could be a childlike game of making rivers and canals in your garden—really small irrigation ditches—to lead water from plant to plant where it will do the most good. Your garden may look a little as though a new breed of sun-loving moles had been at work. But these earthworks make watering more purposeful and less frequently needed, and there is always a hoe in the rack waiting to fill the trenches. If you exercise care in the location of your irrigation furrows, and in the point where you lay your hose nozzle, you can reduce water waste almost to zero and avoid many of the attendant ills and inconveniences associated with muddy ground and wet foliage. Puddling of the soil can cause an air-starved condition of plant roots, and overwet foliage may induce mildew and the more rapid development of many spore-borne diseases. Make sure, incidentally, that the water you put at one end of your irrigation line gets to the far end before being absorbed entirely into the ground.

Final book note. Two titles for home landscaping aspirants deserve mention. The first, devoted wholly to planning and laying out your grounds, is, simply, "Landscaping Your Home" by William R. Nelson Jr. (University of Illinois, College of Agriculture, $2 postpaid). It is simple, direct, practical and, above all and mirabile dictu, interesting. The other, of which landscaping as such is a major but not the only part, is Nancy Grasby's "Imaginative Small Gardens" (Hearthside, $4.95). This is a rather helter-skelter book, but full of practical and surprisingly helpful specific ideas about general landscaping problems.

cherries jubilee, baked Alaska and schillerlocken. Outside of Kitzbühel and St. Moritz, I never had tasted better pastry. Captain Nielsen told me that there were five pastry cooks aboard.

The ship stopped at Honolulu for a day. Some of the passengers went on an organized tour, others took off independently to swim or to visit friends, as I did.

At Waikiki, I stopped at Mrs. Alice Bowen's Lacquer Shop to see her collection of oriental art treasures, and against all my resolutions I acquired another package—an Imari ashtray.

When the ship docked in San Francisco and I watched my shipboard friends disperse, I thought nostalgically of those thirteen days in which newly acquired knowledge of The Far East had slowly wound around me like a cocoon. Aboard ship, I had regained lost hours gradually instead of in one gulp. I would make another sea voyage, I hoped, soon.

HARDY Lilies FROM WAYSIDE

In Wayside's exciting new 144-page Fall catalog you will find a large selection of the world's finest hardy garden Lilies as well as almost 1500 new, rare and unusual subjects for every garden use. Superb shrubs, lovely hardy perennials, Holland's finest bulbs . . . everything for the garden.

Pink Perfection Strain Lilies

This stunning new strain has had our closest attention for several years. In habit and culture the plants are similar to other Centifolium Hybrids; however, the delightfully scented flowers are shaded an exquisite dusky pink. This handsome color extends over both inner and outer surfaces of the petals and is indescribably beautiful.

Well spaced, trumpet flowers are borne all around the stem, forming flowerheads that often account for 2½ ft. of the height of the 7 foot plants. We know this will be one of your favorite garden subjects. Specially hand selected bulbs.

7-8 in. bulbs. Ea. $1.00; 3 for $2.85; Doz. $11.00

Pink Perfection

Mid-Century Hybrids

For hundreds of years, fruitless attempts were made in Europe to cross Umbellatum and Tigrinum Lilies. This feat was recently accomplished in Oregon, and the results are sensational. Magnificent 3 to 4 foot plants, with rigid stems that do not require staking, bear beautifully formed flowers in big open clusters.

These foolproof, perfectly hardy lilies will grow, multiply and live under any condition. The color range is spectacular and we guarantee this mixture contains only the choicest of the new hybrids in a range of the most brilliant colors.

Mixed colors—Three $2.25; Doz. $8.00

MID-CENTURY LILY, Enchantment

Enchantment (Plant pat. 862). One of the most vigorous lilies in cultivation. This brilliant nasturtium-red, upright flowering, Mid-century hybrid provides a blazing display of the richest possible color lasting for weeks.

Each 80¢; Three $2.25; Doz. $8.00

ALL for $1

if you join the Guild now and agree to accept at least four selections or alternates during the coming year

NEVER has there been a better time to join the Literary Guild—the book club that brings you important new books while they are new at extremely modest cost.

Why such a generous offer? Simply to dramatize a few of the many benefits members enjoy while buying from the Guild books they would want to read and own anyway . . .

Savings: as a member, you pay only $2 for current best-sellers that cost others as much as $3.95, $4.95, and even more in the publishers' editions. (Extra-value selections are priced higher.) You always save at least 40%, often as much as 60%. Timeliness: selections are chosen by Guild editors before publication, from manuscripts submitted by all publishers, and sent as soon as published to members who want them. Advance reviews: forthcoming selections and alternates are reviewed before publication in "Wings," sent free every month. Freedom of choice: as a member, you need take as few as four books during the coming year—out of 20 or more titles every month. Charge privileges: you pay only after you have received the books you wish to accept and keep. Free bonus books: you choose a bonus book free (from a special catalog) after every fourth book you buy.

Join now while this demonstration offer is in effect. Send no money. Just mail the coupon.

NOTE: The Guild editions shown are sometimes reduced in size, but texts are full-length — not a word is cut!

LITERARY GUILD OF AMERICA, Inc., Garden City, N.Y.

Please enroll me as a trial member of the Literary Guild and send me the FOUR books or sets whose numbers I have printed in the four boxes below. Bill me only $1 plus shipping for all four. If not delighted, I may return them in 10 days and this membership will be cancelled.

I do not need to accept a book every month—only as few as four a year — and may resign any time after purchasing four books. All selections and alternates will be described to me in advance in the monthly bulletin "Wings," and a convenient form will always be provided for my use if I do not wish to receive a forthcoming selection. You will bill me only $2 plus shipping for each book I take, unless I want an extra-value selection or alternate at a higher price. For each four monthly selections or alternates I accept, I may choose a valuable bonus book from the special bonus catalog I will receive.

(Use the key number appearing before the title of each book or set you wish; please print clearly)

SEPTEMBER, 1963 VOL. 124 NO. 3

MAX ECKERT

On the cover: The living room in designer Helen W. Franklin's house in Beverly Hills, Calif., is an admirable example of how one lusciously heady color can light up a room without swallowing it whole. Fond of red, Miss Franklin carpeted every inch of the floor in H&G's Raspberry, then called a halt. The rest of the room is almost entirely black and white: Oyster White walls and folding window screens painted in the trompe l'oeil manner to resemble Spanish doors, black and white linen upholstery, large scale in pattern for the large scale furniture, a black Coromandel screen, black porcelain lamps and a marvelous table of glass and iron that adds gleam —but no color. As so often happens, a picture sparked the final fillips. The yellows and greens of an Ulbricht painting of Majorca proved so agreeable in the room that they were encored in chairs covered in Curry velvet and sofa cushions in Curry and Green Olive. There are always flowers, and—the garden permitting—they are always white. For more about H&G's Colors for 1964 and new ways to use them, see page 121.

Natural patterns that flow on your floor. Colors lifted from nature: pale as oysters or sun-bleached sand...warm as tortoise shell or tawny bark...deep as freshly-furrowed earth. Honest color that veins through a room without intrusion, making no demands. The creation of a new idea in carpets loomed to last: 'the naturals' collected in carpet by magee

AN UNPRECEDENTED HOME LIBRARY-BUILDING PLAN

THE PURPOSE of this suggested trial membership is to demonstrate, by your own actual experience, four things highly important for every reading family. First, that membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club is a certain way to keep from missing, through oversight or overbusyness, the new books you fully intend to read; second, that you will pay on the average 20% less for those books you want than you otherwise would; third, that you will have a wide choice—more than 200 books a year; and fourth, that under the Club's new Book-Dividend system, you will be acquiring useful or beautiful volumes—and fine high-priced sets—for really trifling sums, as in the case of the four sets pictured above. This plan, without any question, is the most economical ever devised for building up a fine home library.

✶ HOW CAN THIS BE DONE? The answer to that natural question is that the Club's Book-Dividend system is comparable to the traditional profit-sharing system of consumer cooperatives. The Club regularly sets aside what is termed its Book-Dividend Fund. As this total accumulates, entire editions of valuable books are contracted for with publishers, and the books themselves are distributed among members. Over the past thirty years Book-of-the-Month Club members have received—through this unique plan—the staggering total of over $280,000,000 worth of books (retail value), wholly without charge or for a nominal sum.

✶ YOU NOW HAVE A CHOICE OF BOOK-DIVIDENDS • In the past a Book-Dividend was offered to members with every two books bought. Since the beginning of 1962, one has been made available with every single Selection or alternate a member buys. The system is simple: with each book you buy you receive a Book-Dividend Certificate, which is redeemable when accompanied by a nominal sum—usually $1.00—for an expensive library volume of your own choice. At present more than 100 different volumes are available as Book-Dividends. Many two-, four- and six-volume sets are included (with publishers' retail prices as high as $66.00), and most of them can be acquired by paying no more than $1.00 a volume, on presenting the certificate.

✶ GOOD SENSE FOR READING FAMILIES Within the next twelve months you are sure to find at least four books that you will buy anyway—among the Club's Selections and alternates. Is it not good sense to buy them from the Club, in this suggested trial? You are free to stop after you have taken four if you do not find by actual experience that membership is as beneficial as you anticipate.

DO NOT SEND MONEY . . . A BILL WILL BE SENT WITH YOUR SET

BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, Inc. A71-9
345 Hudson Street, New York 14, N. Y.

Please enroll me as a trial member in the Book-of-the-Month Club and send me the four books listed as number I have indicated in the box at right, billing me $1.00 plus postage and handling for each book. I agree to buy four additional monthly Selections—or alternates—during the first year I am a member. Members' prices for these books are never more than the publishers' prices but average 20% less. I have the right to cancel my membership any time after buying these four books. During the trial and thereafter, if I continue, I am to receive a Book-Dividend Certificate with every Selection—or alternate—I buy. Each certificate, together with a nominal sum—usually $1.00—can be redeemed for a Book-Dividend which I may choose from a wide variety always available. PLEASE NOTE: Occasionally the Club will offer two or more books together at a special combined price. (Such purchases are counted as a single book in fulfilling the membership obligation.) A small charge is added to all book shipments to cover postage and mailing expenses.

ANTIQUES

questions & answers

BY THOMAS H. ORMSBEE

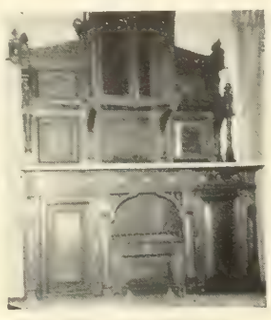
THIS COLUMN IS DEVOTED TO QUESTIONS ABOUT OLD THINGS. NO ATTEMPT AT EVALUATING THE ANTIQUES WILL BE MADE. LETTERS WILL EITHER BE ANSWERED ON THIS PAGE OR BY MAIL, AND MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY A STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. ONLY ONE QUESTION TO EACH LETTER, PLEASE. MAIL ALL LETTERS TO HOUSE & GARDEN, 420 LEXINGTON AVENUE, NEW YORK 17, N. Y.

BALTIMORE HEPPLEWHITE TABLE

I bought this inlaid mahogany table years ago from my great-aunt who was an antique dealer. She said it was an original Virginia antique. Could you verify this? D. H. M.—Newburgh, N. Y.

It is a Hepplewhite table dating about 1790–1800. The inlay on the tapering legs indicates it was made in Baltimore. The Baltimore cabinetmakers often sold to Virginia patrons.

ENGLISH SHEARS



These shears, marked Mottram & Sons, Sheffield, are said to have been brought here by my first ancestor before the Revolutionary War. Can you date them? J. C. B.—Mesa, Ariz.

Mottram & Sons were well-known English cutlers about 1830–1880. Design of the shears dates them about 1840.

My tea set bears this mark. Can you tell me when and where it was made? R. W. G.—St. Louis, Mo.

Your tea set was made at the pottery of Haynes, Bennett & Co., Baltimore, Md., in business from 1890–1900.

BALTIMORE FAÏENCE

EASTLAKE SIDEBOARD

What is the period and age of this refinished sideboard? The wood is very light walnut; the glass doors are red-plush lined. J. O'G.—Santa Monica, Calif.

This is a Victorian sideboard of the Eastlake substyle, dating about 1870–1880. It was probably made to order rather than factory produced.

COORDINATED FASHIONS FOR BED AND BATH

For today's new world of decorating— a handsome new floor from Armstrong

It's a vinyl floor.

It has intriguing character.

It's pebbly—made of vinyl chips set in translucent vinyl.

It has a gentle, rippling texture.

It has depth you can look down into.

It's called Montina Corlon.

Today, interior designers insist on the importance of the floor. It should show. It should make a distinctive contribution to the room.

Armstrong Montina Corlon does just that. It's been created expressly to enhance both modern and traditional furnishings and architectural details.

Montina is made of random-sized chips of vinyl. They have flecks of color in them—light flecks, dark flecks, golden flecks.

The chips are suspended in translucent vinyl—giving Montina its pebbly texture and its depth. You can feel the texture. You can look down between the chips. They "float" in the vinyl base—an effect that's enhanced by the lustrous, satiny finish. (On the practical side, these Montina qualities help conceal scuff marks and dents from pointed heels.)

Because Montina Corlon comes in long, wide rolls, this new vinyl floor can be almost seamless. You can create all sorts of custom floor designs with Montina, too. And it will go in any part of the home—even in most downstairs playrooms, directly over the concrete.

Send for a free sample of Montina Corlon and a folder showing its many decorator colorings. Armstrong, 6309 Maple Ave., Lancaster, Pa. In Canada, Dept. 93-K, Box 919, Montreal, P.Q.

VICTORIAN TRIPLE-BACK SOFA

Could you possibly tell the approximate age of this sofa? It came to me from a family who had owned it for many years. The frame is walnut. G. F. S.—Camptown, Pa.

You have an American Victorian triple-back sofa of the Louis XV substyle. This one was probably made by a fine eastern furniture factory and dates between 1860 and 1870.

FRENCH CHINA CLOCK

I would like to know something about my porcelain clock. The mark is a lavender castle with the word Gien below.
L. T. M.—Florence, Ala.

Your clock case was made at the china factory in Gien, France, in business from 1850–1890. The design is typical of French mantel clocks of 1870. The maker of the movement is unknown.

WASHINGTON-EAGLE FLASK

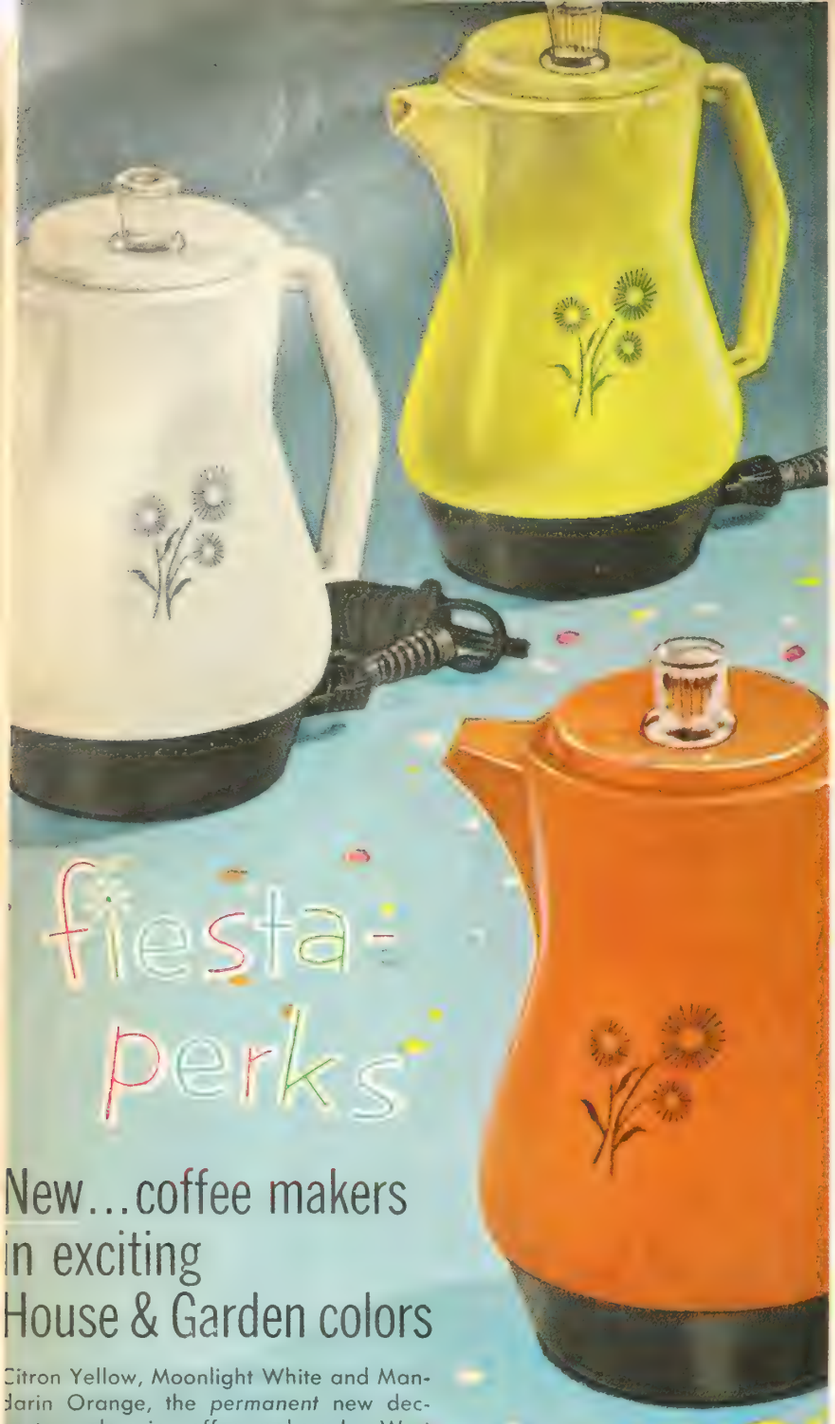
I found this bottle in the shallows of Gasparilla Sound, Fla., full of sand but unbroken. It has a sketch of George Washington on the other side. Do you think it has any history? M. S. B.—Placida, Fla.

Some thirteen early American glass factories around Pittsburgh made slightly varying versions of this Washington-Eagle flask, beginning as early as 1820. The type you have is rated as scarce by collectors.

RUSSIAN BOWL

My china bowl has an A, an eagle, St. George and Russian letters on the bottom. I think it's a "Gardner" bowl. Can you tell me about it? G. K. D.—A. P. O. 271, N. Y.

Francis Gardner, an Englishman, established a porcelain factory near Moscow in 1787. Its mark during the reign of Czar Alexander II, 1855–81, was like the mark you describe.



CANNON-BALL BED

Could you tell me the approximate age of my maple cord bed? It has been in my family for many years. What style is it?
M. W. S.—Canton, Ill.

Your bed is of the American Empire period. Because of the spherical finials on the posts, such beds were frequently called cannon-ball beds. They were made between 1820 and 1835 by cabinetmakers working in New York or New England.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

The effect of candlelight on a party table, as every hostess knows, is not to be underestimated. But unless you have an unusually large supply of hurricane shades, you sometimes have to forgo the charms of candlelight at an outdoor party on a breezy night. Delightful alternatives are those little wicks that float on salad oil. Put the oil in any container you want—a wineglass (the tiny flames don't get hot enough to crack glass), a shallow bowl, a cup—launch your little wick and it will burn steadily and unsinkingly for hours. For an extra-pretty effect, you can color the oil with vegetable coloring, or pour a little oil on a glass of colored water. The container should be deep enough to protect the flame from the wind. I always set several dozen little buoy-wicks (they're called Flambuoyants) around the terrace and pool when we have an outdoor evening party.

Floating flames, nearly windproof

Had an end-of-summer party for our teen-agers that was a smashing success if I do say so myself. It was a joint affair for our still-in-boarding-school son and our college sophomore daughter and all their favorite friends, so rather a wide range of tastes had to be considered. Therefore, we centered the party around two things in which all ages seem to share an interest: food and music.

We set up the buffet in the living room in front of the fireplace, which we wreathed with leaves and late summer flowers. Rugs were taken up and all the furniture pushed against the walls. The record detail I left up to the youngsters; the menu was mine.

Quantity as well as quality being a necessity at this kind of party, I prepared an enormous casserole of what our family calls Hamburger Stroganoff: namely, ground top round cooked brown with onions and mushrooms, and sauced with a great deal of sour cream and ground black pepper. As accompaniment to this, there was another vast casserole of green rice: rice cooked in chicken stock and blended with a quantity of chopped parsley and chives. Instead of mixed green salad, we served mixed green vegetables: string beans, peas and tiny limas. I piled a flat basket with that deliciously crusty sour dough French bread, and, for dessert, provided plenty of little apple turnovers.

The party eventually turned into more or less of a hootenanny, because many youngsters brought musical instruments—mostly guitars, but there were also a banjo, two sets of bongo drums, an accordion and one soulful clarinet. Toward the end of the party, school and college songs were sung with such feeling you would almost think the younglings were glad to be going back.

Don has always preferred to serve his best liqueurs handsomely decanted. The Leerdam decanter I bought him as a peace offering recently, after having inadvertently broken his favorite, is a beauty: squat, round, clear as a bubble with a marvelous glass ball perfectly balanced on the lip to act as a stopper. I got him a set of kindred glasses at the same time. P.S. He seems to have stopped grieving over his other decanter.

Decanter, perfectly proportioned

6 ways to tell if you're getting value in draperies

INSPECT the side hems. Blind-stitched or two-needle side hems give draperies a smooth, hand-finished look.

CHECK heading. Make sure it's washable, will keep pleat looking sharp, precisely tailored after many washings; won't pucker or wilt.

OPEN UP a pleat. Are the three fingers of the pleat actually made from the body of the drapery fabric?

ADD UP the amount of fabric used in bottom hem and heading. Are there at least six inches total heading and bottom hem to give draperies body and help them hang straight?

MEASURE width of panel. You'll want a full 44-inch fabric, properly side-hemmed, in each panel of a single width drapery to give enough fullness to drape gracefully in rich, deep folds.

EXAMINE the material carefully. Is it first-quality fabric without imperfections . . . a washable, no-iron fabric that is easy to care for, won't lose its looks?

Did you ever dream you could combine so many different colors and patterns in rugs and carpets as you see here? We did with Cabin Crafts Color Companions in this dramatic home that was converted from a barn. (Lots of floor space to cover!) And you can do it, too, because Color Companions rugs and carpets are so skillfully color-plotted by our designers that they live together beautifully from room to room.

Now, with Color Companions, you can safely indulge your decorating desires. Go all out with color like the new Cayenne red Country Spice carpet shown. Add a rug with the color of your carpet picked up in its design. Use rugs and carpets in other colors from that same design to define a dining area or a conversation group. Mix your patterns and textures . . . a different motif for every room.

ACRILAN acrylic fiber CHEMSTRAND

Nothing's too daring with Color Companions because all the colors go together. Cabin Crafts made them that way! And made these rugs and carpets with Acrilan® acrylic and modacrylic pile, so they're wonderfully resilient, easy to clean, too.

Decorating windfall! Easy planning at home!

Send for Cabin Crafts professional decorating album—including 97 carpet swatches—decorator-designed color schemes—instructions for room-to-room decorating—all compiled by award-winning designers, John and Earline Brice. The swatches alone (enough to create over 500 color schemes) are worth more than $15.00, yet you pay only $5.50 for the entire album. And with it you get a valuable Golden Certificate entitling you to $5.50 credit toward your next purchase* of a Cabin Crafts rug or carpet at your store. Sleep cool...

wake up warm

This electric clock thermostat turns the heat down at night and up in the morning for comfortable temperature 24 hours a day.

Why not forget the inconvenience of turning the temperature up and down, up and down, day after day. Enjoy instead the comfort and pleasure of having a Honeywell Electric Clock Thermostat on your wall.

Set this handsome beauty just once—then night after night you'll sleep cool (this is the way to sleep comfortably)—and morning after morning you'll wake-up warm (no shivering or cold floors when you get out of bed).

And, then there's economy! Your clock thermostat can pay for itself with savings in your heating bill.

Call your heating/cooling dealer today, and sleep cool tonight and every night—automatically with Honeywell. Ask him about the Honeywell Electric Clock Thermostat for heating or the one designed for controlling both heating and cooling.

P.S. We've also got a model you turn down manually, that returns the temperature to its higher setting later, at a pre-selected time. Working couples will like the way it saves fuel while they're away, yet welcomes them back to a warm house. They'll like the sleep cool—wake-up warm feature, too. This model is called the Semi-Automatic Day-Nite Round Thermostat.

The area around Naples abounds with antiquities, classic architecture

Going places, finding things in

Southern Italy

Where you can trace in art and architecture some of the world's great design influences and sense in the streets and squares a turbulent and checkered history

By Philip Dallas

EDITOR'S NOTE: Philip Dallas, a Scot by birth but European by preference, settled in Italy after wartime service and a postwar script-writing stint in India. He now lives in Rome, where he writes on his pet subject, the life, culture and history of the Mediterranean. Through the American branch of his family, Mr. Dallas can claim kinship with a nineteenth-century Vice President of the United States, George Mifflin Dallas, for whom Dallas, Tex., was named.

Naples has one skyscraper. Its main purpose is to persuade people that Naples is now a modern city, but the Neapolitans have no such illusions. They know their city is a muddle of squalor and fine buildings, philosophers and crooks, romance and superstition, and they are deeply attached to it.

Until a hundred years ago, Naples was the capital of the Kingdom of Naples or, as it was more correctly called, "The Kingdom of the Two Sicilies." Although some parts of it are now completely new and very prosperous, Naples prefers to wear the tattered remnants of its regal wardrobe. This I learned when I lived for seven years in Amalfi on the Sorrento peninsula. Rome, looked up at from Amalfi, seemed an aloof and distant city, and somehow I rarely paid it a visit. Naples, on the other hand, was my own capital city where I was welcomed. In Amalfi we felt that the Neapolitans treated the twentieth century too lightly. We used to say that they would rather go to jail than wholeheartedly join it. The Sorrento peninsula was less sunk in the past. It was not against progress, provided the view was not spoiled—but then Amalfi is not yet 1,500 years old, whereas the history of Naples is longer even than that of Rome.

Foreigners have made most of this history, and it is the foreigner who likes to come and look at it. There are layer upon layer of diverse civilizations going back almost three millennia and it is from the best of each of these layers that we foreigners have formed our critical judgment and found our sense of continuity.

The initial effect of seeing a piece of land which has been lived on, built on and fought over for such a long time is not necessarily one of pleasure, and Naples is sometimes even a shock. If this should occur, go to Cuma (it is only eight miles away) to see how it all began. Cuma restores a sense of proportion and that, above all things, is what you must never lose. After that, you should visit the antiquities of Pompeii, Herculaneum and Paestum to prepare yourself for the plunge into Naples itself.

After twenty-five centuries, Cuma still retains the pristine atmosphere of a Greek pastoral idyll. On the top of the hill, time stops. You step carefully over broken columns of temples which lie cushioned in wildflowers and look out over the land to Vesuvius and across the bay to Ischia, the mountains of Sorrento and Capri. It is an enchanted world.

Equally redolent of those days are the three great temples the Greeks built at Paestum, fifty miles south of Naples, just past Salerno. Here, in addition to Cuma's simplicity, there is artistry. The proportions of the Temple of Neptune are more purely classic even than those of the Parthenon.

These three temples were rediscovered by Bourbon army engineers building a road some two hundred years ago. It seems incredible that anything so large was lost, but in medieval times the zone became malarial and was abandoned. Equally by chance, only twenty years ago, American army engineers upturned not far away some prehistoric tombs full of pottery, bronzes, vases and marble statues, and a few years before that a necropolis built by Jason of the Golden Fleece was discovered there. All their treasures are in the little museum opposite the temples at Paestum.

Archeological diggings like these always make a profound impression on contemporary taste. Today's sculptors are often influenced by archaic styles. Giacometti's little bronzes immediately spring to mind, so similar are they to Etruscan statuettes, and many of the finest modern ceramists, casually spanning three millennia, echo in their work the shapes of the prehistoric vases found in these tombs.

The greatest effect on design was produced when Roman Pompeii was unearthed in the eighteenth century. Pompeian red became popular and French Empire style was based solidly on Pompeian motifs. It was as smart to know all about Pompeii then as it is to be able to talk about the Etruscans today. I find the plan of the Pompeian house fascinating. Its courtyards have an open-air intimacy and the garden is part of the structure of the house—the much simpler Spanish patio is a distant relative.

Glimpses of antiquity

Equally interesting and much less known is the excavated city of Herculaneum. Pompeii was a commercial city, but Herculaneum was where the rich had their houses. Today, it is where the poor live. These excavations are four miles out of Naples, in the middle of the present-day suburb of Resina, which is one of the most overpopulated, depressed areas of Europe. The excavation site is much less crowded than Pompeii. Few tours take in Ercolano (as it is called in Italian) and consequently you can walk around at your ease and see the thoughtful reconstructions not only of the houses but also of the pergolas and, above all, the replanting of the gardens which help make the city live again.

Another good place to recapture the glories of the past is the Archeological Museum in Old Naples. It contains an astonishing and quite unrivaled collection of Pompeian and Herculanean terra cottas, bronze statuettes and furniture, fresco paintings and even surgical instruments. To make a visit doubly interesting, there is the Farnese Collection of gigantic marble statuary—including the famous Farnese Hercules—which was unearthed from the Baths of Caracalla in Rome.

From the steps of the Archeological Museum, both the fascination and the squalor of Naples lie below you. The streets are precisely the same streets that the Greeks laid out well before 500 B.C. You will, of course, see the washing hanging out from window to window across the street, but you will also find a dozen noble façades, from Renaissance times to the eighteenth century, to admire. In the great reception room of the old Maddaloni Palace an ingenious frescoed ceiling depicts the arrival of King Alfonso and his followers in Naples—notice the way the artist tricks out the upright lances of the soldiers as the procession turns the corners of the room.

Anybody will show you the way to the bombed and rebuilt Monastery of Santa Chiara—the cloister with painted ceramic tiles is both famous and beautiful—and the little church of Monte Oliveto can be located without too much difficulty. There you will find a most remarkable group of near life-size terra-cotta figures representing the Pietà which were made in the late Renaissance.

The searching out of places and things in the narrow streets of Old Naples can be half the fun. It was in one of these streets that the great philosopher and liberal statesman, Benedetto Croce, made his home. He refused to live in Rome, or in the smarter parts of Naples, and he became as attached to the sophisticated penury and spontaneous prodigality of the Neapolitans as they are.

The Via Costantinopoli is the most interesting street; it is lined with antiquarian shops which deal in rare books, fine bindings, antique furniture, prints, paintings, oleographs, statuettes, corals, cameos and bric-a-brac. In this street, and those running off it, you can buy at most reasonable prices if you are a good bargainer. There is, of course, always the risk of a Neapolitan imbroglio, particularly if you buy from street vendors, but fortunately it can usually be quickly recognized. In this routine, a transaction gets so involved that there is only one possible loser. Do not be dismayed or outraged if someone tries an imbroglio. You will be witnessing the Neapolitan's centuries-old last line of defense, the one he uses when the battle is already lost and the enemy is inside the city walls. It is the art of survival and its complexities and ramifications can be diverting to observe.

Reconstructions of houses and gardens bring the past to life in excavated city of Herculaneum which, with Pompeii, influenced eighteenth-century design

Surviving the day has always required considerable ingenuity and mental agility in Naples, particularly after the fall of the Roman Empire. At one stage, Amalfi, which lacked a road and was customarily reached only by boat, was the only big town in Italy which did not have long-haired barbarian Goths inside its ramparts. You get the feeling that some of the Neapolitan tricks have been polished and worked on since those days.

After the Dark Ages, Southern Italy was still continuously dominated by foreigners, but more civilized ones, like the Lombards, who left their mark in art and architecture. You will see many little castles and watchtowers built in Lombard days as protection against the Moorish pirates who continually raided the coast. The towers failed in their purpose and

LIKE TO MAKE THINGS WITH YOUR HANDS?

We have nothing against hobbies. Far from it. Today, hobbies are what separate the men from the boys. But if you must make something with your hands, why settle for ceramic tiles or lamp bases or hooked rugs or number-painting? Live a little! If you must make something with your hands—make music! What could be more glorious...more soul-satisfying... more relaxing...more down-right fun? And you can make music. Right now. Today. Even if you "never took a lesson in your life!"

That's right. With Conn's remarkable new learning method, "Instant Music," you will be playing any one of 39 familiar tunes—in a matter of minutes! All you have to know is your alphabet from "A" to "G." No endless scales and exercises. "Instant Music" gets you off to a fast start and with the right techniques. You play with both keyboards, with various band effects—and with foot pedals, too.

In other words, you play naturally (the way a professional musician does). No lifeless pushbuttons. No recorded gimmicks. You play with true human expression on a professional-quality instrument. The Conn sounds like an organ. The Conn plays like an organ. It is, after all, the product of C. G. Conn, Ltd., world's largest manufacturer of band instruments! There are seven handsomely-crafted models to select from. Prices start at $995, and your Conn dealer can arrange easy terms. Tell him you like to make things with your hands—and he'll have you making music! *For helpful free booklet, "How to Choose an Organ," plus free "Caprice Capers" LP record, just write to Dept. CONN ORGAN the people of the Amalfi Coast came to terms. Even today, over a thousand years later, the Moorish influence is still strong. The Amalfians and the people of Positano and Capri still build whitewashed houses in the Arab style with a low dome to keep the interior temperature steady, instead of using a tiled roof. The Arabs built that way because they had no wood, but that cannot be said of the people of the Sorrento peninsula. They had then and still have a forest of oak, chestnut, beech and walnut trees on the Latteri Mountains above them and nowadays there are dozens of factories which make tiles very cheaply.

The Lombards were quickly outwitted by a family of muscular and cunning Normans. In 1066, when William the Conqueror was belaying the English, the Hauteville family was helping itself to all of Southern Italy and Sicily. The Cathedral at Salerno is a magnificent record of their lengthy visit. The finest of their Norman architecture, however, is in Apulia, on the Adriatic side.

The Hohenstaufens took over from the Normans and made Palermo their capital. They proceeded to make friends with the Arabs and to build an exotic joint culture which produced the mosaics of Monreale and the Moorish architecture of Palermo. This strangely erudite and luxurious civilization died, but before doing so, it gave birth to the first truly cultivated European society, the French Angevins of Naples. They, in turn, were the forerunners of the Italian Renaissance. The huge castle which dominates the port and the main square of Naples was theirs, although its grandiloquent arch of triumph was built in late Renaissance times by the first Spanish kings of Naples.

With the arrival of the Spaniards, Naples grew into an overcrowded metropolis and set its character for all time. The kingdom was ruled for 230 years by Spanish viceroys, sixty of them in all. They indulged the Neapolitan's passions, his desire for drama, grandeur and display, in a way never conceded to him again. Titles of nobility were not expensive and fine palaces were built. The Neapolitan paid for it all in his taxes, but he did not mind because he is not, and never has been, enamored of money—and, moreover, life was exciting.

The palace where the viceroys lived is next to the Angevin castle. It has recently been restored and the walls decorated with fine damask, some good paintings and Gobelin tapestries.

The huge square and neoclassic church in front of the palace was the work of the next dynasty, the Bourbons. They had a passion for showing off their troops to every distinguished visitor, and this piazza served admirably as a parade ground, conveniently allowing them to watch from the palace windows. They also had a passion for fine palaces. They built three. The first is the Capodimonte Palace, a handsome building in a park overlooking the city. Today, this is the National Gallery of Art, and since it houses a government picture-restoring studio, the canvases are kept in a condition of cleanliness and repair such as you will see nowhere in the world. The collection is not among the world's very best, although most of the great painters are represented. However, the Neapolitan school is not well represented outside of Naples, so when I am there, in particular at Capodimonte, I like to search out a few familiar names because their work is so different from that of the Italian artists of Florence and the North. My favorites are Salvatore Rosa, Mattia di Preti, Luca Giordano, Guarini, Micco Spadaro (also called Domenico Gargiulo) and Giuseppe Ribera, nicknamed Lo Spagnoletto. There is a room in this palace that should on no account be missed, because it is a most astonishing example of the eighteenth century's taste for chinoiserie. The walls and ceiling of this elegant little sitting room are covered by the most intricately designed porcelain tiles in pale green and yellow high-relief.

The second palace is at Caserta, in the countryside twenty miles from the city. Planned as a rival to Versailles, it is the last and the biggest Baroque building in Italy and the landscaped formal gardens, with fountains, waterfalls and statuary, are among the most grandiose in the world. The Vanvitellis, both father and son, designed magnificent interiors for the palace. The grand staircase is monumental and the staterooms are resplendent with gold leaf, marble and frescoed ceilings.

Museum in a palace

The third palace is a very little one. A Bourbon king gave it to his morganatic wife as a present. Villa Floridiana, as it is called, was built in Pompeian style in 1817 in the elegant Chiaia part of Naples. Now it is a museum of porcelain statuettes and vases gathered from all over Europe and the Far East. You will also see there the famous Neapolitan eighteenth-century Capodimonte ceramics, North Italian majolicas and all sorts of objets d'art, such as enameled jewelry, clocks and watches, snuffboxes, miniatures, bronzes and ivories.

With the Bourbons, the rule of foreigners ended, but the Neapolitans' battle for survival became harder than ever. When Rome became the capital of the new united Italy, the industry of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies shriveled in the face of competition from Milan. Agriculture fared little better. The Southern Italian peasants' livelihood is made tenuous by earthquakes, landslides and cloudbursts, and this past winter has seen all of these disasters, as well as prolonged frosts which destroyed not only crops but fruit trees. From the visitor's point of view, this chronic state of affairs unfortunately shows itself in the meat and the cooking of all Southern Italy—both are very poor. You can eat and drink heavily but never well, no matter how much you spend.

Money has been pumped into the South, factories set up, communications improved and fine roads built. But even the millions of tourists who come every summer do not leave enough money to see everybody through the winter. All this, perversely, is both too much and too little. It has destroyed the past and replaced nothing to anybody's satisfaction.

There is still a large Neapolitan aristocracy, there are rich shipowners, landowners, merchants and hotel proprietors, there is also a large and prosperous professional class. They all live comfortable lives by contemporary standards, whether in old palaces or bright new apartments. Their lives, although sometimes luxurious and often cultivated, are usually oppressively formal and their way of decorating their homes is equally formal. Unlike the sound good taste of Rome or the ultra-modern severity of Milan, there is inescapably always something of the unused provincial parlor about Naples, of souvenirs and heirlooms which ought to have been thrown away long ago.

Except for the fertile plains of Pompeii, Salerno and Apulia, Southern Italy is mountainous. The macchia of the Sorrento peninsula, for example, which looks so beautiful to the visitor with its wild vegetation of junipers, heather, myrtle, agave, cacti and oleander trees is sourly viewed by those who own it. They think it scarcely fit to graze goats on. The land is painstakingly terraced, but even so, it never yields enough to satisfy everybody born on it, particularly with today's high and ever-rising prices.

This rocky landscape is, in fact, so naturally beautiful that nobody has felt a great need for planned gardens. There is more cultivation of plants in Sorrento

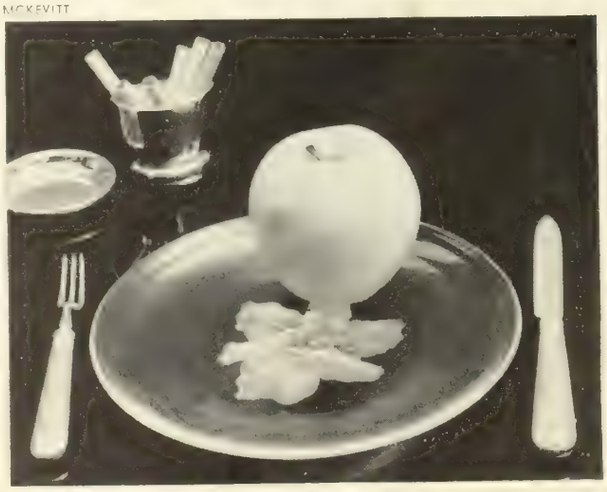
Connoisseur's Corner

Serve fruit with a flourish

When you honor fruit by serving it as the Europeans do—as a course in its own right, to be eaten with a knife and fork—you savor it as never before. Set forth on a superb plate, with pretty implements, demitasse and perhaps a perfect wine, fruit can be the impressive finale to a meal



The colors and shapes of autumn leaves on an oval plate of a rich, toasty brown perfectly set off a pale, succulent piece of fruit. The dainty knife and fork are vermeil with a delicate mesh texture. The hand-painted French plate, $8 for four. French tools, $9 pair. All from Henrietta Tischler.

Arrayed around the black border of this Tiffany plate are all the elements of a Lucullan feast, from pheasant to fruit, wine urn to compote —all hand-painted with the fastidiousness of an Ingres. With it goes sterling of classic simplicity. Plate, $38; knife, $11.50*; fork, $11.* From Tiffany.

MCKEVITT

A simple apple becomes a princely dessert when it is served on crystal and with classic English sterling. The sumptuously engraved plate, $150, Steuben. Silver, $31.90,* James Robinson.

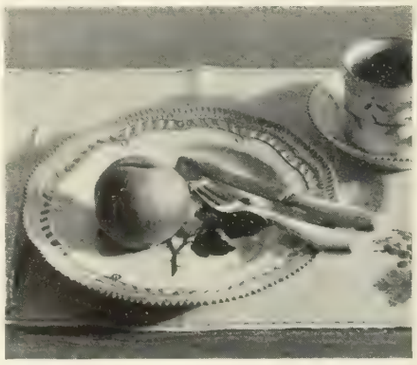
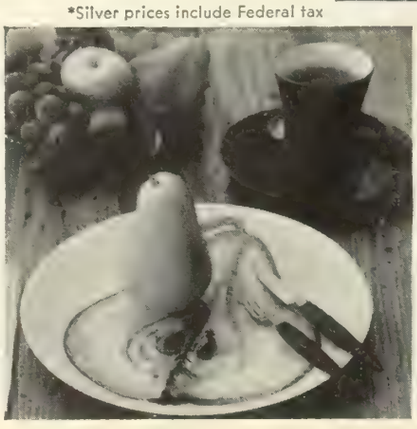
Black pottery that mimics wicker is a dramatic and natural foil for fruit. The Italian plate, $7.50 at A. B. Closson Jr. Bamboo-handled knife, $6 for six, at Altman's; the stainless fork, $4, Georg Jensen.



The delicate, leafy shape of a white Wedgwood plate plus the bright colors of a Royal Crown Derby fruit knife and fork make the fruit course a brilliant finale to a feast. Plate, $1.95; knives, $57.50 for six; forks, $65 for six. All available at Tiffany.



Three-cornered plate with whimsical drawing could hold both cheese and fruit. Rosenthal plate, $10, Cardel Ltd. Pearly tools, $32.50 for six pairs, Hoffritz.

MCKEVITT

The exquisitely worked, perforated border of this Danish plate frames a hand-painted fruit design. The fruit knife and fork are sterling with a subtle hammered texture. Plate, $71.50; knife, $11.75*; fork, $15.50*. Georg Jensen.

*Silver prices include Federal tax

A black and pale sepia pear, dramatic in its proportions and fascinating in its detail, is one of a series by Fornasetti. The ebonized handles of the shapely fruit tools echo the black of the drawing. Plate, $4.75, Bonniers. Set of six knives or forks, $5.95 at Bloomingdale's.

Store addresses, see page 186.

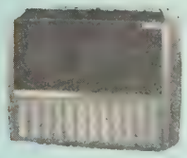
A TEMCO Pre-Vent ON THE WALL MAKES THIS THE MOST COMFORTABLE ROOM OF ALL!

Here's the world's most practical heating unit for that extra room you're adding!

It's beautiful to look at. But the most beautiful part of the Temco Pre-Vent Gas Wall Furnace is the part you can't see.

This ideal space heating unit is a marvel of simplicity and engineering! It features a unique thru-the-wall vent that works like the snorkel on modern submarines, bringing outside air in for combustion, and exhausting combustion products outside!



It provides completely safe, quiet, clean heat with a maximum of efficiency and economy!

Look at these added features:

- Automatic controls are conveniently located on top, within easy reach!
- It's so compact it extends only 8¼" into room; mounted on the wall for easy cleaning underneath.
- A highly efficient blower directs air downward, maintains even temperatures, with less fuel consumption. (optional)
- The exclusive Temco Ceramiclad Heat Exchanger is guaranteed against rust and burn-out for 5 full years.
- Easy installation, with no costly chimney or ductwork; available in 10, 20 and 30,000 BTU sizes.

Find out why the Temco Pre-Vent is fast becoming America's most wanted heating unit. Look for the name of your nearest dealer on the opposite page.

See the beautiful TEMCO Pre-Vent on display at any of these TEMCO Dealers.

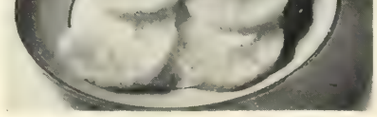
The delicate art of peeling fruit at the table

With the trend to lower-calorie meals, light desserts are the order of the menu, and nine times out of ten this means a bowl of fresh fruit. Pretty fruit plates, fruit knives and forks all help to turn a simple dessert into something special, as you can see on page 32. They also enable you to revive that almost forgotten nicety of table technique, fruit peeled without the touch of hands. There is a trick to this, but it can be easily perfected—all you need to know is how to go about separating skin from fruit in the neatest, most complete way. Here Gianni Minele, co-owner of the restaurant Alfredo of New York, shows you how to deal with a thick-skinned orange and a thin-skinned pear.

How to peel an orange



1. Stick fork lightly into peel of orange (do not pierce the fruit) and cut off stem end with knife.

2. Stand orange on cut end and hold top end with cut-off piece; this gives a firm grip without digging into the orange and losing juice. Slice off peel and all the white pith.

3. When all orange peel is removed, cut off second end. Push peel aside, slice orange evenly.

4. Arrange slices symmetrically on plate. Sprinkle with sugar. Squeeze of lemon juice accentuates flavor.

How to peel a pear

1. Cut slice from stem end of pear to make it easier to remove skin.

GRIGSBY

2. Stand pear on rounded end and cut skin from the fruit in neat strips. Then cut slice from rounded end.

3. Halve peeled pear, then quarter and core. Cut each quarter in half, arrange in circle on plate.

on the shady side of the peninsula (the side chosen both by the Imperial Romans and the foreign gentry of the nineteenth century as a site for their villas) than on the Amalfi-Positano coast which faces full south, and where the soil is dry in summer because water is both scarce and expensive. The exception is Ravello, high above Amalfi, facing east, where there are two fine formal gardens, the Villa Rufolo and the Villa Cimbrone. Both are noted as much for their fabulous panoramas of sea, sky and mountains as for their flowers. One looks out from a belvedere over the sea and the fishing boats towards Paestum twenty-five miles away. A distant factory chimney pumps out smoke on the outskirts of Salerno and a motorbus equally determinedly pumps its klaxon on the winding coast road hundreds of feet below. Everybody, foreigner and native alike, resents this uncomprehending encroachment of progress on what was once an enclave sheltered from barbarism.

A contemporary Amalfian proverb says: "We were better off when we were worse off." It is an extreme point of view. But there are times, living in Amalfi, when you are inclined to agree with the Neapolitans, although you dare not admit it—perhaps there is, as they say, no great virtue in throwing oneself wholeheartedly into the twentieth century.

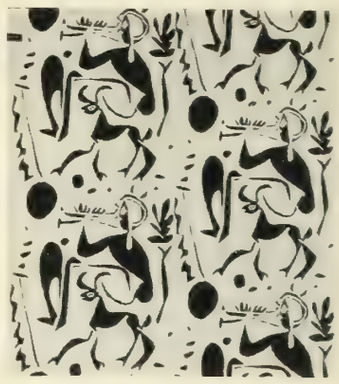
WHAT'S NEW FOR LIVING

ROMANTIC REGENCY is not only a trend in women's fashions, but is definitely having a revival in decorating. Regency of course is a rather broad term covering the styles of the early nineteenth century—English Regency and its contemporary counterparts French Empire and French Directoire. Designers of that period borrowed heavily from the classic Greek, Roman, Egyptian and even Chinese, and interpreted these motifs lavishly (as epitomized in England by the Brighton Pavillion). Now, you can find a wide selection of Regency furniture reproductions, some faithfully copied down to the last brass sphinx-head chair ornament. The Chinese influence is showing up in the new interest in bamboo, especially its use in contemporary tables and chairs.



Concurrent with English Regency in this country was the classicism of early nineteenth-century design, exemplified by the Owens-Thomas house on page 148.

TOPIARY TREES of rough-textured terra cotta for your terrace or living room are an example of art imitating art. The classic shapes of topiary trees that have been fashioned in great formal gardens have provided the patterns on which sturdy decorative little ceramic trees are based. These, measuring 2 to 5 feet in height, are made to serve as planters or stand alone as pieces of sculpture, indoors or out. Designed by Lewis Krevolin and Elizabeth Constantine, they come in earth colors of buff, red or gray-brown, and cost $170 to $250. Available at the Virginia Frankel Gallery, 210 E. 58th St., New York, N. Y.

PICASSO FABRICS: A new line of decorator fabrics has been designed with patterns taken from the works of the great contemporary Spanish painter. The eleven patterns in the fabric collection include outstanding and representative selections of Picasso's work such as his harlequins from the "rose period," his bulls and bullfighters, musical faun, a still life from 1930 and some of the more recent posters and studio sketches. Fabrics are many and include Belgian linen, cotton sheen and a translucent Dacron. Each print comes in the original colors of the picture, plus several other combinations. The 48/49-inch wide fabrics sell for approximately $5 per yard by Bloomcraft, 15 E. 26th St., New York, N. Y.

TRANSISTOR RADIO in a walnut case gives big performance in a small frame. Four speakers produce music reception (AM and FM) of almost concert hall quality. Yet the radio—15 by 8 by 5 inches—

BATTERY-POWERED LIGHTER: Flint, flame and fuel are nonexistent elements in a new pocket or table cigarette lighter powered by a rechargeable battery that never needs replacement. To recharge it, you plug its retractable prongs into any AC wall outlet. One charge is good for lighting three packs of cigarettes. Lighter comes in brush chrome finish with ebony accents. $14.95. GAS AIR-CONDITIONS BETTER FIVE WAYS

GAS Air Conditioning by ARKLA gets the women's vote for year-round comfort!

At home more than men, women are especially partial to Gas air conditioning. They find it so clean. Dust and dirt are filtered, draperies and furnishings stay cleaner longer. So healthful, too. Babies can play on the floor and you don't have to worry about drafts. Even housework is easier and faster when the family can enjoy all-year, whole house comfort. Arkla Gas air conditioning cools or heats at the touch of a dial . . . freshens air, controls humidity, filters pollen. Call your local Gas company, your Arkla-Servel dealer or write Arkla Gas Air Conditioning Co., 812 Main Street, Little Rock, Ark.

5 reasons why men prefer Arkla Gas Air Conditioning:

1. Long life. With none of the friction that limits life of compressor-type units, Arkla lasts years longer! 2. Low maintenance. No moving parts in the heating-cooling cycle to break down. 3. Constant capacity. Peak capacity for unit's entire life! 4. Permanently low operating costs. Unlike other units, Arkla's fuel consumption rate does NOT increase with use or unit's age. 5. Service. Backed by your Gas company or dealer with long records of responsible service.

GO MODERN–GO GAS

LIVE MODERN FOR LESS WITH GAS

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

Somewhere in my file of nonessential information is the tidy fact that the average American family moves every five years during its growing years. This would seem to work out rather efficiently, as most households need an heroic uprooting of closets, attic and cellar at least every five years anyway. I am referring, of course, to a massive dispersal of all unwanted and unused objects—not merely a routine closet cleaning during which we tend to take these things out, dust them lovingly and put them right back again.

We are starting our seventh year in this house with no signs of a move, but I decided to pretend the movers were coming anyway.

I began by hiring two strong boys to help me clean the cellar and strip it of all but the most essential items. In the process, we disposed of—among other things—a moldering trunk, five pairs of rubber boots that had lost their bounce and a baby buggy without a wheel. When the cellar was finished, I put three large packing boxes there to receive the castoffs from the rest of the house. We have been using laundry baskets to carry it all—either down to the cellar to be packed in the boxes for delivery to the local rummage shop, or nonstop to the incinerator. I've almost finished the upstairs closets. The attic I'll save for the first cool days.

During the aforementioned closet cleaning, I was struck by the enduring usefulness of the big metal boxes we've always used for storing blankets and woolens for the summer. I've just ordered two for the cellar to catch future discards as they accumulate. Clothing can be neatly folded and will stay clean until the box is full and everything can be given away at once. These boxes, usually called blanket boxes, are sold in the closet shops of most department stores. The standard size is 30 inches long by 18 inches wide by 16½ inches high. They have locks and carrying handles, and cost about $10.

Dishwashing tip: If your silverware or glasses are coming out of the dishwasher streaked and spotted, try putting a tablespoon of ammonia in with the detergent once or twice a week. It cuts the thin film of grease that is apt to build up in the bottom of the dishwasher and cause the rinse water to be slightly oily, which can spot and streak your silver and glass.

We all love grapefruit, but I've often by-passed it at the market because it takes so long to prepare for our large family. That is, it did until I bought a supply of grapefruit knives. I put one at each plate at the breakfast table and now everybody—including our youngest—fixes his own grapefruit right at the table.

I had a near-tragedy the other day and was saved by a miracle. My friend Connie was having a dinner party for her almost-grown daughter, and I went over to help her. I volunteered to press the last creases from Connie's lovely old white damask tablecloth and was almost through when, to my horror, the iron left two light but unmistakable scorch marks. Fortunately I didn't try any amateur remedies—instead I telephoned the most expert laundress I know. She told me to saturate a piece of paper towel with a full-strength household bleach like Clorox and pass it over but not touching the scorch spots. I did, and amazingly enough the fumes from the bleach removed the spots. What a relief! The trick, it seems, is to get the paper as close to the fabric as possible without touching, and go back and forth several times.

YOU CAN CREATE ROOM BEAUTY. Gulistan spark colors make it easy! When famous designer Marilynn Motto created this opulent English manor house interior, Gulistan's Carnival Yarn spark colors were her inspiration. The carpet she chose is Saxon Woods in Emerald Melange. Its spark colors (there are 6 in each Carnival Yarn ground shade) suggested the entire decorating scheme—draperies, upholstery, accents. Gulistan Carnival Yarn carpets mix 'n match for color harmony from room to room. All are Performance Rated for wear and appearance retention. All are 100% virgin wool pile. Prices from about $8 to $14 per square yard. For more ideas to spark your imagination, write Gulistan Decorating Department.*

The painting captures her beauty. The Painter Carpet reflects her taste

And she's chosen one of the new Painter Carpets loomed from amazing

Creslan®
LUXURY ACRYLIC FIBER

Painter makes carpets for two kinds of people.

Millionaires.

And those who want to live like millionaires.

Democratic? Absolutely.

Take the magnificent Painter in the picture.

"Deep Dream" is its name.

Its pile is plush velvet. Deep. Soft. Yielding. Yet its resilience is incredible; it just won't be crushed.

That's because "Deep Dream" is loomed of Creslan, American Cyanamid's amazing new acrylic yarn that has revolutionized every notion about man-made fibers.

For one thing, you'll find Painter Carpets of Creslan as lustrous as the finest wools. Not too shiny, like some synthetics. Not dull and cloudy, like some others.

And Creslan holds colors magnificently. In the case of "Deep Dream" this is no small task, for besides Topaz, shown at left, it's available in twelve other vivid, shimmering tones as well. (About $12.00 the square yard.)

When it comes to soil resistance, something about the chemistry of Creslan actually repels stains. When it does have to be cleaned, it bounces back fresh and new. For years.

Can't you just see yourself with a Painter? Then see your franchised Painter dealer. (If you're not sure where to find him, just drop us a note.) He'll show you carpets that will start you thinking like a millionaire. From as little as $7.00 the square yard.

You couldn't do much better even if you could afford not to look at the price tag.

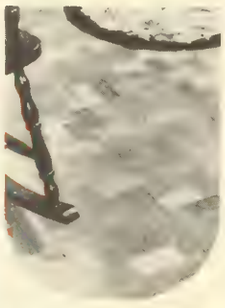
FABULON



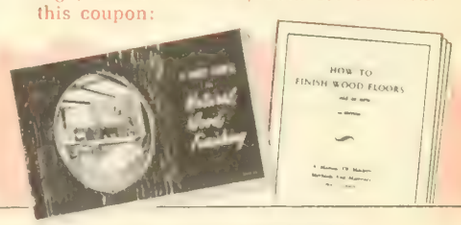
SUPER-TOUGH CLEAR PLASTIC COATING FOR WOOD FLOORS

FABULON

LASTS FOR YEARS WITHOUT WAXING OR SCRUBBING

FABULON

FASTEST-DRYING FINISH—"NEW" FLOORS FOR OLD IN ONE DAY



Nothing quite equals the rich, warm, lustrous beauty of natural wood floors . . . especially when finished with FABULON, first choice of America's homemakers for over 15 years. "Twin" of our famous bowling lane finish, FABULON rates highest for care-free, long-lasting loveliness. In thousands of testimonials, grateful users tell us FABULON is so tough, so durable it seems to keep its "just done" look indefinitely.

Whether you do it yourself or hire a professional, you'll trade your old floors for "new" in just one day, thanks to FABULON'S fast-dry, easy-apply formula. Just think — start in the morning and own "new" floors the very same night! Best of all . . . no more waxing or scrubbing. All FABULON needs is occasional wiping with a dust mop or damp cloth. Water, liquor, ink, even child and pet "accidents" won't harm the finish.

When you're ready to start (shouldn't it be soon?) visit your neighborhood paint, hardware, lumber or building supply dealer. If you do it yourself, he'll provide everything you need; if you don't, he'll recommend a good floor man.

Send for these helpful booklets . . . "How To Finish Wood Floors", Cover Price 10¢; "A Short Course In Natural Wood Finishing", Cover Price 50¢; both for 35¢ with this coupon:

"can this be vinyl?"

Even close up, this Colovin vinyl upholstery covering looks like fabric. It's the new Jacqueline pattern with the rich texture, subtle tones and suppleness of rich brocade. But after all, Colovin is vinyl. Rugged, durable, stain-resistant, scuff-resistant, scrubbable vinyl. Colovin vinyl comes in other patterns, textures and colors, too. It captures the glow of silks, the grain of leathers, the look of linens, the third dimension of brocades. Look for the Colovin tag on fine furniture everywhere. Colovin, by the makers of Wall-Tex.

Yes, there are actually more than 500 different patterns, colors and textures in Naugahyde to choose from. Naugahyde can look like silk, like brocade, like leather, like tweed, even like homespun. Everything from a French Provincial sofa to an over-size lounge chair can be upholstered beautifully and suitably in Naugahyde. Just think what that means! Even the most exquisite piece of furniture—covered in the most delicate of colors—can be soap-and-water washed, year after year, with no sacrifice of luxury or beauty. Naugahyde and its companion fabric, breathable U.S. Naugaweave® vinyl upholstery, actually pay for themselves in almost endless wear. Give another thought to that lovely chair that needs redoing...Naugahyde allows you to have exactly what you want—without a worry! And for the ultimate in seating comfort, ask for Koylon® latex foam...it's the world's finest cushioning. For complete information, write address at the right for your free copy of "Upholstering with U.S. Naugahyde."

The timeless elegance of fine walnut paneling can be yours

—at a price that's comfortably old-fashioned. Walnut is a wood for all periods. Old English and American craftsmen loved it. So do our finest contemporary furniture and interior designers. It's easy to see why. Walnut offers almost endless variety of patterns in its luxuriously colored grain. And Charter® walnut is especially rich in these swirls and stripings. Costly? Not at all. Paneling for a 12′ x 8′ wall is only about $69. Enjoy it for a lifetime. The exclusive Weldwood® finishing process, using genuine lacquer, brings out and preserves the full warmth of walnut. See this paneling and all our other fine woods (over 100 different types—some as low as $28 for a 12′ x 8′ wall). But be sure they're Weldwood. The name's on the back of every panel.

How to be a happy, healthy oldster

After 65, the right furniture is half the trick

Whether we like it or not, the day we are born we start growing older, and although there is nothing we can do about that, we do have one consolation: the more gracefully we age, the longer we last and the better we like it. This may be because, as Oscar Wilde observed, the tragedy of growing old is not that we feel old, but that we don't—not a tragic thought at all. Or, since there are in this country today over seventeen million persons of 65 or over (in less than fifty years, the number is expected to double), the cosmic pattern may be changing. Whatever the reason, the seventeen million oldsters are here to stay, and many of them are either moving into new and smaller quarters or moving in with their children—possibly you. In either case, they will need your help. Since anthropologists think there is nothing very salutary about most of our furniture and the way we live with it, certain precautions should be taken. Not long ago, the National Council on the Aging examined these precautions in a symposium devoted to the furniture requirements of older people. House & Garden covered the symposium and discovered, to no one's particular surprise, that what's good for you at 65 is just as good forty years earlier.

Anthropologic views

In harking to the Council's advice, you must remember two things: first, that the advice is authoritative, and, second, that anthropologists quite understandably don't give a fig for the fine art of cabinetmaking. All they care about is the backbone—and they have a point. Since the human back is both convex and concave, our learned friends believe that no "straight" chair is worth its salt unless its back, too, is convex and concave. Chair seats should have their forward halves tilted slightly downward with a soft rounded edge. This helps, rather than impedes, the flow of blood so important to a sound cardio-vascular system. True, anthropologists have a sneaking fondness for rocking chairs. The arm-rests keep the forearms in a comfortable position and are an aid in rising from the chair. Moreover, the rocking motion is relaxing.

But sofas and lounge chairs are considered too deep in the seat and too yielding for words, and the poor old bed is held completely suspect. Far too soft, far too horizontal (some anatomists think that the foot of the ideal bed should be 9 inches higher than the head to aid in the venous return from feet and legs), most beds would seem to be worth nothing but burning—particularly when they are heaped high with pillows. One, we are told, is a great plenty. And the perfect bed should be only 21 inches from the floor (easier to get in and out of) and equipped with some sort of elevating device to eliminate bed-making stoop. If the bed no longer looks like a bed, never mind, it's good for you.

Tables should be of adjustable height (this could probably be arranged) but, for most purposes, kept at about 32 inches. Rounded edges for all furniture should be mandatory, and carpeting should either stretch from wall to wall or be nonexistent. (You don't have to be 65 to know the perils of a skittery little throw rug.) Never, never should floors be overpolished, and staircases should be completely carpeted, equipped with handrails and lighted with the blaze of a Hollywood opening.

Most bathrooms, anthropologically viewed, are comparable to Venus's-flytraps unless the tub has a nonskid bottom, grab-bars and an automatic shutoff for the hot water after the desired volume and heat are obtained. Glass shelves and sharp projections should either be banished or made as unlethal as possible, and (our friends believe in facing facts) the plain Jane toilet seat could—and should—acquire at least a touch of glory with a new cant, higher in front than behind.

Is elegance possible?

And there we are. How does the designer answer the anthropologist? Does elegance go out the window the moment what appears to be horse sense comes in? Not necessarily. There are enough good-looking chairs in the world (you may have to hunt, but they exist) designed to support the vertebrae properly to negate the theory that the average chair is

MORGAN-JONES Insulaire®–plaided now for the smartest thermal blanket in all of sleepland

We call our new pattern "Shadow Block"—it's the sophisticate in the family "Insulaire"! You know "Insulaire." The blanket that sleeps you sweetly, soundly, 365 nights a year. How so? Thousands of tiny air cells speed away body heat in summer, hold body heat in winter. (Just toss any light cover on it.) It's the thermal principle put to bed! "Insulaire" looks like a fine hand-crocheted afghan, yet it's machine-wash-and-dryable. In blocks of verde green, copper, carnation, cornflower, curry or beige. Pure cotton, with nylon satin binding. 72 x 90. About $11.* Store list on facing page.

*Slightly higher in the West and Canada.

just one jump ahead of the Iron Maiden. Not all sofas and easy chairs are stuffed to voluptuousness with down, and orthopedists do not agree that all beds should be unresilient. A bed should suit its owner's frame, personal padding and sleeping crotchets. It should be low enough to get in and out of easily, of course, and anyone who is more at ease with his feet higher than his head can saw off the headboard legs. Devil take Sheraton, Hepplewhite and Duncan Phyfe!

Safety and eccentricity

Adjustable tables are a good idea. Even better for the older person is a much-larger-than-average bedside table. After 65 (quite often, before it), we are apt to fancy Morpheus lost without a clutch of lures: books and newspapers, food and drink, medicines, writing materials, sleeping masks, sound mufflers, tissues, cologne, a bell, a flashlight, a lamp, a clock, a candlestick—even a pistol. This assembly takes up room.

Wall-to-wall carpeting is easy. All you need do is buy it. Lacking it, an unpolished floor isn't very pretty, but it's safe. So is a painted floor, plus being much gayer to look at. By all means, staircases should be well lighted, well carpeted, well balustered. One has only to pitch down a dark stair well once to do something very quickly about this not insuperable problem. Bathrooms, while not quite as malleable as anthropologists make out, can be brought to heel. An old-fashioned, smooth-of-bottom tub can be made quite safe with a rubber mat. Grab-bars can be installed at no great expense in almost any kind of wall. Sharp projections—should they exist—can probably be padded with something or other and a carpeted floor will certainly prevent slipping. Glass shelves can always be replaced. Automatic hot-water shutoffs do exist. (Cost about $60.)

But the one factor that neither anthropologists nor designers seem to pay much attention to is eccentricity and its power to stimulate. The older we get, the odder we get—the more "sot." Many people over 65 wouldn't have a rocking chair in the house. It is a symbol (albeit falsely) of senility. People who have been sitting proudly but stiffly for thirty years in the same Chippendale dining chairs wouldn't swap them or the cricks in their backs for anything. Their chairs are good for the soul. And octogenarians who nightly sink out of sight in a lovely morass of feather beds would howl with rage if their beds were firmer.

Consequently, the wisest way to grow old gracefully is apparently to accept the fact that we are creatures of habit and to form, while we may, habit patterns that will be as good for us when we are older as they are when we are young. The fact that the human frame can take an inordinate amount of punishment for its first thirty years is beside the point. Treated gently, seated properly, bedded comfortably and with a sensible eye kept on safety, most human beings can approach the 65-year status with an equanimity born of knowing how much comfort they require and exactly how it is to be obtained, of how far to trust themselves on a slippery floor, and of the certainty that if they sleep on three pillows, they'll have a stiff neck in the morning. With only a change or two in seasoning, what has been a good sauce for the gosling is going to be a good sauce for the gander. It should be a good sauce. It took sixty-five years to make.

Choosing your mattress is more than a matter of taste

A mattress should be nice to look at. And ours is. Really though, the purpose of a mattress is to be on rather than seen. So the big consideration is construction and feel. Not all mattresses are made the same. That's why you should know about our Back Supporter model. It features the exclusive Karr Spring Unit, built with many kinds of coils, each with its own back-supporting function. We alternate left and right turn coils to counteract "leaning" when two people of different weights share a mattress. And our "Health Center" feature provides added support in the center of the mattress where 70% of your weight rests. The entire innerspring unit is heat-treated and lacquered after assembly, to give longer life, prevent rust, and eliminate noise. (P.S. When it comes to looks, you'll find our Candace cover to be in impeccably good taste.) All these features, and more, for only 79.50 (suggested retail price, foam rubber or innerspring, mattress or box spring, twin or full size; you can have the added luxury of Queen or King size at modest additional cost). See your Spring Air Dealer and let him show you that choosing your mattress is more than a matter of taste.

How to face-lift an ugly wall

In many an old house, walls with cracks or shaggy, peeling surfaces, perhaps even gouges and holes, present a dismal picture and, to the layman, conjure up alarming visions of costly, extensive remodeling. Actually grand-scale remodeling isn't always required. The most important thing about a wall is its basic strength. If the studs or structural members that make up the framework or skeleton of the wall are in good condition, the surface can be repaired or covered fairly easily. An architect or builder can advise you. Do not waste money and time by removing existing plaster, plasterboard or wood. Instead, you can fill in the holes, repair large cracks, scour off peeling paint. If the wall is hopelessly rough and uneven, you can install long, narrow strips of wood (called furring strips) to support a new surfacing material—plywood, wood, hardwood, particle board or plasterboard. Or you can completely hide a rough wall with shelves, cabinets. As the examples on these pages show, there are many ways to transform an unsightly wall without extensive surgery.

Before

After

A series of bookcases can artfully camouflage even the worst of walls. After patching and cleaning the wall and giving it a coat of paint, you can build the shelves right against it. If a wall has wavy, uneven bumps, you can set the bookcase out from the wall a half inch or so and attach it to the floor and ceiling. If all the shelves are not to be filled with books, small panels of wood or plasterboard can be used for a backing. The cabinets in this wall house movie and music equipment; movie screen rolls down from top of center section.

HERE'S Neopoint BY MASLAND

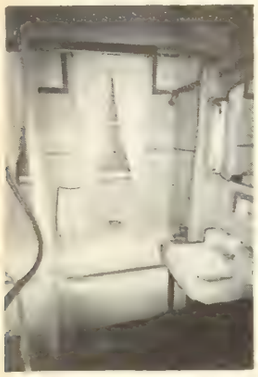
Let's say it's decorating time in your house. Or redecorating time. Or reupholstering time. Let's say you're in a mood to kick over a trace or two, that the ordinary has begun to itch . . . or to rub the wrong way.

We say consider Neopoint.

Delicate, colorful patterns . . . nylon embroidery on Masland's sturdy expanded vinyl, that's Neopoint. The happy fusion of a classic idea with a fabric that couldn't be more contemporary. That's Neopoint.



Neopoint is handsome. Rich, supple, soft to the touch. Neopoint is practical. A damp rag cleans it, an active family finds no need to pamper it. Neopoint is elegant . . . and with it, vinyl moves dramatically from den to living room.

Neopoint. Another vinyl fabric "first" by Masland. At fine stores . . . at fine upholstery shops everywhere. Ask for it. To see it is to fall in love. The Masland Duraleather Company, Philadelphia 34, Pa.

Masland where beauty is material

After

Vinyl-coated fabric goes on like wallpaper, but needs a good, smooth background since it follows every hump and dent like a second skin. In this remodeled bathroom, a smooth wall was guaranteed by installing new plasterboard panels (attached to furring strips) right over the plaster and tile as well as the holes in the wall that were created when the bathtub was taken out. One side wall needed no preliminary work other than removing an existing medicine cabinet because new cabinets and a room-width mirror completely hide the old surface. Coated fabric is tricky to install—let an expert do it.

Before

After

Hardboard paneling, a material made of specially treated wood fibers, can make a fine covering on walls, ceilings and even cabinets. It is thin, lightweight and easy to work with, and comes in a variety of woodlike finishes as well as solid colors. The old walls and ceiling of this kitchen were fairly smooth and covered with wallpaper. The only preparation needed was to sweep the old surfaces clean. Hardboard panels were installed directly on the walls, white squares on the ceiling. Hardboard was also used to face kitchen cabinets. Decorative panels on the upper cabinets co-ordinate the kitchen color scheme.

Introducing

H&G COLORS FOR 1964

September is the month of stimulating changes—the return of fresh breezes, the ripening of the fruit, the flurried take-off for school and, along with these, the official unveiling of H&G's glowing palette of colors for the coming year. Here they are: the thirty-six colors, charted with the help of our color research consultant Faber Birren, that will be reflected most prominently in indoor and outdoor color schemes for 1964. You will see these colors again when you shop for fabrics, wallpaper, carpeting, china, table linens, paints, stains, even building products. For some 400 manufacturers this year have keyed their colors to H&G's 1964 palette (see page 190 for a list of leading stores where you will find them). As a result, you will be able to track down the components of any color schemes you plan and put them together just as you have planned them without having to compromise for lack of some of the colors you need. To simplify your shopping even further, you can take along a set of pocket-size samples—the H&G Color Chips for which you will find an order blank on page 190.

You can also rely on H&G Colors to come to your aid when you are looking for new furnishings to go with what you already have. For our palette, as usual, reflects the color trends of the recent past as well as of the predictable future. For instance, the mixed greens and the mellow yellows so popular in the last few years are well represented among the colors for 1964. And these two families could hardly be more friendly to the group of colors which have stolen the spotlight this year—the whole range of tortoise-shell tones from the pale beiges through the browns to near-black. (For the full fascinations of these newest favorites, see page 130.) But if your own vote goes to another hue, you will find that, too, among our radiant array, right, for H&G Colors always include the popular members of every color family.

Our tastes in color are always changing, but for the most part they change slowly. Sometimes the differences from one year to the next seem almost imperceptible until the full-scale emergence of a new trend shows us we were heading in that direction all along. This year, for instance, there is little apparent change in the character of the colors we prefer. The rich regal tones that have been growing steadily for several seasons are still very much in evidence along with the soft muted shades so often needed to balance them. Thus the six new colors in our 1964 palette—Sunflower, Cyclamen, Mimosa, Aquamarine Blue, Peppermint Pink and Java Brown—fit into no one category. They run the gamut from muted delicacy to pungent warmth—a delectable mixed bouquet with as much emphasis on subtlety as on opulence.

There is, however, a perceptible change in the way we are using color. For one thing, we are using more of it outdoors—see the indoor-outdoor color scheme H&G created for the house on page 136.

Indoors, the room of many colors is gradually giving way to the room of many shades, tints and intensities of one color. But that is not the whole story, for in addition to the several members of the one color family, there is always a guest—an unrelated color that plays the vitalizing role of accent. You will see how this works in the rooms on the next eight pages where you can also observe in action H&G's six new colors for 1964.

How to create delightful rooms with

ONE COLOR FAMILY PLUS A GUEST

If you are dedicated to one color, as many of us are, the single-family-plus-guest technique for building a color scheme is a wonderful way to indulge your enthusiasm without risking monotony. It is also a relatively easy method to carry out, since the bulk of the job consists in selecting mutations of a single basic hue for the largest areas of the room and for many of the smaller ones as well. Thus you minimize the problem of what goes with what, for even when two different values of the same hue do not make agreeable partners, the addition of several of their close color relatives almost always promotes peace and harmony.

The selection of your guest-accent, however, calls for somewhat more thought, for a guest should do more than sit there: it should play an active role—contribute a special tang, add warmth to a family of cool colors, cool off a family of hot ones or bring a company of ethereal tints down to earth. For such jobs we often turn to the bold bright colors (those marked "primarily an accent color" on the backs of the H&G Color Chips) which are not always easy to live with when used in large amounts. But in a room with dark walls or one dominated by the still popular rich regal colors, a pastel or even a pale neutral can act as accent with surprising effectiveness.

In each of the rooms on the next seven pages, the active, do-something role of guest-accent is performed by one of the six new colors in H&G's 1964 palette, and some of them appear again as members of the families to which they belong.

The character of any color, however, changes subtly with every change in its color companions. Witness, for instance, the altered aspect of Sunflower when used with a family of mixed greens, opposite page, and when surrounded with dark browns (page 127). Witness, too, the apparent variations in any of the new colors in those rooms in which they appear in backgrounds along with other members of their own color families rather than as guest-accents for other families. This phenomenon also accounts for another practical advantage of the single-family-plus-guest color scheme: When you tire of the guest-accent, you can easily substitute another, by means of the paintbrush or the needle. Your room will still be dominated by your favorite color family, but the new accent will give it an entirely different look.

Sunflower

makes a luminous halo for dark greens

Because of its yellow-orange warmth, Sunflower is a friend to dark, cool colors—greens, certain blues, all grays. In Mr. and Mrs. Melvin E. Dawley's living room with its mixture of greens—Wintergreen, Bronze, Olive and Pistachio—the yellow, a vivacious guest, provides sunshine and sparkle. Replacing it with a new accent would involve only the recovering of chair seats and cushions. For summer, Aquamarine would be a cool alternative. The guest-accent might be made even more important if it were used also to cover the reverse side of the six-panel screen so that it could be turned around to provide the room with a new wall. Interior design by Raymond Waldron of Lord & Taylor.

Cyclamen spikes the blues

A pungent blue-pink, Cyclamen, left, is a natural accent for the azure family. Here, in a room full of blues—Delphinium, Blueberry, Blue Mist and Periwinkle—it is a potent shot in the arm. Because of its brilliance, a little Cyclamen—a chair, a cushion—goes a long way, consequently change would be no trick at all. Either delicate Peppermint Pink or strong Mimosa would be a good foil for these same blues and would tend to magnify the prominence of the Tarascan table and painted Mexican chest. Interior design: Evelyn Jablow for Martin-Senour Paints.

Aquamarine cools the reds

One of the spectrum's prettiest and coolest pastels, Aquamarine, which has no more than a delicate tingle, can be splashed about as generously as you like. But in this red-laden room, left, where our new Cyclamen and Peppermint take their places in the family along with Loganberry, Raspberry and Tangerine (in the painting), Aquamarine lowers the temperature, and fast. A change of accent would involve nothing more than new slipcovers in another color with the same calming temperament—possibly our serene and pinkish blue, Hyacinth. Mimosa sheds light on earth tones

Like distilled sunshine, Mimosa, opposite page, brings to life a quiet family of earthy neutrals—in this instance, Maple Sugar, Clay Beige and Java Brown—surrounded by a sea of Oyster White. Not much of the yellow is needed, and not much is used, since any more would have destroyed the room's elegant tranquillity and outshone the interesting play of textures. A similarly restrained amount of Sunflower would achieve a slightly warmer effect, and, in the other direction, Citrus Green or Bristol Blue would be cool, tangy and sophisticated. Interior design by Barbara D'Arcy for Bloomingdale's.

Java Brown
calms vivacious yellows

Richly dark Java Brown can play a sobering role without being gloomy about it. Witness its performance, opposite page, in a kitchen filled with lively members of the yellow family—Pastel Citron and Lemon Peel augmented by the new Sunflower and Mimosa. Since the Java Brown stain on the wood cabinets comes right out of a can, change would mean painting the cabinets in a color with comparable anchoring qualities such as Bronze Green or Black Pearl. But like so many mirrors the pewter hardware and stainless steel cooking top and hood would continue to reflect the nearby yellows. Kitchen designed by Renny B. Saltzman.

Sunflower
glorifies wood tones

Our new soft orange makes its second guest appearance, below, as an accent for dark wood tones, Espresso and Java Brown, accompanied by Black Pearl. As a warmer-upper for a small, dark study, the guest-accent lives up to its sunny reputation even though—to keep the emphasis on the furniture—it is used only in three small areas of the wall. The same areas might sometime be repainted Tangerine—or for drama rather than warmth, Delphinium. An excellent middle-of-the-road color alternative would be cool, brilliant Empire Green. The woodlike paneling is teak-finished by Masonite. Furniture and accessories from Yale R. Burge.

Peppermint Pink is a catalyst for browns and white

Because it never draws attention to itself, Peppermint Pink, opposite page, is a welcome guest in a white-walled room designed especially to show off the beauties of the antique furniture. Used in two areas relatively large for accents —the sofa and the flowered table cover— the pink generates enough flush to balance the more somber tones of the furniture woods. Alternative accents might be Pastel Blue Mist.* Pistachio or Butterscotch—all of which appear in small amounts in the antique Aubusson rug. Interior design by Audré Fiber.

Mimosa laces
the brilliant greens

Mimosa makes its second appearance, above right, as an accent for three greens —Empire, Green Olive and Citrus—and proves it can be just as lively as they are. Here the color floats right across the ceiling—a bright idea for giving a high-ceilinged room more intimate proportions. The walls are covered with Empire Green and white ticking stripes printed on vinyl. By way of a different accent, Lemon Peel would be sharper than Mimosa, while Peppermint would provide a softer, more feminine touch. Wallcovering by Columbus Coated Fabrics.

Cyclamen enriches
the golds

Cyclamen performs its encore, right, in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Strauss as an off-beat accent for the gold family including the new Mimosa as well as Antique Gold and Curry. The net result of this unconventional juxtaposition is a sharper edge for the Cyclamen and a richer, mellower cast for the yellows. Mandarin Orange would be an effective, if a bit more conventional, guest, and either Bristol Blue or Citrus Green would be fine hot-weather visitors. The use of glass instead of wood for the shelves that flank the fireplace keeps the emphasis on the books and their varied colors. Interior design by Evelyn Jablow.

This year's favorite family

THE TORTOISE-SHELL TONES

A family of colors as a rule consists of varied but closely related hues that may all be described, at least roughly, by the same color name. H&G's mixed greens, for instance, range from Citrus which is almost yellow to Wintergreen which approaches blue, yet every one of them answers to the family name of green. Moving into the limelight at the moment, however, is a family of colors that are related in a different way. Beiges, yellows, oranges, browns, even black are all to be found among these newest favorites. But however diverse they may seem in name, you will find them linked together in nature as closely as any color family in the spectrum. For these are the tones that are intermingled in the sleek, translucent, mysteriously variegated substance mankind has admired for centuries as tortoise shell.

Considerably wider in scope than any of the basic color families, the fascinating company of tortoise-shell tones is represented in H&G's 1964 palette by the twelve different hues at the bottom of the opposite page. They include some as closely allied as Clay Beige and Sagebrush and others that contrast as boldly as Curry and Black Pearl. Tones often found in wood finishes—Espresso, Java Brown, Mushroom, Maple Sugar—are present, too. The whole roster, in fact, adds up to a ready-made color scheme and one that is capable of almost infinite variations.

If you concentrate on the lighter, brighter members of the family, using the darker ones sparingly for accent, you will have a room as lighthearted as a sunny morning in June. Emphasizing the darker tones, on the other hand, and illuminating them with the glow of Sunflower or Mandarin Orange will create a rich, warm ambiance. With tortoise-shell tones, you can achieve the drama of dynamic contrast or the gentle quiet of subtly blended neutrals. And depending upon the style of your furniture, you can use the same colors to beget either an informal provincial atmosphere or one of great elegance and sophistication.

Along with the rising popularity of tortoise-shell color schemes, tortoise-shell patterns, more or less naturalistic, also are turning up in all kinds of decorative materials and furnishings. On page 134 you will see a representative sampling of these. And on page 162 home craftsmen will find indoctrination into the techniques of applying a tortoise-shell finish to wood. In these more concentrated forms, tortoise-shell tones afford a distinctive accent for other color families—the closely related mellow yellows, the soft pinks and blues and especially the family that still rates exceptionally high in our affections, the mixed greens.

The deeper tones induce a quiet mood in a bed-sitting room

The warm golden cast of fruitwood boldly countered with black echoes the darker versions of tortoise shell as truly as it reflects the nineteenth-century Biedermeier style that inspired the design of the furniture in this bed-sitting room. Some of the pieces, in fact, come as close in hue to H&G's Butterscotch as the natural variations of the wood allow. The miniature chest beside the bed is tinged with Java Brown. But although the main color emphasis is on the browns and black, the room is rescued from somberness by the unobtrusive presence of lighter, brighter members of the tortoise-shell family—the Antique Gold of the velvet-covered cushions, the Sunflower stripes in the curtain and wallcovering fabric—as well as by touches of metallic gold on the pilasters, the curtain tiebacks, the leather bindings of the books. Interior Design: Barbara D'Arcy for Bloomingdale's.

LERRICK

The glowing hues radiate warmth in a country bedroom

When the vividest member of the tortoise-shell palette—Mandarin Orange—comes to the center of the stage, the effect is as stimulating as a panorama of autumn foliage. In this remodeled bedroom, left, in an old house in Vermont, the Mandarin and the Sunflower in the crewel pattern printed on the bed hangings and woven into the rug seem all the more vivid for the touches of black that here and there outline the motifs. (Tortoise-shell tones, headed by orange, were great favorites with seventeenth-century crewel embroiderers.) To warm up an unflattering north light, the bay window of the room was screened with a tinted, textured acrylic plastic and crisscrossed with black plywood trelliswork. The rug was made to order by Magee.

BEADLE

The spiciest variations set an inviting table

It should surprise no one to discover that the hues of a tortoise's shell duplicate those of many a spice and seasoning, hence by natural association make flattering partners for food. Curry is the spicy color key of this country luncheon setting, left, where it appears unadulterated in the linen napkins. Woven together with brown in the place mats, it becomes Sunflower. Walnut service plates, as close to Java Brown as anyone could ask, represent the darker end of the tortoise-shell palette, while the vivid middle range is suggested by the glass plates and goblets, actually Butterscotch but considerably diluted, of course, by the transparency of the material. Sterling silver flatware in the "1810" pattern and pewter accessories all by International; "Princess Feather" glass by Westmoreland.

The sunniest members of the family light up a living-dining kitchen

Let Curry play the leading role, supported by Sunflower and Maple Sugar and perked up by black, and you have a gay and sprightly room, opposite page, that may not seem at first glance to bear any relation to tortoise shell. But the individual colors are there—only the proportions are different. In this three-way room recently added to Mr. Bruce MacIntosh's house in Beverly Hills, Calif., convention has been cheerfully ignored: an eighteenth-century armoire keeps company with a bank of stainless steel ovens. An antique tôle urn shares its housing with cook books. And the cooking center—a Curry-painted island cabinet with a fold-back cover to hide the range top—is on easy terms with a sofa handsomely covered in Sunflower and white damask. Furniture and accessories from Robert Bruce.

TOM YEE

come in all shapes and sizes, fanciful and practical

Everywhere you look this fall you will see tortoise-shell tones in all kinds of home furnishings: fabrics, furniture, hangings, wallcoverings, floor coverings and accessories. But the interpretation of this palette-on-the-way-up varies in a number of ways. To begin with, you will find tortoise-shell finishes on a wide variety of chairs, cabinets and tables—much in the manner of ancient Roman furniture, or eighteenth-century French. The only difference is that these were actually veneered with the turtle's shell, whereas today's finishes are painted facsimiles.

The same patterns and colors also appear in vinyl floor coverings and upholstery, wallcoverings and self-adhesive papers that can be applied to any surface you wish. The panels of the door behind the bamboo armchair, right, are covered with such a paper: the door is standard, the paneling is do-it-yourself. (See also page 165 and page 196.)

Decorative accessories of glass, ceramics and plastic sometimes simulate tortoise shell, sometimes echo its colors alone. For instance, the plastic tray of the little folding bar, opposite page, is a dead ringer for tortoise shell, while the vases next to it resemble it only in complexion.

You will also find fabrics, wallpapers and hangings, such as the bead curtain at the center of our potpourri, in which the tortoise-shell palette is transferred to stripes, floral patterns or other nontortoise designs. These can be used either as the start of a tortoise-shell scheme or, like the tortoise-shell finishes, as multitone accents for a company of lighter yellows or greens.

Then there are components such as lamps, pillows, small rugs which contain only two or three hues of the palette and do not of themselves resemble the hawksbill turtle's. These may be indispensable elements in a decorating plan in which the tortoise-shell family is widely distributed throughout the whole room.

Finally there are towels, table linens and throws in solid colors to help you carry out a tortoise-shell theme in a bathroom or bedroom.

In addition to this diversity of pattern and color, there is enough variety in design to accord with any particular style or mood. For example: the group in the upper left-hand corner of our assemblage would do beautifully in a country house. The indoor-outdoor group in front of the bead curtain would be effective in a sunroom, equally so on a terrace. The more formal pieces at the right are elegant and urbane—strictly drawing room denizens. And in the upper right-hand corner are the makings of a tortoise-shell bathroom. (The little portable bar could hold bath salts and such quite as equably as an ice bucket.) On page 192 you will find out exactly what is what, where it comes from and what it costs.

The fifteen H&G Colors we used like building blocks

H&G decorates a house with

COLOR INDOORS AND OUTDOORS

Every good architect takes pains to marry his houses to their surroundings by means of the design, proportions and choice of materials. Yet color, which can help enormously in relating a house to its site, is too often confined strictly to indoors. Particularly in contemporary houses with large areas of transparent wall, color can create a continuous and delightful exchange between indoors and outdoors in which each complements and enhances the other.

To prove it, H&G furnished, decorated and chose all the colors—exterior as well as interior—for a $25,000 house in the High Wood village of the New Seabury development on Cape Cod, Mass. (See H&G, February, 1963) Working with the architects Rudolph Bedar and Phineas Alpers, and the developer, Emil Hanslin, we used color as a building block, making it as much a part of the house as the wood and glass, as much a part of the landscape as the trees.

Planned for a family with two children, this small house offers an extraordinary amount of living space for its 1,750 square feet and gives parents and children as well a remarkable degree of both personal and family privacy. Part of this is due to the two-section plan which allots to the children the equivalent of a little house of their own. Part is due to the design: the roof of each section sweeps upward from one-story height at one side to two-story height at the other, thus creating space in each section for a partial second floor. And the irregular gable ends made it possible to use large areas of glass where they do not interfere at all with privacy, but greatly increase the importance of the landscape to the rooms within.

The landscape was the point of departure for our over-all color scheme. We started by searching for an exterior stain, appropriate to the modern character of the house, that would look as much at home in the pine-forested setting as the faded red of New England barns. The answer proved to be H&G's Purple Iris which, like all colors, is considerably muted when used as a wood stain since the natural color of the wood distinctly alters its tone. At first glance it appears to be the result of natural weathering, but it has subtle purple overtones which we emphasized by using Purple Iris paint for most of the trim. (All H&G Colors are now available in stain as well as paint.) The front doors, we painted Antique Gold, and the fascia of the roof, Oyster White. But this exterior color scheme would have been incomplete without the green of grass and trees.

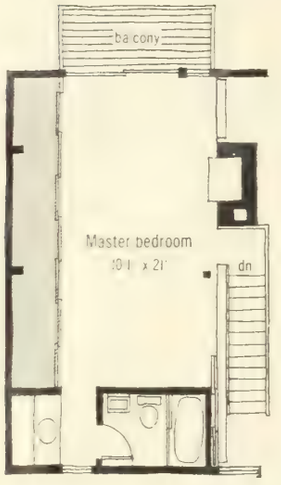
Indoors, we carried the same three colors plus white straight through the house. Every room contains at least some small amount of the yellow family introduced on the front door and of the greens borrowed from the trees—as well as large areas of white. And Purple Iris provides a constant unifying accent. But to give each room individual character, we added one or two more of the fifteen H&G Colors, left, that made up our palette—confining them mostly to variables such as fabrics, cushions and painted accent furniture which can be easily changed or replaced. The success of our plan you are cordially invited to judge at first hand, for the house will be open to visitors through the summer of 1964.

Left: A stain of H&G's Purple Iris on the rough-textured plywood walls gives the house a mellow, weathered tone that blends quietly with the setting. Purple Iris paint on the trim, Antique Gold on the front doors and white at the eaves accent the architectural lines of the house. All paints and stains, interior and exterior, are by Colorizer.

Right: Two-part house consists of children's section in front, main living section behind, each with a balcony floor under its steep roof.

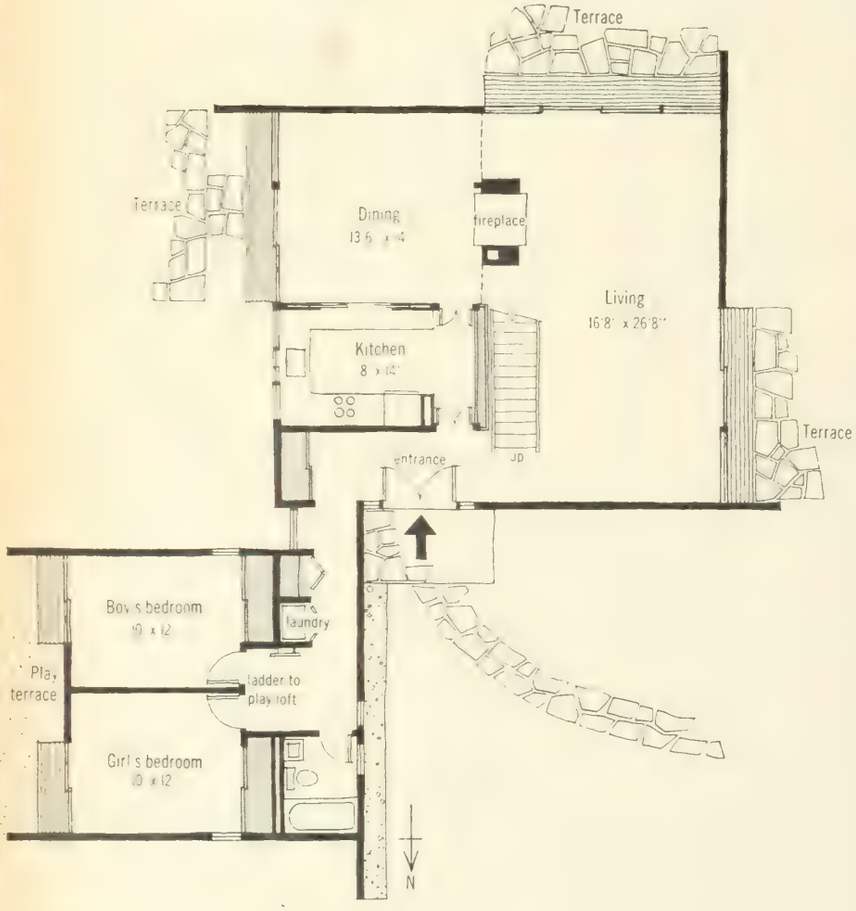
THE LIVING ROOM:

a lofty sweep anchored with colors from the outdoors



Opposite page: The three-color theme established outdoors unfolds in the living room with the Bronze Green of the stairway, the Mimosa wall behind it and the Purple Iris that accents the rafters. This room runs the depth of the house and opens to two terraces—one at the side, left below, and one at the back. Overhead, the roof rises from a height of 8′6″ at the window wall to a 20-foot peak, under which lies the parents' balcony bedroom. The glass gable screened by nature's curtain of trees brings the room an extra abundance of light without diminishing privacy from the road (for this is the front wall of the house) or cutting down on the amount of usable wall space. The bookcase is accented with all the colors that dominate the house.

Above left: The rugged, towerlike chimney adds the muted tones of old brick to the end of the room opposite the bookcase wall. Completely freestanding, the chimney serves as a screen between living and dining rooms, but the single deep hearth is open to both rooms so the family can enjoy the same fire before, during and after dinner. Sliding panels of translucent white plastic form the wall of the parents' bedroom on the upper level.



Above: A shaggy rug in shades of blue establishes the bounds of the conversation area where Bronze Green and Mimosa are accented with colors that anticipate those in dining room. Glass doors open to intimate rear terrace.

Left: Outdoors on the living room terrace, accents of Antique Gold and Mimosa sharpen the indoor blues and greens seen through the windows. We chose the curtain fabric with its woven stripes of green and purple because it looked as well from outside as inside (see opposite page). The short fin projecting from the corner of the house and painted Antique White appears to extend the living room wall outdoors, also contributes to privacy. Shopping information, page 186.

DEVELOPER: Emil Hanslin Associates
ARCHITECTS: Rudolph Bedar and Phineas Alpers
LANDSCAPE DESIGNER: Suzanne Sisson
LOCATION: Mashpee, Mass.
SIZE: 1,750 square feet

THE PLAN:

a house in tandem with a terrace for every room

Although the two sections of the house are almost like separate buildings, they are firmly linked by the entrance foyer. Turning right as you come in the front door, you enter the living room which merges, at the fireplace, with the dining room, although the latter works as a completely separate room. Swinging doors open from dining room to kitchen, which is planned so that traffic by-passes U-shaped work area. Shallow larder forms wall separating kitchen from living room. Master bedroom (upper plan) is located over dining room and kitchen, has a fireplace that shares living room chimney. Sliding panels on stairway side of bedroom screen it from living room below; opposite wall is lined with sliding-door closets. At end of room, glass wall opens to outdoor balcony. Downstairs, you turn left from entrance foyer to enter children's section. In hall are special utility closets for cleaning gear and laundry equipment and next to them, a ladder to balcony play loft that extends across that end of wing. Every major room of house has sliding glass doors opening to a terrace, each of which is partially screened by a short wall extending from corner of house.

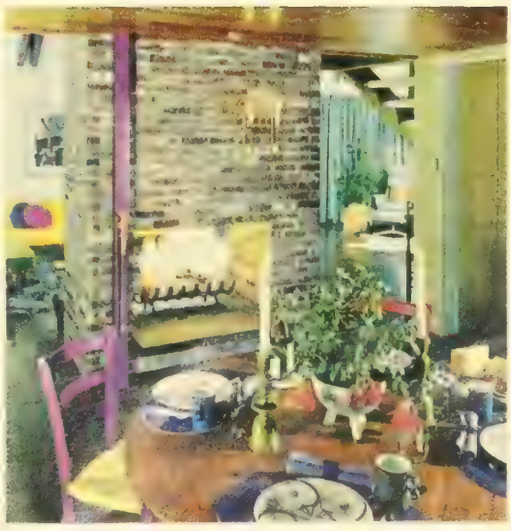
a cozy area warm with wood and spiked with vivid accents

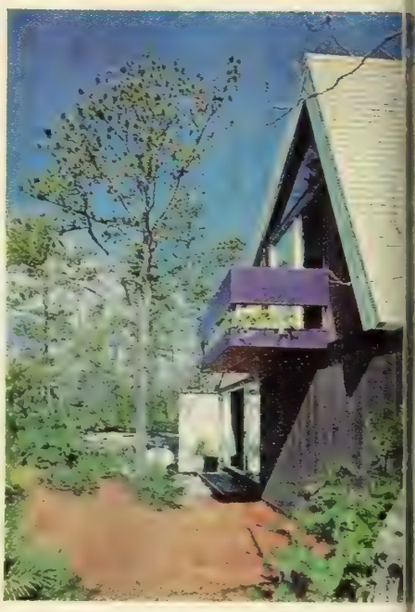
Top: Although the dining room seems to glow with heady hues, it is really dominated by wood tones: the red cedar of the clapboard ceiling, the Java Brown stain on the floor, the pale blond tone of the split-bamboo wallpaper. The one large splash of vivid color works only part time: when the curtains of Cyclamen woven with blue are drawn across the window wall. Yet, because the room is comparatively small, the few strokes of brilliant color—Loganberry, Tangerine and Delphinium—are as potent as if they were yards wide.



Lower left: Outdoors on the dining terrace (see top of page), Antique Gold, one of the constant outdoor accents, turns up again on the plastic seat cushions. Largest of the outdoor living areas, this terrace faces east—hence it is sunny for breakfast, but cool in the evening since the house shades it from the late afternoon sun.

Lower center: The old brick of the dining room fireplace blends with the room's wood tones, its color and texture dramatized by a tiny spotlight recessed in the ceiling. Because the color accents are confined to small areas, the emphasis can be shifted continually by changing the colors of table settings.

Lower right: In the kitchen, white introduces a complete change of mood from the rest of the house, creating an atmosphere both restful and workmanlike, and adding a sense of space. But two broad areas of Tangerine, on floor and on a storage wall opposite the windows, give the white a cheerful glow. Countertops of Aquamarine Blue softly reflect the blue-greens outside windows, and same hue on the ceiling, washed with light from cabinet top fluorescents, adds to the illusion of space. At right is sliding-door pass-through to dining room.



THE MASTER BEDROOM:

an airy stretch glowing with sunny pinks and yellows

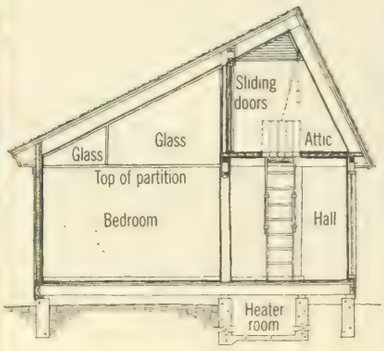
Far left: In the parents' bedroom, a new color appears for the first time in full intensity: H&G's Cyclamen. Since this room runs almost the whole depth of the house, it is large enough to be furnished as two rooms in one. At the sitting room end, the parents can breakfast by the fire on chilly mornings (fireplace is at right of chaise) or on the little outdoor balcony on warm sunny days. Sliding plastic panels on each side of the chimney screen the bedroom from the living room on the floor below.

Left: Outdoors, the balcony overlooks the living room terrace just as the bedroom itself overlooks the living room. But the balcony assures the bedroom of full privacy in spite of its wall-to-wall, floor-to-roof expanse of glass.

Lower left: The sleeping and dressing end of the bedroom is dominated by the recurring yellows and greens. Sunflower brings warmth and brightness to the windowless end of the room and Purple Iris is used not only on the rafters, but also on the sliding doors of the room-length closet wall behind the bed. Since this is the least obtrusive wall of the room, however, the large area of purple retires quietly into the background.

THIS PAGE

Above right: A tiny dressing room tucked under the gable makes enlightened use of a few square feet of space at the end of the bedroom's closet wall. With its lavatory counter, lavishly lighted mirror and generous storage space, it almost doubles the usefulness of the adjoining bathroom. Sunflower and Bronze Green are teamed here with Aquamarine Blue and Tangerine.



Right: In the bathroom proper, lively patterns—the painting, the giant butterflies on the shower curtain—take the place of opulent finishes and furnishings. The walls are covered with white burlap-textured vinyl, and the tiles, the ceiling and the shower curtain are cool Aquamarine.

THE CHILDREN'S WING:

Left: The children's wing has the quality of an exciting adventure as a result of the unconventional division of its space. From the play loft—the balcony that spans one end of the wing and divides it horizontally—you can look down into both bedrooms since the vertical divider between them stops short at a height of 7½ feet. (Thus each room has the benefit of light from both glass gables.) The partition carries the color that gives each room its special character: Citrus Green on the little girl's side as a companion to vibrant Cyclamen—Mimosa on the boy's side as a foil to strong Delphinium Blue.

Below far left: A lacy rattan bedstead gives the little girl's room an exotic fairy-tale air although it is no more fragile than the flower-strewn fabric that is stoutly plastic-laminated to the play table and window shades. The tall narrow semainier saves floor space and makes it easier to keep clothing neatly organized.

Below center left: The high, wide work table designed by H&G for the boy's room gives him ample work surface for model-making and such, keeps parts and tools off the floor. In both rooms we dispensed with curtains in favor of shades (less likely to interfere with sliding doors) and had them mounted in reverse so rollers are neatly concealed.

Below left: The play loft, approachable only by ladder and trap door, is every child's idea of a secret hideaway. Counterweighted trap door will stay safely open in any position. Mimosa wall and purple rafters (doubly vibrant at close range) are teamed with Tangerine covers on mattresses that double as overnight bunks for juvenile guests. Left wall consists of sliding doors that open loft to bedrooms.

Right above: Outdoors, the fins that frame the children's play yard are painted Aquamarine to extend visually the walls within. The jungle gym—painted all the hues common to the children's wing—makes a bright medley of color against the carpet of pine needles. To complete its job as master accent, Purple Iris spots the little wooden pony.

Gushing, flowing, pouring, sprinkling... WATER is always now

Water is a universal symbol. Tamed and trickling out of the tap, softened and fluoridated, warmed in the boiler by fires burning million-year-old oil, it is still not quite a commodity. Even for city dwellers some dim memory stirs from time to time of those ancient eons when water or the lack of it ruled everything—the sites of habitation, the paths through the wilderness, the limits of hunting grounds, famine and abundance, life and death. It can still shatter human hopes and plans. Thirty years ago, the top soil in the Plains States rose into the sky and blew away. Men had ploughed grazing land, counting on rain to bind the soil where the tough grass roots had been cut, and the rain did not come. A migration as great as that of the Mongols poured out of the Dust Bowl toward California. Steinbeck, in "The Grapes of Wrath," recorded what happened to one bit of flotsam on one stream of this Diaspora. Today, I read in the papers, the Russians are ploughing the virgin Siberian lands as, in the last century, we ploughed the Dakotas. But the stubborn old gods of rivers and rains have not yet submitted to Marxist-Leninist discipline. Disappointing harvests are reported.

Water. "It has caused more wars in the Middle East," writes Freya Stark in one of her brilliant travel books, "than even religion." In the Middle East, that is quite a feat. But there are historians who trace the breakdown of the ancient civilizations along the Tigris, the Euphrates and the Indus to wars and raiding parties which breached dams and ruined irrigation and drainage systems. Whether the cities fell first and the aqueducts and irrigation ditches silted up through neglect, or whether they were deliberately destroyed to strangle the cities, they have never been rebuilt. Let us not imagine, in our smug pride of modernity, that engineers have yet become more powerful than statesmen, for even today, there is desert where once there was fertile land. Civilization takes water for granted, but that is civilization's mistake.

It's not a mistake, though, that will ever be made by those who live past the limits of "city water." Amidst all the denouncing of suburbia, let us give it credit for this: suburban dwellers must face some of the old facts of life, of living and of weather. In the country, water comes out of a well—save for that blessed, lucky trickle which flows to a favored few from a gravity-fed spring (and that is a trickle which, in August, may dwindle disastrously). Civilization, of course, has changed the Old Oaken Bucket into an electric motor pumping so many gallons a minute to a cistern from an artesian well, but it has not changed the nature of the emotions that go with procuring this water, only bunched them together into patches of intensity with stretches of complacence in between. But when the power goes out in a storm, so does the water supply.

Where we used to live, seventy miles from New York, the power had a habit of failing before the telephone lines went. Why this should be, I don't know. But the prudence of the telephone company in locating its poles and stringing its wires allowed messages to get through from neighbor to neighbor before the telephone lines went down and silence followed darkness. Thus, a spreading rash of calls would ripple out from the center of casualty: "We've lost our power. If you still have yours, fill the bathtubs quick." Then the householder (or his wife, if he was a commuter who spent his days in an Ivory Tower in the city) would go into action and fill tubs and buckets and pots and pans against the drought to come. After one ice storm, the water famine lasted for a week in some parts of the township, and luckier folk invited their neighbors in for baths.

From time to time, as families grew in size or new houses went up with their demanding machines for washing clothes and dishes, new wells had to be dug. Then the drillers would come with their rig and thump away at the ancient granite beneath our green countryside, and the owners would groan and shake a little, too, at the dollars that each hour of thumping represented. There was water, the drillers would report encouragingly, but not yet quite enough, three gallons a minute, five gallons a minute—would they never find the level that would deliver the necessary eight gallons a minute? On and on they went, like persevering, unsuccessful Disciples of Moses, smiting the rock. Once a friend of ours, in despair after weeks of fruitless pounding, called in a water dowser. Our friend is the founder of one of the oldest and most respected public opinion polls. It seemed quaintly appropriate to think of an old man with a hazel twig in his hands questioning every foot of the poll taker's land on its water content. At last he said, "Dig here," and they dug, and found water. Of course, it was simply luck—whatever that means.

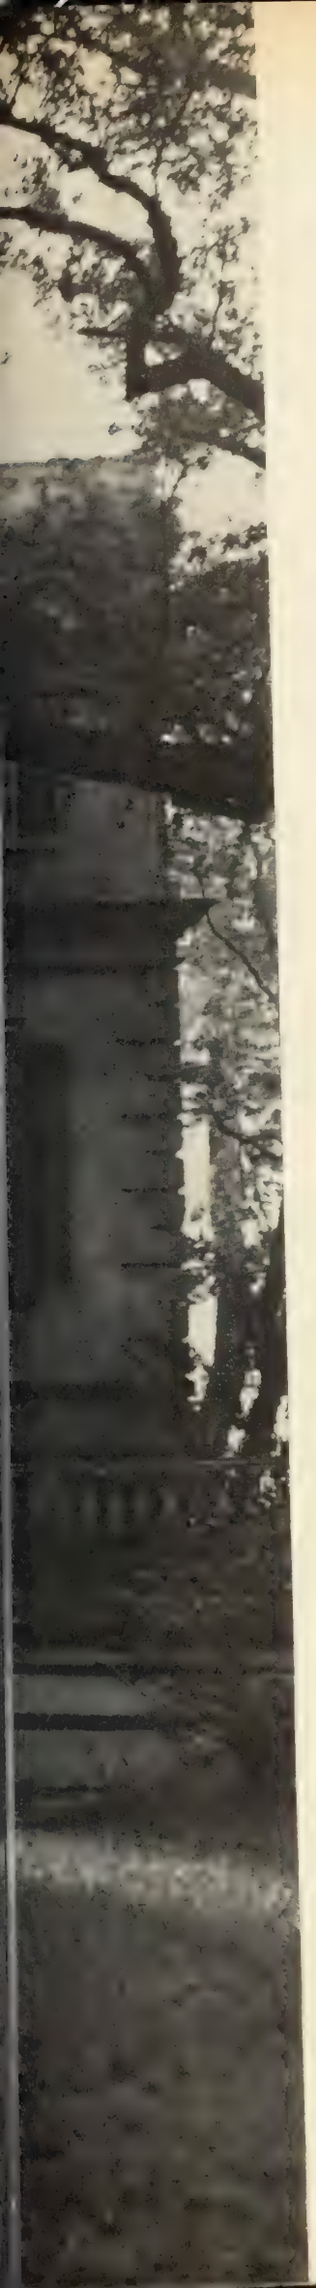
Water. It is a universal symbol, I wrote, but a symbol of what? Of birth and beginnings, as the scientists, the first chapter of Genesis and Dr. Freud all tell us? Life began in the sea, say the biochemists, when lightning discharges awoke, in the thin soup of almost-life, some monstrous protein molecules which married each other: this is our most modern mythology. An older story tells us that the Spirit of God moved on the face of the waters even before His command created Light: which might, after all, be simply a more majestic way of describing the same event. As for Freud, when he had rummaged through enough people's heads and stitched thousands of fragments of dreams together, he came to the cautious conclusion that "to dream of being in water or passing through a stream often symbolized the act of birth." Which is a nice, pedantic, and quite useless conclusion, for it leaves us with another set of waters unexplained. What shall we make of "the bitter, salt, estranging sea," or the rivers of Styx and of Lethe, which are the rivers of death?

We must think again. Water can symbolize birth, as it can symbolize death, but essentially its meaning is greater and simpler, and includes both. At the deepest level, water stands as the symbol for Change. Indeed, when St. John, in the Revelations, wished to describe the eternal landscape that would follow upon the Day of Judgment, he said, "There was no more sea." Changeless eternity could go no further.

Water is the present tense. It flows. It will not take a shape of its own, but will fill indifferently any jug or pitcher or cup, and then flow out and on, indifferent still, forgetful and uninfluenced. Its strength is the strength of movement. Even "still waters" must "run deep." If they do not, we distrust them and have made a pejorative word for such unnatural behavior—"stagnant." or standing. In New Mexico, the Indians believe that water can die. Mary Austin records the legend:

"At midnight drink no water
For I have heard said
That on the stroke of midnight
All water goes dead."



Water is always now. It demands the present participle for its description—gushing, flowing, pouring, sprinkling. As every gardener knows, last week's soaking and next week's rain might as well not exist, unless we manage to string them together by constructing tanks and cisterns and reservoirs. Thirst is immediate. Water cannot be an event, it must be a presence. To make it so must be a primary concern of any stable society, great or small.

Modern man is astonishingly modest about his achievements. I am not at all sure that this is a healthy state of mind. Might we not be more confident of our ability to deal with our future problems if we took a bit more pride in our successful solutions to problems of the past? Modesty is all very well for individuals, but civic pride can give a community a sense of wholeness and of its obligations to its citizens. We have somehow lost the knack of celebrating deeds of greatness today, and are apt to go off to the beach on the Fourth of July, each family by itself, instead of taking a little time to remember our heroes and refresh our pride.

I would like to see more holidays, and as one of them I would like to propose a Festival of the Waters. It might well be held on St. Swithin's Day. (Continued on page 208)

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Few voices are ever raised to speak for now," wrote Elizabeth Janeway in H&G a few years back, discussing the value of time. Her conclusion—"Once in a while why not let the camera alone, and stand and stare?"—led us to suspect that her own staring at a simple substance that often goes unseen and undervalued would result in some readable observations. We were not surprised when her manuscript arrived, to see that she had equated water with the "now" she values so highly—or that she had not described (as she pointed out in her covering letter) "the scene in which W. C. Fields tasted the chaser that followed the whiskey and shuddered all over." Critic and novelist ("The Third Choice," "The Walsh Girls," etc.), Mrs. Eliot Janeway is the wife of an economist, the mother of two practically grown sons and lives in a New York City house with a real terrace and a real garden where rain is duly appreciated.

WITH TIMELESS IDEAS

Walled garden is planted with same flowers and fragrant herbs that graced early Savannah plots

The houses of the past we may admire for their beauty, or we may be fascinated by the glimpses they give us of the life and values of another age. But if we study them pragmatically, we are almost sure to discover, too, a wealth of ideas we can profit from today. For although styles change, the essentials of fine design are constant, and these we can translate into contemporary terms.

The Owens-Thomas house in Savannah, Ga., is a superb example. Designed in 1817, it reflects the restrained look of early nineteenth-century classicism, made leaner and sparer still by the highly individual talent of its architect, William Jay. The designer of some of Savannah's most distinguished buildings, Jay used clean, uncluttered surfaces and restrained detail in a way that invests this house with special delights for modern eyes. The gently curved portico with its slender Ionic columns composes an impressive entrance that needs no further adornment. The window detail is so spare (cornices are merely hinted at) that the large windows emphasize rather than interrupt the sweep of the façade. Everything about the house is characterized by lightness and grace: instead of a beetling upper cornice, there is only the finely scaled detail that sweeps around the mid-section of the house. The roof is bounded by a simple parapet.

Inside, the large, simple, lofty-ceilinged rooms are pervaded by an atmosphere of quiet repose and a coolness and airiness that even Savannah summers cannot wilt. The restorers of the house, the Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences, have re-created the original wall colors and furnished the rooms, in part, with some of the Regency pieces that graced the house in its heyday when the Marquis de Lafayette and his son were among its distinguished guests. But it is architect Jay's imaginative ideas that give the rooms their special distinction. Most of the ornament—carved plaster of great delicacy—is above eye level at ceiling height. But by shaping the walls, the architect created some extraordinary effects. The long, rectangular proportions of the drawing room, for instance, he softened by curving the corners at the fireplace end, even to the extent of using curved doors. Continuing the curve in a soft, sinuous S along one side of the room, he (Continued on next page) created a niche and surmounted it by what amounts to a lighting cornice—but for natural light, not artificial. A bowed section of wall is inset with panels of glass—amber glass on the face, clear glass on the underside—that glow with daylight from a hidden window, an idea well worth borrowing today by anyone who wants to conceal a bad view. Contemporary architects have also been experimenting with curved walls, in an attempt to break away from machinelike angularity.

The contours of the walls are emphasized by the delicate, partly free-standing white frieze that bands the room. To add depth, the space behind the frieze is painted dark blue in contrast to the soft French blue of the rest of the room. Another idea which could be transplanted, as is, into even the most modern house is the decorative striped floor: the 30-foot-long planks, laid without pegs or joints, are finished alternately with dark and light stains.

In the smaller salon, the architect again created spatial illusions. Here, the ceiling is outlined with a circular molding and the corners filled in with sculptured plaster fans, giving the room a rounded look although it is actually square. The walls are a warm pink, the moldings, Pompeian red and gold. The family who built the house installed the Irish steel grate of the salon's white marble fireplace and the console in the drawing room niche. They even imported from Ireland the bog oak that gave the handsome stairway strong-as-stone treads which have shrugged off the footsteps of almost 150 years.

How to have a changeable terrace with

FREE WHEELING FLOWER BEDS

One of the greatest delights of outdoor living is its flexibility. To that end, H&G has devised a way to make the plan of your terrace as changeable as the way you use it. Our invention is a boxed flower bed on casters, designed for us by Lamar-Gillette Interiors, Ltd., which you fill with earth and plants, and wheel about to suit your purposes of the moment. The planter is an 18-inch cube built of wood, easily put together, then stained or painted. Metal casters attached to the base and brass handles on two sides assure easy mobility.

In addition to increasing the flexibility of your terrace arrangements, these planters also offer remarkable flexibility of use. Early in the season, for instance, you can use them as starter beds for bulbs or cuttings and confine them to an unfrequented spot. With growth underway, you can move them to wherever conditions are most beneficent for the plants. When they are in full bloom, you wheel the boxes into position on the terrace, not only to embellish it, but also to mark it off into separate areas for sunning, dining or conversation. Then after the plants have passed their peak, you wheel the planters away again, replacing them, if you like, by others.

These boxes-on-casters can also be fitted with shallow pebble-filled tin trays and used indoors to hold small ornamental trees like the one above left. Or you can use them unplanted for a variety of different purposes, indoors and outdoors, such as those on page 155.

Separate groups of movable planters turn the L-shaped terrace of Charles Burr Lamar's New York City penthouse into two distinctly different outdoor rooms. The narrow leg of the L, LEFT, is the dining area where cedarwood planters finished with a pale silvery wood stain are pushed together to look like a flower bed planted with hyacinths—white 'L'Innocence,' dark blue 'Bismarck' and lighter blue 'Perle Brilliant.' The end of the terrace wall is striped with black, gray and white paint to match the awning. Around the corner, OPPOSITE PAGE, *more planters create an intimate area for before-dinner cocktails. In the country, planters in full bloom wheel to a terrace party

A crowd of rolling planters bursting with growing plants—in this case, tulips and pansies—make charming alternatives for cut-flower arrangements at an outdoor luncheon. The planters are kept in another part of the garden until the day of the party, then rolled out to provide a riot of fresh-to-the-eye color. They also serve to divide a big sweep of terrace into a series of interesting and more intimate spaces. Some separate the two dining tables, ABOVE, others are banked along one edge of the terrace, LEFT, and two tulip-filled boxes are placed like sentinels at the top of the steps leading to the lawn. These boxes are finished in bright blue with a new-formula O'Brien paint that has the dense glossy look of glazed ceramic.

HOW TO BUILD A ROLLING PLANTER

For the sides of the planter, you need eight boards (two for each side) of ¾-inch cedar (or redwood or cypress), each measuring 9 inches wide by 18 inches long. Cut 3-by-¾-inch notches in the corners of the boards so that later they will lock neatly together, then join the boards by two's with corrugated fasteners. Be sure to use only nonrusting fasteners, nails and screws throughout.

Next make a frame for the bottom of the box with four 16½-inch strips of 1-by-1-inch wood. Reinforce the frame under the corners with triangular pieces of ¾-inch marine-grade plywood measuring 5 inches on each short side. Screw into the triangle heavy-duty metal casters—two of the free-wheeling type for the front, two stationary ones for the back. Attach sides of box to the frame, placing each side so that its bottom edge is 4⅞ inches below the frame (plus bottom piece) in order to hide the casters. Then screw the sides to each other.

For the bottom of the box, you need a 16½-inch square of ¾-inch marine-grade plywood. Drill it with twelve holes ½ inch in diameter, for drainage. Drop the bottom into the box and attach to frame. Reinforce corners of the box with long wedge-shaped vertical pieces made by cutting two 13-inch strips of 2-by-2-inch wood diagonally in half. To attach the two brass handles, rout out shallow depressions to fit the plates and screw in. Paint or stain the box inside and out. (For details of new outdoor paints, see page 156.)

Before filling the box with earth, line the bottom with a layer of gravel. You can plant your bulbs directly in the box or start them in peat pulp pots in a cold frame, later transplanting them, pots and all, to the planter. It will hold sixteen 4-inch pots.

Three other ways you can use our box-on-wheels

Use a spare planter for outdoor barbecues. Load it up with kindling and charcoal briquets and wheel the load easily onto your terrace.

Or use a planter indoors in the winter to transport firewood. Stained or painted a pretty color, a planter will make a gay accent beside a fireplace.

Cover a planter with a lid of ¾-inch enameled plywood to make a handy chairside table that can be wheeled onto a terrace for buffets or cocktails.

The newest marvels: OUTDOOR PAINTS

Today's newest paints for outdoors are remarkable chemical concoctions which, according to one paint authority, should not even be called paint. Strictly speaking, they are entirely new substances with new characteristics and new capabilities. Not the least of their assets is color. The new chemicals have made possible a greatly expanded range of vibrant hues for exterior use, so that now you can have as lively a color scheme outdoors as indoors.

Improvements in performance apply to almost every kind of surface for which outdoor paint is used. You can get a paint today that will stand up as well under 3 feet of water—on the inside of a swimming pool, for instance—as it will in the open air. You can get a paint that will adhere firmly to the sleek surface of aluminum, and others that take happily to such materials as asbestos, concrete, stone and steel. There are paints that produce new kinds of finishes—such as the one that dries to look like porcelain. And there are now available, for exterior use, water-soluble paints that you can wash off brushes with a garden hose. But once the paint is dry, even a deluge won't wash it off your house.

Paint has always been valued as a preservative. And nowhere is its preservative function more in order than outdoors. But even the new paints are not omnipotent: they cannot, obviously, restore to soundness a crumbling beam or a split sill. Nor can they perform at their best on surfaces which have not been properly prepared. Some surfaces need only to be cleaned thoroughly before painting. Others should be sealed with a primer coat before you apply the paint you have decided to use as a finish. Whenever you buy paint, be sure to read the directions on the can—and when you start to work, be sure to follow them to the letter.

Among recent improvements in paint packaging: you will find some brands that have the instructions printed on the lid of the can instead of on the side where they are likely to be blotted out when the paint spills over. You will also find more and more paints available in the spray cans that do so much to simplify small jobs and touch-ups.

No one paint store is likely to carry all of today's remarkable new products, but as a rule you can obtain the name of a dealer near you by writing to the manufacturer of any paint in which you are particularly interested.

New paints for varied purposes: On pilaster, a semi-gloss paint in H&G's Antique Gold, one of the rich new hues in spray cans for house trim. Martin-Senour. On steel chair, a special coating in H&G's Blueberry Blue that solidifies into a hard, ceramic-like finish by chemical reaction rather than by the evaporation of solvent that depends on atmospheric conditions. Mira-Plate by O'Brien. On flowerpot, a paint in H&G's Mimosa that allows clay to breathe, does not blister when plant is watered. Colorizer. On steel window frame, a metal primer plus a finishing coat in H&G's Bronze Green. Lowe Brothers. On bamboo blinds, a one-coat, sunproof paint in H&G's Citrus Green. Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

New paints for specific surfaces: On stepladder, a special primer that clings to aluminum plus a semi-gloss enamel in H&G's Pastel Blue Mist. Colorizer. Lining fountain, a rubber paint for surfaces constantly under water. Nelsonite by Nelson Technical Coatings. On ladder, a hard-finish coating in H&G's Blueberry Blue. (For nonslippery rungs, mix paint with fine sand.) Mira-Plate by O'Brien. On tool shed wall, a water-soluble paint in H&G's Clay Beige. Pratt & Lambert's "6-T-1." On gutter and spout, a semi-gloss trim in H&G's Tangerine—another of today's new exterior colors. Martin-Senour. On roof, a durable coating containing aluminum particles that turn away deteriorating rays of sun. Relaco.

New paints for jobs of all sizes: On terrace floor, a moisture- and salt-resistant paint for concrete, in H&G's Bronze Green. Waterlox by Empire Varnish. On tool shed door, another vivid hue for trim—H&G's Lemon Peel. Martin-Senour. On garden tools, a hard-finish paint in H&G's Empire Green. Mira-Plate by O'Brien. On asbestos siding, a primer plus a rugged-weather paint. PentaFlex by Benjamin Moore. On wagon wheel (to become an outdoor lighting fixture), a water-soluble paint in H&G's Maple Sugar. Pratt & Lambert's "6-T-1."

Just by the way you choose and use your bulbs

YOU CAN PUT A BETTER FACE ON SPRING

As with almost all forms of human activity, simply standing still may amount to falling behind. True progress is achieved, according to the copybook, by constant improvement. Too often, however, the copybook fails to tell you how to go about the improvement. But there are two ways to plan a better show of bulbs than you have ever had before, and both are infallible. The first way is to supplement good species and varieties with better ones. (Please note that we said "supplement," not "replace," although you can indulge in out-and-out replacement if you are sufficiently callous, not to say affluent, to toss good plants into the discard.) This method of upgrading does not require you to become either a connoisseur of fine bulbs or even a serious student. All it takes is a normal interest in beauty and a willingness to peruse some of the outstanding catalogues and lists of bulb specialists—plus considerably less extra expenditure than you might suppose. For it is a truism, although not without exception, that the enjoyment of superior plant varieties depends usually on other things than dollars and cents. When it comes to upgrading by means of improved varieties, you can accomplish it one step at a time or, if you are planting your first bulb garden, you can start at the top. Here is one area of living where the discipline of taking first things first goes by the board. In choosing plants you can begin with the best and never regret it.

Assuming you already have the nucleus of a spring bulb display—say a few daffodils, tulips and perhaps a handful of October-strewn crocuses—you can spend the rest of your horticultural life with the same generic types, finding new and different wonders each succeeding spring. Or you can branch outward as well as upward, so to speak, and not only amplify your varietal list in the types you already are growing, but amplify the horticultural range of basic kinds. While it is possible to have crocuses in bloom in the dead of winter and tulips flowering almost until June, you will have a much more exciting time if you really diversify. For the second method of upgrading your bulb plantings, which involves not so much the choice of the bulbs as the way you can use them most effectively, please turn the page.

First, augment good varieties with better ones

There are perhaps a dozen different kinds of spring-flowering bulbs that gardeners know and value. Some, such as tulips and daffodils, are familiar in most of their innumerable guises. Others, of which grape-hyacinths are a good example, are known in but a single species and form. But for each kind of spring bulb commonly grown in home gardens, there is at least one improved form that is less familiar and even more desirable. Here are seven examples chosen in consultation with Mrs. M. M. Graff. For her detailed evaluations, see page 204.

1 Grape-hyacinth, the durable and prolific stand-by of mid-spring, and Hyacinthus azureus, which is smaller, earlier, showier.

2 Puschkinia scilloides and Scilla tubergeniana, both superior bulbs which should be included in every permanent planting.

3 Winter-aconite is available in two forms, the usual and the tubergenii variety.

4 Chionodoxa is a mouth-filling but honored name in everyone's spring, but the more familiar C. luciliae is topped by C. gigantea.

5 Snowdrops reach their peak in Galanthus elwesii, which surpasses merely lovely G. nivalis.

6 Crocuses boast such varieties as: 'Hubert Edelsten,' 'E. A. Bowles,' 'Advance,' tomasinianus.

7 Among the best improved tulips are, T. greigii 'Jessica,' single early 'Pink Beauty,' new fosteriana hybrid 'Easter Parade.'

A carefully planned landscape setting, however simple, makes the best showcase for spring-flowering bulbs

Mariette,' salmon-pink spectacular among recent lily-flowering tulips, holds its open blossoms in good form for a full fortnight.

The appeal of spring's first, best flowers is always heartwarming and immediate—the more so when they are seen in a setting that flatters them. Even the ordinary run of spring bulb flowers (assuming the word "ordinary" is forgivable) will acquire distinction from a handsome background. When in addition you choose the superior types, species and varieties suggested on page 158, you take advantage of the best the modern bulb growers have to offer (which is very good indeed) as well as the best your own landscape has to offer (which you surely wish to be the best).

Leaving aside the fundamentals of planting the bulbs—which you do in autumn in any case, and in much the same way wherever you plant them—there are two or three important points to bear in mind. One is that the background against or in which you wish your bulbs to be seen must make possible a considerable amount of open sunlight from, say, March through June. After that, heavy shade can close in overhead and no harm will be done to next year's flower formation. Another point is that although leafy shade may not become heavy overhead until summer, root competition may be great underground all season long. And this can debilitate your bulbs seriously. Heavy groundcovers, such as pachysandra, as well as the surface roots of trees like maples and some evergreens, may cause your bulbs to "play out" in a season or two. A third point to bear in mind is that even though bulb foliage disappears by summer, the bulbs themselves remain alive and active. They must be watered and they should be fertilized—much as though you could see them above ground. The details on page 204 about choosing better-than-average species and evaluating new or improved bulb varieties will give you helpful suggestions about upgrading your bulb backgrounds as well.

GARDENS OF WINTERTHUR, WILMINGTON, DEL.

Daffodils (short cup varieties add informality), Dutch hyacinths and "ordinary" scillas make a setting for one another that is especially effective at the edge of half-shaded woods for three weeks or more.

Scilla hispanica, variously called Spanish bluebell and wood-hyacinth, is one of the last bulbs to bloom. It is invaluable among shade-dappled rhododendrons in late May and June. 'Blue Giant' and 'White Triumphator' will easily top 2 feet in height.

Tulips—the large flowered Darwin, Breeder and Cottage types as well as the new Darwin hybrids—are not commonly thought of as rock garden plants. But all they really need is sunlight during spring and at least a foot of well-drained soil.

Tulip species, LEFT, as well as what are known as "single earlies" offer substantial solid forms in contrast with the twinkling grace of scillas. Combinations can be worked similarly with chionodoxas.

Single-color tulips, RIGHT, varying only in flower form, offer garden effects unsurpassed in elegance. White is the best "color" of all—if only because it is the subtlest. Here Darwins and lily-flowered types are set off by white pansies, candytuft.

How to simulate TORTOISE SHELL

Second in our guide to the decorative art of creating fantasy finishes with paint

It was probably the Chinese, who, long before they turned their attention to inventing gunpowder, decided that more could be done with the turtle than turning it into soup. They particularly admired the rich, mellow mottlings of the shell of the hawksbill turtle. After some experiments, they discovered that the shell of this tortoise could be used as a veneer—built up in layers, molded and compressed under heat to assume many shapes. But the Chinese were not the only ancient people who loved tortoise shell. In Egypt, it combed Cleopatra's hair. In ancient Rome, it decorated furniture. And finally in France in the court of Louis XIV, it was glorified to a degree since unequaled. André Charles Boulle, the great cabinetmaker of the court, encrusted tortoise shell with ormolu and used it like a jewel on his marvelous furniture.

Simon-pure tortoise shell has never been inexpensive, nor is it today. Consequently, it has been imitated in all manner of ways. In England, during the seventeenth century, tortoise shell was simulated in painted woodwork, and in our own Early American furniture, there are examples of simple tortoise-shell graining with paint on individual pieces such as small armoires, tables and chairs. Furniture with tortoise finishes—both antique and contemporary—is also highly prized today. For a few choice examples, see page 134.

If you study a piece of real tortoise, you will notice that the markings are a series of irregular ovals and dashes, spreading out in a fan-shaped pattern, in shades that are very closely related or contrast sharply (see page 193). Both the base colors and the markings can be duplicated with paint and brush. In addition, you will observe that real tortoise shell is made up of semi-transparent layers, each layer varying slightly in shade and pattern. This is what gives such richness to the colors and depth to the pattern. When tortoise shell is simulated with paint, the illusion of layers can be achieved by applying the tortoise markings in gradations of color, beginning with the lightest, tawny shades and applying the dark, sable tones last.

André Charles Boulle also developed an imaginative variation of tortoise shell by applying the real shell over wood surfaces that had been stained a brilliant purple-red or blue-green. These variants, known as Red Boulle and Green Boulle, are also possible to effect with paint and brush.

Perhaps the favorite and most spectacular tortoise-shell finish used today is the one Venetian craftsmen originated in the seventeenth century. Quite a radical departure from real tortoise, it is based on nothing that ever existed in nature, and is called the tortoise conceit. Its pattern, which consists of circles rather than ovals and dashes, is done in the tortoise palette, but the background is either gold or silver. The tortoise conceit is often used on leather and luxurious wallpapers, but it can also be achieved with paint and brush. Picture frames, boxes, small stands and delicate chairs finished in the tortoise conceit have a look of really heady luxury.

Any of these tortoise-shell fantasy finishes may be applied to the one decorated piece that stands out in a room—a secretary for example. They are also effective for a series of stack tables, a table top with natural wood legs, a bedside commode, the top of a small console, interior window shutters and any slim spindly occasional piece. Since real tortoise was always used as a veneer and on larger pieces had to be pieced and inlaid like marquetry, the painted finish likewise should be conceived as a composition of fragments as it is on the examples, opposite page.

On page 193 you will find instructions for achieving all four types of faux tortoise as it is done at the Isabel O'Neil Studio Workshop. (For photographs of each type in color, see August H&G.) Certain techniques that have been explained previously are not repeated in detail, but you may obtain copies of the directions for Fantasy Finishes, Part I, by writing H&G's Reader Service, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

Three ways to select the components for

A HI-FI SYSTEM TO FIT YOUR BUDGET

If you are about to invest in a new music system, the prospect of getting precisely what you want is better today than ever before. Not only are there many new and exciting developments in components, you will also find that prices are spread over a much wider range. Before you invest your money, however, you will want to know about the latest developments as some of them may affect the budget you have in mind, and some may affect the space you will need.

THE TRANSISTOR TREND For many years transistors have been replacing tubes in radios and turning them into pocket-sized midgets. One of the most exciting current trends is the development of components with special transistors designed to meet the more stringent standards of high fidelity. Among the advantages transistors have over tubes is that they generate very little heat. As a result, transistorized components live longer. Also, their placement can be much more flexible: you can safely put an amplifier and a tuner, say, directly on top of one another. Transistorized components will also be somewhat more compact in size, and, as more refinements are made, the sound quality is expected to be noticeably cleaner over a wider frequency range than that of present equipment. At first, these new components may be somewhat expensive, but prices are expected to drop within a reasonably short time.

SHRINKING SPEAKERS Transistorized components are not the only ones on a get-thin regime. The new speakers are slimmer in depth than ever before. Since the arrival of stereo and the need for two speakers, designers have been trying to shrink them to save space without losing sound quality. Now there is a special speaker cone that pulses back and forth within a more contained area in a new way to give a greatly increased bass response as well as a crisper sound than was formerly possible within a small speaker enclosure. Many of the new speakers are less than 6 inches from front to back, and one is only 2⅝ inches. . . . Record players have also been pared down. Although the 12-inch turntable cannot be any smaller, several new players have smaller and lighter tone arms, smaller motors and less bulky bases.

NEW TWISTS IN TAPE RECORDERS One of the most revolutionary developments in tape equipment is a new cartridge player that you can stack with up to twenty tiny (3¾ inches square), wafer-thin, pre-recorded tape cartridges. The machine costs about $450 and plays fifteen hours of uninterrupted music. . . . A new tape recorder, for about $500, is designed so that you can both play and copy a tape simultaneously on the same machine. (Previously, to copy a tape you needed two recorders—one to play the tape, one to do the copying.) The standard part of this machine plays the recorded tape; arms swing out on each side to hold the two additional reels for the blank copying tape. . . . A new feature of several recent tape machines lets you play four track stereo tapes forward and then back without turning over and exchanging the reels.

HOW TO STAY WITHIN A BUDGET Planning a component system within a certain budget can be remarkably rewarding, since you can really tailor each particular part of the system to suit both your taste and your pocketbook. For a small budget, the most obvious procedure would be, of course, to distribute your money more or less evenly over all the components, then replace them one at a time for better designs as you can afford them. Another way might be to have the majority of your components as inexpensive as possible, but splurge on one crucial piece of equipment such as an amplifier. This one top-quality component would help to improve the sound quality of the other less expensive units and could later become the nucleus of an improved system. You can also put special emphasis on one aspect of your music system. If you particularly enjoy listening to good FM programs, say, rather than records, you might invest in a superior radio tuner and economize on the rest of the equipment. On these and the following pages are three ways to assemble and house component music systems on three different budgets based on three different philosophies of listening and buying.

A young couple's first music system

When a young couple start out in their first apartment, they are usually concerned not only with saving money, but also saving space. And a component music system can solve both these problems nicely. In this living room, there is a minimum of equipment—a changer for stereo records, a combination FM stereo radio tuner and amplifier and two slim bookshelf speakers. Prices for the tuner/amplifier and speakers are as low as possible within the bounds of good sound quality. The record changer represents more of an investment since a mediocre changer can make even topnotch records sound poor. For the housing, an arrangement of open shelves provides not only storage for the components but also for records, books and objets d'art—yet all in a mere 1-foot-deep strip of space. These shelves have the added benefit of being extremely inexpensive since they are entirely of metal, yet easy to camouflage with a new tortoise-shell-patterned paper that you peel apart and apply yourself in a twinkling. (For details, see page 196.)

An auxiliary system for a tape enthusiast

Someone who particularly enjoys listening to one form of music rather than another might very well, when selecting components, concentrate all his eggs in one basket—the tack which was taken in assembling this sitting room music system. Elsewhere in the house, there is a complete music setup for playing LP's and listening to radio, but here the emphasis is on a special setup for the member of the family who particularly loves listening to tapes. A stereo tape recorder that was once a portable is given a more permanent home in a well cut in the top of a revolving table; speakers are placed behind the cane panels on each side. Opposite the recorder, a small inexpensive record turntable (also once a portable) is added mainly for the family's younger contingent to play 45's. Entire music system comes apart for moving—equipment lifts out and legs unscrew from table base. Table and room designed by Evelyn Jablow for Westinghouse Electric Corp.

A superior music system for a family

A battery of good components deserves equally good housing, so a really generous budget might well include the cost of a handsome cabinet. The 78-inch-long cherry console in this entrance hall serves two ends. In its own right, with its silk-lined doors closed, it is a thoroughly attractive accent piece. Inside, there are three compartments roomy enough to hold a full complement of quality components—a stereo record changer and a stereo amplifier in the center section; an AM-FM stereo radio tuner and a speaker at one end; a stereo tape recorder and the second speaker at the other end. The drawers above store boxes of tape and record-cleaning cloths. Stationed where it is, the cabinet is strategically located to provide music for the adjoining living and dining rooms, yet conveniently out of the way, so that the mechanics of music-making, such as getting out records and loading them onto the changer, can be accomplished without disturbing guests.

The lesser wines of Europe

By Hugh Johnson

EDITOR'S NOTE: Hugh Johnson is editor of Wine and Food, an English quarterly magazine devoted to the gastronomic arts. Here he reports on the small but spirited wines he has found on sampling trips outside the great wine belts of France and Germany.

Common consent has put the wines of Champagne, Burgundy, Bordeaux, the Rhine and the Moselle, Oporto and Jerez in the front rank. These are the areas whose products are most familiar to wine-importing countries. But the greater part of the wine-drinking population of Europe has never tasted half these wines and has no great wish to. They drink and like the wine that is indigenous to their soil, goes with their food and way of life.

Wine that ranks below the recognized category of "great" makes its name in a haphazard way, mostly by word of mouth. It may be that you dined at Aix last summer and came across a sensational little wine from the hillside just behind the restaurant, or at Amalfi you loved the wine that grew practically in the sea. You talked about your finds, asked for them elsewhere. If the proprietor of a small vineyard is an entrepreneur at heart, he will strive to promote and export his wines. If on the other hand he wants nothing more than to sleep under his ancestral vine, he will do nothing at all to increase his sales. So it happens that one wine is admired, discussed, demanded and finally shipped overseas, while another—just as good—stays at home.

Portugal, Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Austria and Yugoslavia, as well as France and Germany, all have wines which, as Michelin's red guidebook says, "are worth the detour" to drink under ideal conditions. Of late, many of these wines are arriving, more or less in their natural state, in the United States. Their price alone, much lower than the great Burgundies and Bordeaux, makes them attractive buys, but they have a lot to recommend them in their own right.

Going from west to east across Europe, we start in Portugal and find some individual wines of outstandingly high quality.

PORTUGAL

The northern part of Portugal is famous for its wines and its fish. The white wine of the Douro valley has a dry bite and clean finish which makes it marvelous when served with the fish—above all, the cod. This area produces large quantities of both red and white wines, but the red tends to harshness and is never better than dull. The Douro valley is also the home of port, and vintage port is the greatest product of Portugal, although to the people there it is practically unknown. They are fond of white port, which has all the body of the usual kind, but struggles to be dry—sometimes with a rather ungainly result. They drink it as an apéritif, well iced. Mostly, however, the Portuguese stick to the unfortified table wines.

The northern province of Minho specializes in vinho verde, which means green wine. Actually the wine may be white, red or pink—"green" refers to its age and character, which is as fresh as an early morning at vintage time. A good deal of the gas of fermentation is still in the wine, and the cork has to be tied down with string. The wine is in a half-champagne state, lightly prickly on the tongue and slightly tart on the palate, as gay and refreshing as it could possibly be. Obviously this is a

Swiss Cook Book

By Nika Standen Hazelton

Swiss food is as delightfully varied as the Swiss landscape. There is marvelous hotel food in the grand Continental manner (the Swiss are famed for their hotel and restaurant schools and have produced some of the world's finest chefs), and there are regional dishes as ancient as Swiss history. In the Italian, French and German-speaking areas of Switzerland, the cooking has been influenced by the cuisines of those countries. In the eastern part of Switzerland, the Grisons, the food is quite different from anywhere else. But all Swiss food has one thing in common, whether you eat it in a restaurant, in a quaint old hotel under the sign of the lion or in a Swiss home: it is very good. Switzerland holds some alluring gastronomical surprises: delicate river or lake fish not known in the Western hemisphere, such as egli and bondelles; bundnerfleisch, the superb air-dried beef of the Grisons; voluptuous meat pies and vol-au-vents from St. Gall and Lucerne; asparagus from the Rhone valley; mixed grills from the Ticino; different fondues from Fribourg and Neuchâtel; honey cakes from Basel; and, throughout Switzerland, a collection of noble sausages and cheeses of which the Swiss are justly proud.

Since the Swiss housewife is so insistent on serving good food, the markets and stores are pleased to co-operate. Butchers sell meats larded and barded and will make up skewers of different kinds of meats and intricate galantines and pâtés en croute which would take hours to prepare at home. Bakeries sell puff paste and ready-to-use doughs in addition to breads and rolls. Dairies offer a fine selection of cheeses, from the sweet Emmental and nuttier Gruyère to delicious little cream cheeses made fresh every day. Confiseries and konditorei dispense tempting cakes, fruit ices, café and chocolat glacés and a hundred and one other elegant goodies.

The pleasures of Swiss food are matched by the wines and spirits. All of Switzerland is a vineyard, and wine is an integral part of Swiss life and cooking, as is the favorite spirit—kirsch—a colorless, dry, powerful liquid distilled from special mountain cherries. Kirsch flavors and animates one of the most famous of all the many delicious specialties of Switzerland—the true Swiss cheese fondue.

Appetizers

Ramequins

Serve these little tartlets as appetizers or late night snacks, as the Swiss do, with a bottle of well-chilled white Neuchâtel wine.

Pie or puff pastry
2 cups grated Swiss cheese
1 cup light cream
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon cayenne

Line 2" tartlet or muffin pans with pie or puff pastry. Beat together cheese, cream, eggs, salt, mustard and cayenne. Spoon into lined tartlet or muffin pans, filling each about half full. Bake in a 400° oven for 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Serve very hot. Makes about 16 tartlets.

Echte Basler Zwiebelwaehe

(The Original Basel Onion Tart)

This is a specialty of the old and beautiful city of Basel that is served during carnival time.

DOUGH:
2 cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
4 tablespoons ice water (about)

FILLING:
1½ tablespoons butter
6 large onions, thinly sliced
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup diced bacon
2 cups milk
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups shredded cheese

To make dough, sift flour with salt. Cut in butter until particles are the size of small peas. Add ice water. Stir until a stiff dough is formed. Knead on a lightly floured board. Roll out to fit the bottom and sides of a well-buttered 10" layer cake pan. Prick dough several times with a fork.

To make filling, heat butter in a pan and sauté onions. Add salt and diced bacon. Cook over medium heat until onions and bacon are golden brown. Add milk gradually to the flour. Stir until smooth. Beat in eggs and cheese. Add sautéed onions and bacon, including the fat in which they were sautéed.

Pour mixture into dough-lined pan. Bake at 350° for 30 minutes. Raise oven temperature to 400° and bake 5 minutes longer, or until top is browned and crisp. Cut into wedges; serve hot.

Heidi Albonico's Cheese Appetizers

Mash together equal quantities of sweet butter and Roquefort or Danish Blue cheese. Sandwich a little of the mixture between two walnut or pecan halves. Chill before serving.

Swiss Specialties

Raclette (from the French word râcler, to scrape), cheese fondue (from fondre, to melt), fondue Bourguignonne and fondue Orientale have so enchanted the multitude of Americans who visit Switzerland every year that they have become familiar in this country. These dishes make for amusing, convivial eating, and with the exception of raclette, they are practical for informal entertaining since all the ingredients can be readied in advance and cooked at the table.

La Vraie Fondue

In Switzerland, this most glorious of all dunks is made on the kitchen stove in a "caquelon," a heavy earthenware or cast-iron casserole that holds the heat. It is then placed on a warmer (for the fondue must be kept hot) in the middle of the table for serving. A heavy chafing dish is good for making fondue, which must be cooked over very low heat or the cheese will become stringy.

1 pound natural Switzerland cheese (Emmental, Gruyère or a mixture of both)
2 tablespoons flour
1 clove fresh garlic, cut
2 cups dry white wine
3 tablespoons kirsch or 4 tablespoons cognac
Nutmeg, pepper and salt to taste
2 loaves crusty Italian or French bread, cut into bite-size pieces, each with some crust

Shred cheese or cut into small, transparent slices. Dredge cheese with flour. Rub the cooking utensil with the cut sides of the garlic. Pour in wine, set over low heat. When wine is heated to the point that air bubbles rise to the surface, add cheese gradually, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon. Stir until cheese is melted. Stir in kirsch, and a pinch of nutmeg, pepper and salt. Keep fondue hot, but below the simmering point. If the mixture becomes too thick, thin with a little wine, a tablespoon at a time. Serve with the bite-size pieces of bread, which are speared on special two-pronged forks (or ordinary forks) and dipped into the fondue. Serves 4–6 as a meal, more as a dunk.

La Raclette

Those of us given to nostalgic eating may remember the raclette made by Heidi's grandfather, who scraped melted cheese for supper in front of his open hearth.

This country dish is made by holding a whole section of cheese before an open fire, or more recently, before a special electric grill. When the cheese starts to melt, the melted part is scraped off with a knife, and placed on an extremely hot plate to prevent the cheese from becoming gummy. (For easier handling, the hot plate is put on a cold one.) Each serving of raclette is accompanied by a boiled potato, sour pickles and sour onions, and plenty of white wine or beer. The number of servings consumed at one sitting can be astonishing because raclette is very good indeed.

Raclette is made with Bagnes or Gomser cheese from the Valais. These cheeses melt and also have a flavor all of their own. Unfortunately, they seldom reach our American cheese specialty stores, but they certainly are well worth watching for.

From Switzerland also comes an acceptable substitute method of making raclette without a special grill or open fire, which can be used with American semisoft cheeses that will melt, such as Münster, Tilsit and California Jack.

Preheat oven to 450°. On metal or other ovenproof plate, place two or three paper-thin slices of cheese. (This will make one serving.) Pop into the hot oven until cheese is melted. Serve immediately with a boiled potato, pickles and sour onions.

La Fondue Bourguignonne

This consists of cubed meat, cooked in hot fat, dipped in various sauces and accompaniments. Each guest cooks his own at the table, in a special set that can be bought at fine housewares stores, or in a small, deep saucepan set over a spirit or electrical warmer, in a chafing dish or in an electric skillet.

To set the table for a fondue Bourguignonne, place the heating unit in the middle of the table, within easy reach of the guests. Place salt and paprika shakers, pepper mills, sauces and other fondue accompaniments around it. Or, use a Lazy Susan. For each guest, allow two forks, a plate with the prepared meat, a salad plate, a finger bowl with lukewarm water and a slice of lemon, and napkins.

To prepare the fondue Bourguignonne, allow about ½ pound of lean sirloin or other tender beef for each serving. Cut meat into ¾" to 1" cubes, and place on small wooden or china plates decorated with greens. In the kitchen, half fill the fondue saucepan with oil or clarified butter. (Some Swiss prefer oil, others butter—but the butter must be clarified.) Heat to boiling point and set on heating unit. Put in a small piece of bread to prevent sputtering.

To cook and eat the fondue Bourguignonne, each guest first helps himself to sauces and other accompaniments, which he puts on his salad plate. He then spears a piece of meat with the first fork and dips it into the boiling fat, cooking it to his liking. Since the fork will be very hot by this time, the guest transfers his meat to the second fork and dips it into the sauce of his choice. While he is eating, the first fork will have cooled, and he will use it to cook the next piece of meat.

The charm of a fondue Bourguignonne, which has nothing to do with the real fondue save similar equipment, lies in the number of sauces and side dishes, which can be as fanciful as the hostess wishes. It also gives guests something to do, which most people like, and is convenient for the hostess, who can prepare the whole meal well ahead of time. Make your choice from any of the following sauces and side dishes:

Béarnaise or Hollandaise Sauce (a must)
Cumberland Sauce
Mustard Sauce
Tomato Mayonnaise
Horseradish Cream (cold or hot)
Sauce Diable
Hot and mild mustards
Mixed pickles
Chutney
Tomato Catsup
Mushroom Catsup
Pickled onions
Olives
Fresh grated horseradish or bottled horseradish
Pickled mushrooms

Mushroom and radish salads, made by slicing vegetables thinly and marinating them in olive oil and lemon juice with salt and pepper to taste, are good accompaniments—or cottage cheese and chives, cranberry sauce or jelly for guests who like something lighter.

La Fondue Orientale

The most recent of Swiss table procedures, this resembles the fondue Bourguignonne, except for the fact that the meat is cooked in boiling hot bouillon rather than fat.

For a fondue Orientale, substitute beef or chicken bouillon for the hot fat. The bouillon must continue to boil throughout the meal.

The meats can be varied, and include lean veal and pork besides the beef. Lamb or veal kidneys may also be used. These should be soaked in cold water for ½ hour before using (change the water 3 times, drain and dry) and all the hard cores removed.

Have the butcher slice the meats into wafer-thin, bite-size pieces. Or slice the meats at home, freezing them slightly to make the job easier.

Beef, veal and kidneys should be lightly cooked in the boiling bouillon, but pork must be well cooked.

Serve the fondue Orientale with the same sauces and accompaniments listed for the fondue Bourguignonne.

Vegetables

Weisse Luzerner Rueben

(White Turnips, Lucerne Style)

12 small or 6 medium white turnips, peeled and cut julienne
¼ cup cubed bacon
1 large onion, chopped
½ teaspoon salt

Cook turnips in boiling salted water until barely tender. Fry bacon in a skillet. Add onion and cook until golden brown. Drain turnips and add salt. Add turnips to bacon and sauté over low heat about 20 minutes, or until golden brown. Stir occasionally. Serve with boiled beef. Serves 6.

Kartoffelroesti

(Fried Potatoes)

Kartoffelroesti is one of the national dishes of Switzerland and eaten daily by the majority of the population.

2 pounds potatoes
4 tablespoons butter
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons hot water
Paprika

Boil potatoes in their skins and cool. Peel and shred, or cut into julienne strips. Heat butter in a large skillet. Gradually add potatoes and salt. Cook over low heat, turning frequently with a spatula, until potatoes are soft and yellow. Press potatoes with spatula into a flat cake. Sprinkle with hot water. Cover and cook over low heat until potatoes are crusty at the bottom, about 10 to 15 minutes. Shake pan frequently to prevent scorching and, if necessary, add a little more butter to prevent sticking. Turn into a hot serving dish crusty side up, sprinkle top with paprika and serve immediately. Serves 4–6.

Variation: Add 3 slices diced bacon or ½ cup diced Swiss cheese to the potatoes in the skillet.

Les Pommes de Terre aux Poireaux à la Mode de Fribourg

(Fribourg Potatoes with Leeks)

2½ pounds potatoes, peeled
2 tablespoons butter
¾ pound leeks, thinly sliced
2 cups grated Swiss cheese
3 eggs, well beaten
1⅓ cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup grated cheese

Cook potatoes until tender in boiling salted water. Drain, cool and cut into ⅛" slices. Melt butter and cook leeks until golden. Thoroughly butter a 2-quart casserole or baking dish, put in a layer of potatoes, then a layer of leeks, then a layer of grated cheese, ending with potatoes. Beat eggs with milk, salt and nutmeg. Pour mixture over layers in casserole. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in 375° oven for 20 to 30 minutes, or until eggs are set and top golden brown. Serves 6.

Unterwaeldner Ofentoeri

(Mashed Potatoes Baked with Bacon)

2 pounds potatoes
¼ cup butter, softened
2 eggs
⅓ cup heavy cream
Salt, pepper
2 tablespoons minced onion
½ pound thickly sliced bacon, cut into ½" strips

Boil potatoes in their skins. Peel. While still warm, force through a sieve or a food mill. Stir in butter. Beat eggs with heavy cream and add to potatoes. Season with salt and pepper to taste. (The amount of salt depends on the saltiness of the bacon.) Add onion, blend mixture thoroughly. Place in buttered baking dish. Smooth top with a knife or a spatula. Stick bacon strips like porcupine quills into potato mixture. Bake in 375° oven until potatoes are browned and bacon is crisp. Serve with a mixed green salad with a tart dressing. Serves 4–6.

Bohnengericht Von Uri

(Beans Uri Style)

A good substantial buffet dish. The measurements can be easily doubled.

1 pound (2 cups) pea beans
2 onions, finely chopped
¼ cup butter
½ pound thickly sliced bacon, cubed
3 cups bouillon (about)
2 medium tomatoes, peeled and cut into wedges
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
Fresh fried or canned fried onions (optional)

Soak pea beans overnight. Drain. In a large 1½-quart saucepan, sauté onions in butter until soft and transparent. Add bacon. Sauté until bacon is partially cooked. Add drained beans. Sauté for 2 to 3 minutes. Add 1 cup bouillon. Cover tightly. Cook over medium heat for about 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Add another cup of bouillon and tomatoes. Cover and simmer over low heat, shaking pan occasionally to prevent scorching. Add remaining bouillon (plus more, if necessary) to prevent sticking. When beans are tender, stir in salt, pepper and nutmeg. Top with fresh fried onions or canned fried onions heated according to directions. In Switzerland, this is served with boiled potatoes for lunch or supper, followed by a plum or apple compote. Serves 4–6.

Entrées

Zuercher Topf

(Zurich Casserole)

1½ pounds boneless pork, cubed
1½ tablespoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 onion, chopped
1½ pounds cabbage, shredded
4 medium potatoes, peeled and cubed
4 white turnips, peeled and sliced
Water or bouillion

Place a layer of ½ the pork, salt, pepper, onion, cabbage, potatoes and turnips in a Dutch oven. Top with another layer of the remaining ingredients. Add sufficient water or bouillon to fill the pan halfway. Cover tightly. Simmer over low heat about 1½ to 2 hours, or until pork is very tender. Serve as a one-dish meal with a tart cucumber salad. Serves 4–6.

Les Rognons de Veau Claridenhof

(Kidneys in Wine and Cream)

2 veal kidneys
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced shallot
4 crushed juniper berries
2 tablespoons gin
1 teaspoon Dijon or other mild mustard
1 cup Dôle du Valais or other dry red wine
1 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Salt, pepper

Soak kidneys in cold water for 30 minutes before using. Change water twice. Drain, dry and cut into ½" slices. Cut away excessive fat. Heat butter in skillet. Add minced shallot and juniper berries and cook 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add kidneys and cook until barely browned. Add gin and flame. Remove kidneys from skillet and spread with mustard. Keep hot. Stir wine, cream and parsley into the skillet. Bring to a boil, and boil down to desired sauce consistency, about ½ to ¾ cup. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Return kidneys to sauce and heat through briefly. Serve immediately, with boiled rice. Serves 2.

Note: For a stronger kidney flavor, do not soak the kidneys, but only wash and dry.

Zuercher Leberspiessli

(Liver Skewers Zurich Style)

1½ pounds calf or beef liver
24 pieces leaf sage or 1 teaspoon powdered sage
12 slices bacon
¼ cup butter
2 onions, thinly sliced
Salt

Cut liver into 24 finger-length pieces. Place 1 sage leaf on each piece of liver. Wrap ½ slice bacon around liver and sage. Spear 4 wrapped pieces on each of 6 skewers. Melt butter in a large heavy skillet and lightly brown onions. Place skewers in skillet. Cook uncovered over low heat about 15 minutes. Sprinkle with salt before serving, the amount depends on the saltiness of the bacon. Serve skewers on buttered string beans, with kartoffelroesti. Serves 6.

Note: The skewered meat may also be cooked for 15 minutes in a 400° oven, turning once. Fresh leaf sage is best for this dish. Dried leaf sage, found in Italian stores, ranks next.

Kalbsfilet Edith Boos

(Roast Veal Edith Boos)

2–3 pound veal roast (loin or leg)
2 tablespoons salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 clove garlic, pressed
2 teaspoons grated onion
⅔ cup cold roast veal or beef drippings or 1 tablespoon meat glaze
10 slices bacon

Cut veal roast in half lengthwise, but do not cut meat completely through. Open up meat. Rub salt, pepper, garlic and onion into inside of meat and spread drippings or meat glaze over half of it. Press the two halves of the meat together. Wrap bacon slices around meat, and tie with string or fasten with toothpicks. Place on rack in shallow pan. Roast in a 350° oven from 45 minutes to 1½ hours, or until completely cooked through. Serve with kartoffelroesti and a green salad. Serves 4–6.

Tournedos Flambés Mövenpick

The success of this dish depends on the flavor combination of the wines and spirits. It's easy to make if ingredients are assembled beforehand.

4 tournedos, 1" to 1½" thick
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
5 tablespoons butter
¼ cup minced shallots
¾ teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
4 tablespoons cognac
Dijon or other mild mustard
½ cups Pinot Noir red wine
6 tablespoons dry Madeira
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Have butcher tie tournedos so that they won't come apart in cooking, or secure them yourself with wooden toothpicks. Sprinkle tournedos with salt and pepper on both sides. Heat 4 tablespoons butter in a large heavy skillet. Add tournedos, shallots and rosemary. Cook over high heat 1 minute on each side. Add cognac and flame. When the flame has died down, transfer tournedos to a heated plate. Spread on both sides with very little Dijon or other mild mustard. Keep warm. Pour red wine and dry Madeira into skillet liquid. Cook uncovered until reduced to ¾ cup liquid. Meanwhile, sauté mushrooms in remaining 1 tablespoon butter for about 2 minutes. Mushrooms must be still white and firm. Add mushrooms, cream and chopped parsley to reduced skillet liquid. Correct seasonings. Return tournedos to the skillet and cook them uncovered over medium heat for about 8 to 10 minutes, or to desired doneness, turning once. Serve with rice and a salad of Belgian endive and watercress dressed with oil and lemon juice. Serves 4.

Note: Do not cook more than 4 tournedos at one time. If more are needed, use two skillets.

Le Rôti de Veau au Citron

(Roast Veal with Lemon)

3-pound rolled veal roast, shoulder or rump
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon white pepper
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
3 tablespoons water
Grated rind of 1 lemon
Juice of 3 medium lemons

Remove any fat in which the veal roast may be wrapped, but keep securely tied. Rub veal with salt, pepper, cinnamon and nutmeg. Place in a heavy casserole or kettle which must have a tight fitting lid. Add water, cover, and simmer over lowest possible heat for 1 hour. Add lemon rind and juice. Cover and continue simmering until veal is tender, about 2 hours. Place veal on hot platter. Slice and keep hot. Reduce pan juices to ¾ cup. Pour over veal slices. Serve with asparagus or artichokes Hollandaise. Delicious hot or cold. Serves 4–6.

Note: Do not be disappointed if the veal does not slice well when hot. When cooking a larger roast, season and spice to taste, and count on 1 tablespoon water and the juice of 1 medium lemon for each pound of meat.

Variation: For a richer sauce, beat 2 egg yolks into ⅓ cup heavy cream. Add to reduced pan liquid and heat through, without boiling. Omit Hollandaise Sauce and serve a plain green vegetable instead.

Suprême de Volaille au Kirsch

4 chicken breasts
6 tablespoons clarified butter
½ cup cognac
½ cup kirsch
3 large egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
Salt, pepper
2 medium truffles, minced

Have butcher bone, skin and halve chicken breasts. Heat butter in 2 large skillets. (Two skillets are needed since 1 skillet will not accommodate the 8 pieces of chicken, which must cook without touching each other.) Sauté chicken breasts in hot butter over medium heat, about 8 to 10 minutes on each side, depending on size. Transfer chicken to hot serving platter. Keep hot. Combine juices from both skillets in one. Add cognac and kirsch, scraping up the brown glaze at the bottom of the skillet. Beat together egg yolks and cream. Heat skillet juices and flame. As the flame gradually dies down, lower heat. Stir cream mixture into skillet. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Heat through thoroughly over low heat, but do not boil. Pour sauce over chicken breasts and sprinkle with minced truffles. Garnish with triangles of puff paste or toast and sautéed mushroom caps. Serve tiny buttered peas. Serves 8.

St. Galler Kloster Pastete

(St. Gall Abbey Meat Pie)

This delicious dish is centuries old.

1 recipe flaky pie crust for a double-crust 9" pie
8 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup flour
2 large onions, minced
Grated rind of 2 lemons
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
2 pounds veal stew, free of bones and gristle, cut into 1" cubes
1⅓ cups white wine
1 egg yolk, well beaten

Roll out ½ of the pie crust dough to fit the bottom of a well-greased spring-form pan. Blend bread crumbs with flour, onions, lemon rind, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Divide into four portions. Divide cubed veal into 3 portions. Starting and ending with the bread-crumb mixture, layer the crumbs and the meat in the pastry-lined spring-form pan. Press each layer down. Pour wine on top. Roll out remaining pie crust to fit the top of the pan. Fit crust on top of meat mixture and brush with beaten egg yolk. Place spring form on a shallow baking pan to prevent spillage. Bake at 300° for 3 hours. Serve the meat pie hot, with a salad. Serves 6–8.

Gebackener Rheinsalm

(Fried Rhine Salmon)

2 pounds salmon, cut into slices about 1" thick
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup flour
½ cup butter
2 medium onions, sliced
¼ cup salad oil
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Sprinkle salmon with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Let stand for 30 minutes. Dry salmon and coat slices with flour. Fry in hot butter over medium heat for 6 to 8 minutes, or until golden brown on both sides. Turn once during cooking time. While salmon is frying, fry onions in heated salad oil until crisp. Place salmon on hot serving platter and top with fried onions. Sprinkle with parsley. Serve with lemon wedges and boiled potatoes. Serves 4.

Berner Platte

(Assorted Meats with Sauerkraut, Potatoes and String Beans)

This is a good party dish for robust eaters. All the ingredients can be cooked beforehand and assembled at serving time.

FIRST POT:
2 tablespoons bacon fat or other shortening
1 onion, chopped
2 cups sauerkraut
4 juniper berries, crushed
1 cup dry white wine
6 smoked pork chops (about 3 pounds)
½ pound bacon, in one piece
12" Polish sausage or mild Italian sausage

SECOND POT:
3 pigs' hocks
6 pigs' ears and 2 pigs' tongues or 1 small beef tongue, fresh or smoked, ready to cook
2 quarts water
2 teaspoons salt
⅓ cup sliced celery
1 leek or 1 medium onion, chopped
1 carrot, sliced

THIRD POT:
6 medium potatoes, peeled and quartered

FOURTH POT:
1 pound string beans
2 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper

To prepare first pot, melt bacon fat or shortening in Dutch kettle, and brown onion. Add sauerkraut, juniper berries and white wine. Place pork chops and bacon on sauerkraut. Simmer covered over low heat for 1 hour. Add Polish or Italian sausage. Simmer covered for 1 more hour.

To prepare second pot, place hocks, ears and tongues in Dutch kettle. Add water, salt, celery, leek and carrot. Simmer covered over low heat about 1 hour, or until meat is tender.

To prepare third pot, cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Shake in pan in which they were cooked over lowest possible heat to dry. Cover with clean kitchen towel, keep warm.

To prepare fourth pot, cook string beans in boiling salted water in the usual manner. Season with butter, salt and pepper to taste. Keep warm.

To assemble Berner Platte, slice all meats. Heat 2 large serving platters. Place sauerkraut on first platter. Arrange pork chops, sliced bacon and sliced sausage on top in rows. Place string beans on second platter. Arrange pigs' hocks, ears and sliced tongue on top in rows. Serve steamed potatoes separately. Have a choice of several kinds of mild and hot mustards on the table. Serves 10–12.

Les Filets de Perche au Fendant de Sion

(Perch Fillets Poached in Wine)

2 pounds perch or other fish fillets
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon grated onion
3 large mushroom caps, finely chopped
3 cooked or canned artichoke bottoms, finely chopped
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1½ cups Fendant de Sion wine or other dry white wine
3 tablespoons cream
¼ cup grated Swiss cheese

Sprinkle fish with salt and pepper. Melt butter in a large deep skillet. Add grated onion, mushroom caps, artichoke bottoms and parsley. Cook for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Add wine and bring to a boil. Reduce heat so that liquid barely simmers. Place fish fillets in skillet. Depending on thickness of fillets, cook 5 to 8 minutes, or until barely tender. Transfer fish to buttered shallow baking dish. Reduce pan liquid to ¾ cup, remove from heat and stir in cream. Strain this sauce over fish. Sprinkle top with grated cheese and bake in a 425° oven about 10 minutes, or until top is golden brown. Serve with artichoke bottoms filled with tiny peas heated in cream, drained and flavored with salt and a tiny pinch of nutmeg. Serves 4.

Zuercher Geschnetzeltes Bellevoir

(Minced Veal Zurich Style)

This is one of Zurich's most famous dishes, and one of the world's best ways to cook veal. The success of the dish depends on really tender veal, which is cut into thin pieces to resemble thick julienne strips.

1½ pounds veal cutlet or other boneless veal
6 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons minced shallots
3 tablespoons cognac
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
1⅓ cups dry white wine, heated, or hot bouillon
1 cup heavy cream

Trim meat of all fat. Cut against the grain into 1"-thin pieces. Heat butter in a large skillet. Add shallots and cook 2 minutes. Add veal. Cook for 1 minute. Flame with cognac. When flame has died down, sprinkle flour over veal. Stir in salt and pepper. Add hot white wine or bouillon and cream. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil and thickens. Serve with noodles or mashed potatoes and a green salad. Serves 4–6.

Note: If hot bouillon is used rather than wine, add 3 tablespoons of lemon juice to meat, since the dish should have a piquant taste.

Cakes, Cookies, Breads

Totenbeinli

These cookies are eaten on All Souls' Day, November 2nd.

¾ pound almonds
1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
3 medium eggs
1 tablespoon rose or orange water
2½–3 cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup candied citron, chopped
2 egg yolks, beaten with 1 tablespoon cold water

Blanch almonds. While still moist and warm, cut into slivers with a sharp knife. There should be about 3¾ cups. Cream butter with sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in rose or orange water. Beat in 2½ cups flour and salt. The dough will be sticky, but if it is too sticky to handle, beat in an additional ½ cup flour, a little at a time. Knead dough on lightly floured board or kitchen table. Knead in slivered almonds and citron. Wrap dough in waxed paper and chill for 2 hours.

Shape into finger-length rolls and place on greased and floured baking sheets. Preheat oven to 375°. Paint cookies with beaten egg yolk. Depending on size of cookies, bake about 10 to 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool for 2 minutes on baking sheets, then remove cookies with spatula or broad knife. Makes about 40 cookies.

Note: Since many ovens tend to overheat, any second and subsequent batches of cookies may take less time to bake. Watch them carefully.

Apfeltorte mit Rahm

(Apple Cake with Cream)

1¼ cups flour
2 egg yolks
Sugar
Grated rind of 1 lemon
½ cup butter, softened and cut into small pieces
6 cups peeled, cored and sliced apples (about)
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup heavy cream
½ cup blanched almonds, slivered

Sift flour onto a baking board or into a large bowl. Make a well in the middle. Put 1 egg yolk, 1 tablespoon sugar, lemon rind and butter into well. Stir together with a fork. Work dough with floured hands until all ingredients have blended together and dough is smooth. Pat dough with fingers into bottom and sides of a 9" pie plate. Crimp sides with a fork. Chill for at least 2 hours.

Place apples on top of chilled dough in slightly overlapping circles. Sprinkle with ½ cup sugar and nutmeg. Bake in a 350° oven for 15 minutes. Beat together the remaining egg yolk, cream and almonds and drip over fruit. Continue baking for 20 minutes, or until dough is golden brown, fruit tender. Serve warm. Serves 6–8.

Appenzeller Birnenwecken

(Appenzell Pear Loaf)

This loaf is delicious and keeps a long time.

DOUGH:
4 tablespoons butter
¾ cup milk
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1 egg, well beaten
2 packages dry yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
5–6 cups all-purpose flour

FILLING:
1 pound dried pears or apples
½ pound dried prunes
½ cup raisins
¾ cup figs
½ cup walnuts, coarsely chopped
Juice of 2 lemons
¼ cup finely chopped citron
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons kirsch or cognac
1 cup red wine (about)
2 eggs, well beaten

Heat butter and milk to lukewarm. Stir until butter melts. Add sugar, salt and egg. Cool. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water. Stir into milk mixture. Beat in flour to make a soft dough. Knead on lightly floured baking board. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk.

Cook pears and prunes in water to cover until tender. Drain and core pears. Pit prunes. Put pears, prunes, raisins and figs through the coarse blade of a meat grinder. Add walnuts, lemon juice, citron, cinnamon, nutmeg, sugar and kirsch. Blend thoroughly. Add enough red wine to make a thick jam.

Divide risen dough into 2 pieces. Roll out each piece into a 12" square. Spread each with half the filling. Turn in ends and roll like a jelly roll. Prick top with fork several times. Brush with beaten egg. Let rise until doubled in bulk.

Bake in a 350° oven about 30 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool the loaf thoroughly before cutting.

Basler Leckerli

(Basel Honey Cookies)

These cookies are one of the oldest of European confections. Since different honeys vary in their flour absorption, it is impossible to give accurate measurements for the flour.

2⅔ cups clear honey
¾ cup kirsch
2 cups sugar
½ cup finely chopped candied lemon peel
½ cup finely chopped candied orange peel
2 cups unblanched almonds, coarsely ground
Grated rind of 2 lemons
2 tablespoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons cloves
8–10 cups all-purpose flour (about)
¾ cup confectioners' sugar
2 egg whites

Pour honey into a large saucepan. Bring to a boil. Remove from heat. Add kirsch and stir in sugar. Return to medium heat. Stir in the next 6 ingredients. Remove from heat. Stir in flour gradually, until the dough comes away from the side of the pan—this should take about 15 minutes. If dough is still sticky, add more flour, a little at a time. Roll out dough on a lightly floured baking board to about ½" thickness. Cut dough into 2" by 3" bars, or with a special Swiss Leckerli mold. Place the cookies close together on a heavily greased and floured baking sheet. Let stand overnight at room temperature.

Bake in a 375° oven for 20 to 25 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool. Meanwhile, make a glaze by beating together for 10 minutes the confectioners' sugar and egg whites. Brush cookies with glaze and dry. Makes about 10 dozen cookies.

Note: The cookies ought to ripen before eating. Pack them in airtight tins or other metal cans and keep, if possible, for 3 to 4 weeks. Stored this way, they will keep almost indefinitely.

Desserts

Vacherin Chantilly

8 egg whites, at room temperature
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla or ½ teaspoon almond flavoring
2 cups heavy cream, whipped and sweetened to taste with confectioners' sugar

Preheat oven to 225°. Lightly grease and flour 2 large baking sheets. Line with waxed paper. With a pencil, trace the outline of a 9" layer cake pan 4 times, twice on each baking sheet. There should be 4 circles. Beat egg whites until frothy. Add salt and cream of tartar and beat thoroughly. Add sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating constantly. Add vanilla or almond flavoring and beat until meringue is stiff and glossy, but not dry. Divide meringue into 4 parts, one part for each meringue circle. Fill pastry bag with meringue mixture. Press out a pencil-thick strip of meringue around the outer rim of each waxed paper circle. Then make a lattice by pressing 4 strips of meringue horizontally and 4 strips vertically across the waxed paper circle, touching the meringue rim. Make similar lattices on the next 3 waxed paper circles. Bake until firm and dry but still white, about 45 minutes. Cool meringues a little, but remove from paper while still warm, using a broad spatula.

Divide whipped cream into two parts. Place one meringue lattice on serving dish. Spread lightly with whipped cream. Top with second layer and repeat process until all four layers are used, but do not spread whipped cream on last layer. Fill pastry bag with remaining whipped cream. Pipe decorative swirls on side of vacherin and a row of rosettes around top. Fill lattice cavities with candied violets, candied cherries or with large fresh strawberries. Keep refrigerated until serving time, but serve as soon as possible after decorating with whipped cream. Serves 8.

Note: There is no limit to the fanciful ways in which a vacherin may be decorated with whipped cream. Some of the whipped cream may be darkened with a little cocoa or melted chocolate to create a checkerboard effect on the top lattice, or it may be tinted with food colorings to produce swirls and rosettes of different hues.

Usterapfelstueckli nach Zuercher Art

(Stewed Apples in the Zurich Manner)

6 large tart apples
¼ cup sweet butter
¾ cup sugar
½ cup apple juice
1 cinnamon stick or 3 thin lemon slices

Wash apples. Cut into quarters, or if apples are very large, into eighths. Core, but do not peel. Melt butter in a skillet. Add sugar and cook over low heat until golden brown. Add apples and shake pan until apples are well coated with sugar and butter. Add apple juice and cinnamon stick or lemon slices. Place a lid directly on top of the apples. Place a weight on the lid to press down on the apples. Cook very slowly over lowest possible heat until apples are tender. Serve as a hot compote for dessert, with plain or whipped cream or vanilla sauce, or in the old Zurich tradition, with boiled beef or sausages (especially the white kind made from veal found in shops selling German sausages under the name of kalbswurst). Serves 4–6.

Les Petites Coupes de Chocolat aux Vermicelles

6 squares semi-sweet chocolate
2 tablespoons butter
Vermicelles
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

In top of double boiler over hot water, heat chocolate and butter until the chocolate is partly melted. Remove from hot water and stir rapidly until the chocolate is entirely melted and blended with the butter. (The mixture should be thick.) Place 10 large paper baking cups in muffin pans. With a teaspoon, swirl chocolate mixture around the inside of the baking cups. Fill and smooth out the creases with the point of a knife. Chill until firm. About 10 minutes before serving, fill cups with vermicelles. Place in refrigerator. Peel paper from chocolate just before serving. Decorate with whipped cream. (The chocolate cups may also be filled with ice cream, or any suitable custard or pudding.)

VERMICELLES

1½ pounds chestnuts
3 cups milk
2" piece vanilla bean or 1½ teaspoons vanilla flavoring
½ cup sugar or sugar to taste
2 tablespoons butter

With a sharp knife, cut a gash in the flat side of each chestnut. Cover with water and boil about 15 minutes. Drain. Remove outer shell and inner skin. Scald milk in top section of double boiler with vanilla bean or flavoring. As each chestnut is peeled, drop it into the hot milk. Cook covered over boiling water until chestnuts are very tender and mealy. Stir occasionally. Drain. Reserve milk for custard or other pudding. While chestnuts are hot, force them through a strainer or a food mill. Beat in sugar and butter. Place some of the chestnut mixture in a pastry bag with a plain tube. Press mixture slowly into the chocolate cups in 2" strips, holding the bag about an inch away from the cups. Pile chestnut strips lightly on top of each other, making a dome. Do not press down; the vermicelles must be fluffy.

Note: The vermicelles may also be placed in paper cups or individual pots de crème and topped with whipped cream, a piece of marron glacé, a candied violet or a glacé cherry. Vermicelles in paper cups are served at tea time in all Swiss confiseries.

La Délice de Lausanne

2 cups strong espresso coffee, very hot
1 bar (4 ounces) sweet cooking chocolate, crumbled
1 tablespoon sugar, or sugar to taste
3 tablespoons light rum or kirsch
2 cups heavy cream, stiffly whipped and very cold

Pour coffee into a saucepan. Over very low heat, dissolve chocolate and sugar in it—the dessert should not be very sweet, so be sparing with the sugar. Do not let boil. Stir in rum or kirsch. Chill. Just before the dessert is to be served, fold whipped cream into coffee mixture. Spoon into wine or sherbet glasses and serve immediately, with sugar wafers. Do not let stand, or the mixture might separate. Serves 6–8.

Note: This is very rich and combines the dessert course and coffee.

Kirschkuchen in der Pfanne

(Cherry Pancake)

In the Swiss countryside, where cherries abound, this cherry cake would be served for supper, with café au lait.

1½ cups stale crustless bread, broken into small pieces
1½ cups hot milk or light cream
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ cup grated blanched almonds
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅓ cup sugar
½ pound fresh dark cherries, pitted or 1 cup canned, drained, pitted dark cherries
⅓ cup sweet butter
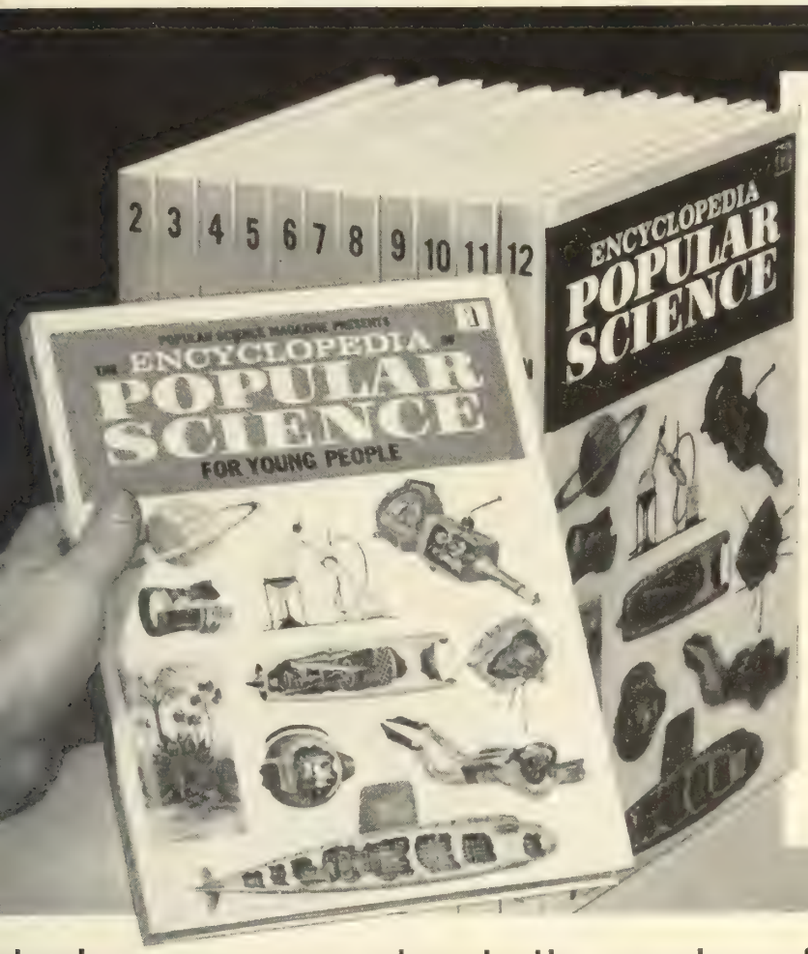
Confectioners' sugar

Combine stale bread and hot milk or cream. Beat until smooth. Beat in flour, almonds, cinnamon, sugar and cherries. Melt butter in a large skillet. Pour cherry mixture into skillet. Cook over low heat until browned on the bottom. Carefully turn over with wide spatula and brown the other side. Serve hot, with a sprinkling of confectioners' sugar and a dark cherry compote. Serves 4–6.



Pfirsiche im Rotwein

(Peaches with Red Wine)

This is an excellent dessert, provided a first-class dry red wine, such as a Pinot Noir, is used.

Scald 4 large ripe peaches and peel. Cut into thin slices. Place into deep glass serving dish. Sprinkle with sugar to taste. Cover with red wine. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Give him the edge over ham, lamb, bird or beef!

It is not to be denied. There is an art to carving.

Truth is, some blades help a man do considerably better at it. The peer of such blades are those produced with stern and demanding eye, by Carvel Hall.

Of superb new Carvalloy, an exclusive formula stainless steel cut lengthwise with the grain for greater resiliency and strength, Carvel Hall blades are patiently honed by hand to a razor's edge.

But even such magnificence is not enough for Carvel Hall.

Every handle is meticulously balanced so that each thrust and stroke is almost automatically precise. Joints surrender immediately. Slices respond willingly, almost joyously, to the firm touch of a Carvel Hall blade.

If you know a man (he may even be your husband) whose bladesmanship might be considered indifferent, present him, out of sheer adoration, with a Carvel Hall carving knife.

Both sets shown here are in the Vogue design.

Carvel Hall's contemporary Vogue design shown here: less than $20 for carver and fork; less than $25 for carver, slicer and fork; and less than $20 for six matching steak knives. All sets in smart buffet trays.

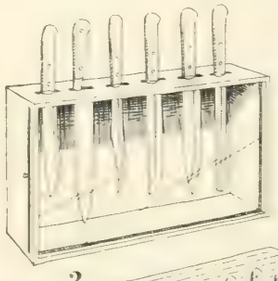
THE CARE AND KEEPING OF KNIVES

A good knife may not be as hard to find as a good man, but if you want to keep it good, you have to care for and about it. Guard jealously the special knives you use for carving, boning and cutting up meat and poultry. Have a second set of less efficient and less expensive knives for household help or your youngsters who might not understand the necessity of maintaining a fine edge and looking after fine steel, and who are given to seizing the nearest knife to slice through the string on a package. They will be just as happy with Brand X knives, and you can rest assured that your blades will be in mint condition when you need them.



GIVE A KNIFE A GOOD HOME

Crowded drawers are death on blades; they soon become blunted or nicked through constant rubbing against hard objects. If you are obliged to keep knives in a drawer, have it slotted so the knives are separated from each other and can be removed easily. Unquestionably, the place to store your knives is in a unit that's designed to keep them handy and unhampered. There are some workmanlike versions on the market or, if you don't find what you are looking for, it is a relatively simple matter to build what you want. Knife storage can be portable or stationary, decorative as well as functional. A magnetic knife rack (1) that attaches to a wall or cabinet and holds the blades flat against the magnetic steel strips is inexpensive and perfectly adequate. However, if you intend to use it for your carving knives, make sure that the magnet is really strong, or the weight of the knife may pull it off the rack. Some cutlery manufacturers sell slotted wood racks that can be used freestanding or mounted on the wall. The only drawback is that they are constructed to take the manufacturers' own knives and may not be scaled to your own diverse collection.

However, it is not hard to construct a simple rack with slots for knives; a slightly more ambitious storage unit, still within the skill of the amateur, is a case made of ¾-inch-thick pine boards with an acrylic plastic front that slides out at one side for cleaning (2). This can be freestanding or attached to the wall, and both protects the knives and keeps them at hand and in view. A really professional storage setup is a butcher's block table (3), with slots at the side to hold the knives and steel.

KEEP A KNIFE CLEAN AND STAIN-FREE

Just as crowded drawers blunt knives, so do crowded sinks. Never dump your knives in a sink or dishpan with other cutlery and dishes; it not only harms the blade, but the immersion weakens the bond between blade and handle (and also you run the risk of getting cut when you plunge your hands into the water). The best way to keep a knife clean is to wipe it with a damp or wet sponge after each use and promptly dry it. If you make a habit of doing this, you shouldn't have any staining problem, even with non-stainless steel knives. Non-stainless steel will darken with use—an honorable mark in the eyes of most carvers. If stains do appear on your blades, clean them with steel wool and coarse salt (sometimes you may find it necessary to add a little vinegar to the salt). Careful storage, prompt cleaning and constant use of your steel or Carborundum, plus an occasional professional sharpening, will keep your knives in perfect shape.

wine which has to be bottled very young to keep its fizz, so bulk shipment is impossible. Prices outside of Portugal are therefore relatively high.

The other great wine area of northern Portugal is the Dão Valley (ão is a nasal sound a bit like the second syllable of a donkey's bray). Dão wines are almost always blended and have a real character of their own which is very easy to like. The red is soft and satiny in the mouth. These wines need a few years to age in the bottle, but not many. There is a Reserva, however, with much more body and a really impressive flavor that demands real maturity.

Moving southward we come to the province of Estremadura (where Lisbon is), whose wines used to be the most famous of all. Georgian silver wine labels marked "Lisbon" are still often seen. The wine that was offered as Lisbon in the eighteenth century when the wine labels were made was in fact a sweet dessert wine, pressed from the muscat grape. Setúbal, south of the Tagus in a bay rightly famous for its salmonetes (red mullet), produces some of the finest of these super-sweet liquors, which need years and years in bottle to achieve more than sugariness and the strong flavor of muscat. (Setúbal is pronounced rather like shtooble, which fits in with the feeling I sometimes get that Portugal is Austria-by-the-sea.)

Of all the wines grown between the Tagus estuary and the Atlantic, the one with the widest reputation is Colares. The vineyards are literally sand dunes on the Atlantic littoral and the vines went untouched by the scourge of phylloxera, for the little monster that destroys vines cannot live in sand. But I have been most disappointed with the Colares wine served in Lisbon and Sintra (Colares is very near this fantastic hilltop summer capital of the Portuguese Royal Court), which is no more than ordinary red and white. Rumors abound, though, that the finest growths, here as elsewhere in Europe, stay in the cellars of the great landowners and their families.

The wines of Bucelas and Carcavelos, two villages near Estoril, are quite popular.

SPAIN

The wines of southern Spain, like those of the south of Portugal, are not very good—except, of course, for sherry and Montilla, a wine from the mountains a hundred miles north of Jerez near Cordoba (the home of Manolete, the greatest of all bullfighters). Montilla is not strictly sherry, although it has given its name to the type of sherry which comes nearest its light, dry, nutty flavor: amontillado.

When you reflect that Spain is the third largest producer of wine in the world, you wonder what becomes of it all. The answer is that 80 per cent of Spain's wine exports are ordinary table wines, the greatest part of which is bought by France for day-to-day drinking.

The connections with France go deeper than that. At the end of the last century, when phylloxera had wiped out the vineyards of Bordeaux, a crowd of French growers crossed the Pyrenees to the Rioja valley, southwest of San Sebastian, and developed vineyards there. The results of this influx of French winegrowers are still apparent, for today Rioja makes some of the best and cheapest wine. Ordinary Rioja "Chablis" and "Burgundy" are very good value indeed, and I have tasted a bottle of 1906 Brillante (the exact equivalent of Sauternes, but in those days selling under its own name) which in its advanced age was almost indistinguishable from one of the greatest French wines. The Spanish equivalent of claret (the best is the estate-bottled Marques de Riscal) needs keeping for many years.

FRANCE—THE JURA

As we travel eastward across Europe, the wine-giant France stands right across our path. If we pause here, we will never get away, for France grows wine of every style, in every category.

Besides the great areas of Bordeaux, Burgundy and Champagne, the Loire, Alsace and the Jura all produce wines worthy to compare with that of any other country. The least known is the Jura, between Burgundy and Switzerland, which has some very original tastes to offer. Oldest of all the Jura wines is Château Châlon, the only wine in the world, apart from fino sherry, that naturally grows a preservative yeast flor on top, in the cask. Château Châlon is an apéritif—a pungent, clean, dry, strong, yellow wine that lives to a tremendous age.

The Jura also offers vin fou, the delightful local name for a naturally bubbly, fresh drink like Portugal's vinho verde. Then there is the vin de paille or straw wine, so called because the grapes are left on straw mats under the sun to become almost raisins before they are pressed.

SWITZERLAND

It is but a step from Arbois, the wine capital of the Jura, into Switzerland. The Swiss are said to buy a great deal of the best wine—notably Burgundy—from France, but they also know how to make it themselves. The important vineyards are on the north shore of Lake Geneva in the canton of Vaud around Montreux and Lausanne, and the canton of Valais, higher up in the valley of the Rhône. White wine comes from the lakeside, called La Côte, and the best reds from high up the Rhône. Here, as in Germany, cultivation is hard work, with vineyards at improbable angles on near-precipices. When rain makes the soil slide down to the bottom of the hill, there is nothing to do but put it in buckets and carry it back up again to the top.

The best Valais wines are the red Dôle, the white Fendant (very dry) and the white Johannisberger, which has no relation to the great German Rhine wine of the same name except for a fancied slight resemblance.

AUSTRIA

I used to think it odd that Autria was a wine-drinking country. The leather shorts and felt jackets seem so Northern, snow is so much in evidence—surely beer would be more appropriate. My viewpoint changed when I saw Vienna. Only wine could possibly fit such a city.

Austria has some very good white wines and some passable reds—better, at least, than those of the mighty Rhine. The best white comes from Gumpoldskirchen to the south of Vienna, where the Rotgipfler grape (its name appears on the bottle) achieves something that would pass for good hock—except, possibly, in Germany. Wauchauer is perhaps the best known Austrian wine: like so many fresh young wines it prickles your tongue with its almost imperceptible bubbles—the quality known in Austria and Germany as spritzig.

ITALY

Italy grows wine from top to toe. In many areas, Italians do not even bother with vineyards—the vine over the door or on the stable roof will do. The great virtue of Italian wine is variety, and the great failing is inconsistency; but choose carefully, ask advice, drink the most immediately local wine you can get on the spot, and some of the greatest of all gastronomic delights await you. True, the atmosphere helps—a wine would have to be really terrible not to taste good on a terrace at Amalfi.

Italy's best wines come from the north and middle of the country. The four greatest areas are Piemonte, north of Turin, the shores of Lake Garda, Venetia and Tuscany. The finest Piemonte is Barolo, a big round full red wine which takes a good deal of maturing. At ten years old it is considered in Italy the wine to go with roast meat. Piemonte also produces the delicious sweet Italian version of champagne, Asti Spumante.

In Lombardy, Lake Garda produces the lovely pale red Chiaretto, the Valtellina produces the darker, more splendid Inferno, Grumello and Sassella. The names can go on and on rolling off your tongue.

Above all other Italian white wines I put Soave, from near Brescia in Venetia. It is dry, just tart enough, but deliciously soft. With all the lovely things that come fresh from the sea in Italy, Soave is the perfect wine. Even France must envy it.

Tuscany produces Chianti. Chianti in its straw-vested fiasco has become the archetypal Italian wine. You get the impression that all Italy must grow it, whereas in fact classic Chianti comes from a small and beautiful area near Siena. Its chief characteristic is that it is blended in an unusual way from wine made from four different grape species, by letting them ferment together in barrels. In such a blend the vintner may dictate certain qualities to his wine. The best of Chianti is made to keep for seven years; the least to be drunk tomorrow morning. Great classic Chianti is recognized by a black cock seal on its label.

In Italy, the variety of wine is infinite because so much is made by individuals. Such wine, if good, is almost always more interesting than blended factory wine, although many people find the consistency of the blends more appealing.

YUGOSLAVIA

Here the co-operative system is more or less widespread. All wine is fairly good, some very good, and none (alas, because once it was) great.

A line drawn around the globe from Bordeaux passes through Piemonte, the best of Italian wine areas, and Slovenia, the foothills of the Alps in northern Yugoslavia. The city of Ljubljana, which is near enough to Italy for the Italian influence to be felt, is the site of an important annual wine fair. Yugoslavian winegrowing is a very serious matter and there is no reason to be surprised—as many people seem to be—that Yugoslavia should produce such excellent wine.

The best and largest area stretches from Maribor in the west to Ljutomer in the east. Above all this section produces white wine with a tendency to sweetness and a rather high alcohol content, but delicate in flavor and often outstandingly good to smell. Most of the great German grape varieties—Riesling, Sylvaner, and the Franco-German Traminer—flourish. Ljutomer Riesling has made itself a name as an amazing value. German wine of that quality sells for almost twice the price.

Throughout Serbia a good red called Prokupac and an excellent rosé, Ruzica, are grown. Nobody really pushes them, but people who explore the Adriatic are coming to like them, and word of mouth brings a lively business to the producers.

Bag and baggage:

For today's young scholars

Transporting possessions back to school can be easy and well organized with the newest compact luggage

One of the biggest problems of going back to school is finding a place to pack all a young student's goods and chattels which may run to anything from a pair of curtains to a battery of unwieldy sports equipment. But with today's wide range of new luggage, even the most unpackable possessions can be stashed away in a suitable bag. The new luggage is also much more lightweight, and many bags are made of sturdier materials that do not easily fade or get scuffed. Several of the accessories a boy or girl likes to take off to school are even contained in their own easy-to-carry suitcase type cases. On these pages is a sampling of new luggage plus portable back-to-school accessories. 1 Portable stereo phonograph looks just like a suitcase when closed, and travels as easily. The side of the case that forms the base for the record changer pulls down (see it open, opposite page) and locks firmly in place. "Riviera" by Magnavox. $99.90. 2 Trim 21-inch suitcase with a red scuff- and fade-resistant covering makes a handy companion for weekend visits. "Showcase" by Eastern Case Co. $32.95. 3 New travel iron works dry or with steam, and also has a new atomizer-topped bulb for spraying. Iron slips into a beige, zippered bag, packs into a small space. General Electric. $15.95. 4 Compact clock-radio with a radio alarm would be a pleasant addition to a school dorm and not take up much space on a night table. Lightweight plastic cabinet in blue, brown or white. Zenith. $19.95. 5 Roomy 26-inch case (it matches smaller "Showcase," 2) weighs next to nothing, has plenty of room for a term's worth of dresses or suits. Six color

All prices include 10 per cent Federal tax, where applicable choices. Eastern Case Co. $49.45. 6 Portable hair dryer for a girl fits into a light tan case as easy to carry as a hatbox. Inside the case (see it open, below left), the dryer has a bouffant cap that fits over the largest rollers. Three heat settings and one cool. General Electric. $34.95. 7 Brass-trimmed, black 32-inch foot-locker trunk with a lift-out tray could carry bedding and room accessories. At school, trunk stores in a small space. T. Anthony. $32.45. 8 Portable "Safari" typewriter in blue, red, antique gold or gray, would be welcomed by a boy or girl faced with lengthy term papers. Ribbon can be changed in seconds without touching it with your fingers. Royal McBee. $109.95. 9 Navy blue 21-inch canvas case trimmed with red leather would make a good overnight bag for a young man. Many other colors. T. Anthony. $43.45. 10 Battery-powered electric shaver, the "Eterna Power," would tuck into a sliver of space in a young collegian's suitcase. Works with or without cord; recharges easily. Schick. Under $29.95. 11 Tiny transistor radio that weighs only 9¼ ounces would be nice for after-class relaxation. Radio plays up to 75 hours on regular batteries, 180 hours on mercury batteries. Four colors. Zenith. $19.95 minus batteries. 12 Roomy 29-inch canvas case might team up with its smaller companion, 9, to transport a young man's wardrobe. T. Anthony. $68.75. 13 Electric shoe polisher, the "Rotoshine Magnetic," would keep a boy's shoes shiny with no effort. Magnetically picked up and ejected attachments apply polish, brush and buff shoes. Chest (open, left) with footrest on lid stores everything. Ronson. $29.95 with chest.

IN SAFE HANDS

A child begins life completely dependent upon his parents. For years to come, the basics of life — food, clothing and shelter—must be provided to protect him, to help him develop properly and be guided through the many stages of growing up.

Today, the child and the entire family can enjoy a degree of "shelter" not available until a few years ago. A new home made with fine quality BESTWALL and CERTAIN-TEED building products provides priceless fire protection and healthful insulation as well as lasting beauty and value. These advantages are important to the well-being of your family at every stage of life.

So make sure the home you buy or build is made with quality materials, inside and out. Insist upon the names "Bestwall" and "Certain-teed" on products for your roof, walls, ceilings, and throughout your home. Then you'll find that "better living begins when you own a new home." See your Bestwall Certain-teed dealer now—or write direct to

EVERPLATE CADDY BY GORHAM

DID
IS WONDERFUL FOR SILVERPLATE TOO!

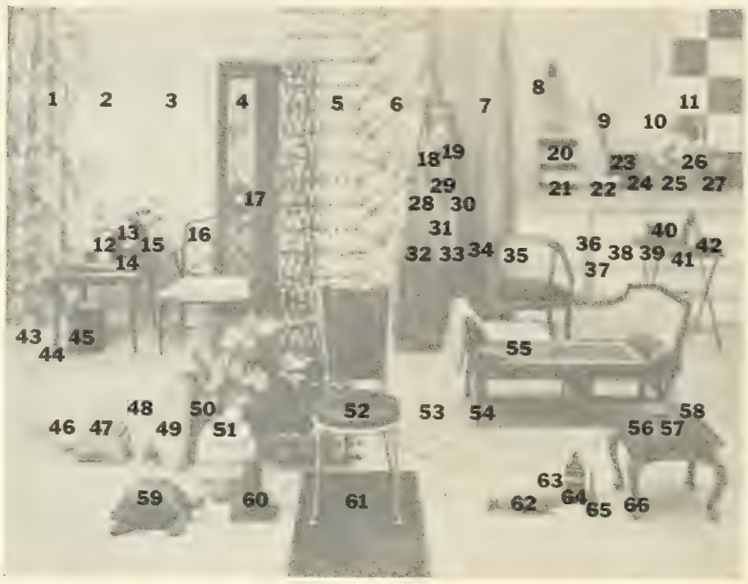
Frequent polishing may remove some of the silver from silverplate. With the protection of Pacific Silvercloth, your silverplate will always remain in its original condition. Pacific Silvercloth is embedded with tiny particles of real silver that trap sulphur gases...the element in the atmosphere which causes tarnish. Your silverplate cannot tarnish, and therefore does not have to be polished. That is why Pacific Silvercloth is used in the finest silver chests. Also available in wraps, bags, rolls and by the yard at fine silver and department stores. It is easy to recognize by its rich brown color and the famous name Pacific stamped on the fabric.



For free booklet on care of your silver and name of your nearest dealer, write Dept. HG.

Herewith a guide to the panoply of home furnishings on page 134

*Through decorators only

The sixty-six objects we have assembled are all members, one way or another, of the tortoise-shell clan. Some bear the indelible pattern of the tortoise himself, some offer a medley of the tortoise-shell tones and some would serve admirably as components of a room-wide tortoise-shell color scheme. Starting at the upper left-hand corner of the photograph: 1 "Safari," a pure cotton drapery and slip-cover fabric in H&G's Lemon Peel, Sunflower and Antique Gold with Scotchgard finish. Cohama, $2.95 a yard. 2 Glazed porcelain lamp in Antique Gold. Luten-Clarey-Stern*. 3 "Sunflowers" wallpaper, Curry on white. Pageant*. 4 "Tortoise-Tac" "peel 'n stic" decorative (and scrubbable) paper used to cover panels of a standard door. $4.95 for eight 12-inch squares. 1½ yard roll, 18 inches wide, $3.95. By the yard, 37 inches wide, $4.95. 5 Bead curtain, made to order in Mimosa, Espresso and Mandarin Orange. Priced by the square foot. Bead Design Studio*. 6 "Granadina," a Spanish Baroque wallpaper in Black Pearl and Java Brown on deep sand, 27 inches wide. Katzenbach & Warren*. 7 Sheer wool casement cloth striped in Maple Sugar, golds and browns and designed by Dorothy Liebes. Stroheim & Romann*. 58 inches wide. 8 Towel ring in tortoise finish. Bloomingdale's, $7.50. 9 "Alpha" canvas wallcovering, block design in Curry and Sunflower. Denst & Miles*. 27 inches wide. 10 Hanging globe fixture of white Venini glass striped in Black Pearl and reddish amber. Altamira*. 11 Made-to-order vinyl floor tile in Sunflower and Java Brown. Amtico. Approximately $2 per square foot. 12, 13 and 14 Letter file, pencil container and address book covered in tortoise-shell paper, gilt-trimmed. Gertrude Williamson, $10, $5.50 and $4. 15 Tangerine and amber glass vase. Dayton Co., $4. 16 Armchair with tortoise-finished bamboo turnings and Mandarin Orange velvet-covered seat. Doris Dessauer*. 17 Polished brass doorknobs. Paul Associates. $14.07 each. 18 Terra-cotta rabbit from Mexico. Swinburne, $4.25. 19 Yellow-green incised Venini bottle. Altamira, $28. 20 "Sovereign" towels in Mushroom. Martex. Bath size, $2, hand size, $1.20. 21 "Royalty" towels in Java Brown and Antique Gold. Callaway. Bath size, $1.98, hand size, $1.19. 22, 23 and 24 Tissue holder, wastebasket and cotton picker in tortoise finish. Bloomingdale's, $9.50, $19.95 and $10.95. 25, 26 and 27 Antique Gold flower bowl, Mandarin Orange apothecary jar, Mushroom goblet jar with lid. W & J Sloane, $9, $17.50 and $11. 28, 30, 31 and 32 Peruvian gourd container hand-carved with hunting scene, $10.25; Norwegian bottle opener of antler horn and wrought iron, $4.50; multi-drawered jewel chest of inlaid wood, $22; green chili bowl from Mexico, $3.25. All from Swinburne. 29 Yellow and mauve Turkish glass vase. Altamira, $25. 33 Clay Beige Venini bud vase. Altamira, $12. 34 Pier cabinet in tortoise-shell finish, 76½ inches high. Octagonal glass top is lighted from above. Union-National. $670. 35 Tub chair in tortoise finish with cane back and black vinyl cushion. Hickory Manufacturing Company, $79.50. 36 and 37 Blenko Mandarin Orange glass decanter and Mimosa vase. $27.50 and $15. 38 "Marble Stripe" wallpaper, hand-printed in Sunflower and Mandarin Orange on white. Denst & Miles*. 27 inches wide. 39 Portable bar with plastic tray of simulated tortoise shell. Traynor's, $95. 40 and 41 Ebony ice bucket plus corkscrew and spoon set with simulated tortoise-shell handles. Directions for applying faux tortoise finishes

Before beginning any of the tortoise fantasy finishes, be sure to clean and sand the surface you plan to paint. Work in a light, roomy place where you can leave your tools set up as long as your project is in process. And—most important—don't be so impatient to achieve results that you don't allow enough drying time between steps. No matter how carried away you are with your work, don't paint on a humid or rainy day, or count it as drying time.

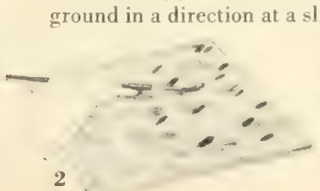
All these tortoise fantasy finishes require varnishing, and all but one call for spattering with asphaltum paint. Directions for these techniques are not given here but are described in Fantasy Finishes, Part I, available from House & Garden's Reader Service, 420 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

NATURAL TORTOISE

Colors: To simulate natural tortoise, apply a creamy beige background; then for the markings, use yellow ochre; raw sienna; burnt sienna and burnt umber. A trompe l'oeil layered effect is achieved by starting with the lighter colors and putting the dark markings on last.

Tools: Brushes: 1-inch oxhair brush; #6 brush; 2-inch oxhair varnish brush. Also: #6-0 garnet paper; absorbent cotton; nylon stocking; small jars; a shallow tray for mixing paints.

Materials: Paints: flat white; japan colors (French yellow ochre; burnt umber; lamp black); tubes of oils (yellow ochre; raw sienna; burnt sienna; burnt umber); asphaltum. Five-pound cut white shellac diluted 50 per cent with alcohol; turpentine; varnish.



Directions: For the background, use French yellow ochre japan and a little burnt umber japan added to flat white. Apply four coats in all with 1-inch oxhair brush, sanding in between coats with #6-0 garnet paper. Follow with thin coat of white shellac (you can use same brush).

Set the pattern of the markings first with a transparent color. Use asphaltum paint thinned with one-third turpentine to a watery solution. With a #6 brush, stroke on the asphaltum solution lightly and quickly, directing the strokes as though you were drawing sun rays, or a fan (1). Pat with a wad of cotton to be sure there are no hard edges. Allow to set for one day, then shellac again.

Now you are ready to apply the colored markings. Use oil paints, and since these take time to dry, apply sparingly. For the first series of markings, use yellow ochre; raw sienna; burnt sienna and burnt umber. Mix each of these paints thoroughly with turpentine to a creamy consistency and then strain through a nylon stocking into its own little jar. These jars are your palette. Out of these four colors you will be able to mix additional colors, adding up to many different hues. With a #6 brush and using the same short, fan-shaped strokes with which you applied the asphaltum, lay on all these colors, separately and overlapping each other. Lightly brush out the ends of the marks with a narrow, rolled piece of cotton. Put some colors right on the asphaltum strokes and some directly on the background, but leave some background untouched.

After these colors have set for at least a day, you are ready to apply the darkest of the colors. For this step, mix lamp black japan and burnt umber japan to get a brown, almost black, color. Apply this color in the form of ovals, dots and dashes, singly and in clusters. Some should be applied on the existing tortoise markings, some on the background in a direction at a slight angle to the lighter markings (2). Next day, spatter with a thin solution of asphaltum. Let dry for two to three weeks. Give a coat of thin white shellac. Then finish off with seven coats of Triple Duty Varnish.

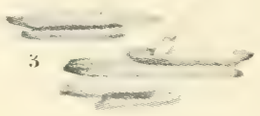
RED BOULLE FANTASY



Colors: You can achieve a Red Boulle fantasy finish by applying dark tortoise markings on a base coat of red, then giving it a purple-red glaze. In sample, we used burnt umber combined with black for the markings, added a glaze of red mixed with pink and a touch of burnt sienna.

Tools: Brushes: 1-inch oxhair brush and #6 brush; 2-inch oxhair varnish brush; 1-inch bristle shellac brush. Also: #6-0 garnet paper; cotton swabs.

Materials: Paints: japan colors (signcraft red; burnt umber; lamp black; liberty red medium; rose pink; burnt sienna); asphaltum. Japan dryer; turpentine; 5-pound cut orange shellac diluted 50 per cent with alcohol; flatting oil; Bal-tine thinner; varnish.

Directions: For a base coat, use signcraft red thinned with one-fifth japan dryer, and turpentine if needed to bring to the consistency of cream. With 1-inch oxhair brush, apply three coats, sanding in between coats with #6-0 garnet paper. Coat with shellac.

The second step, as with natural tortoise, is setting the pattern of markings with asphaltum. For this, use #6 brush. The markings should drift in a fan shape, as do those of natural tortoise, and be irregular in length and breadth. If hard edges occur, soften them by rolling a cotton swab lightly over them (3). Wait a day and then apply a second series of markings with a heavier consistency of asphaltum. Allow to dry one day.

For the dark markings, combine burnt umber japan with lamp black japan. With #6 brush, apply the paint in strokes that vary from ½ inch in length to 1½ inches. Apply sparsely both over and outside the asphaltum strokes, considering the over-all pattern effect. When dry, give another coat of orange shellac.

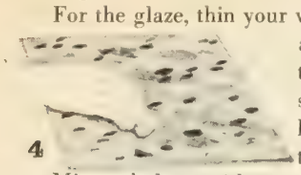
When the shellac has dried, prepare your glaze. Combine liberty red medium japan; rose pink japan and a touch of burnt sienna japan to achieve a red-red-purple color. Thin down to the consistency of water: your mixture will be one-third paint; one-third Bal-tine thinner and one-third flatting oil. Using the 1-inch oxhair brush, apply this solution in light strokes of varying size, partly overlapping the markings and extending them. Be sure to leave some of the background uncovered. Dry for a week, then coat again with shellac. When that is dry, varnish.

GREEN BOULLE FANTASY

Colors: This tortoise fantasy is achieved by applying tortoise markings on an undercoat of greenish yellow, and then painting a viridian green glaze over all. In our sample, we mixed green and chrome yellow tinted with rose pink (to gray it a little) and used this for the base coat. Markings were burnt umber mixed with lamp black.

Tools: Brushes: 1-inch oxhair brush; #6 brush; 1-inch bristle shellac brush; 2-inch oxhair varnish brush. Also: #6-0 garnet paper; cotton.

Materials: Paints: japan colors (CP green light; chrome yellow light-light; rose pink; burnt umber; lamp black); tube of viridian green oil paint; asphaltum. Five-pound cut white shellac diluted 50 per cent with alcohol; turpentine; varnish.



Directions: For the base coat, combine CP green light japan and chrome yellow light-light japan with a touch of rose pink japan (to gray it), then add flat white to lighten the color to a lighter-than-medium value. Apply with 1-inch oxhair brush and, when dry, sand with #6-0 garnet paper. Shellac, using the shellac brush.

Dilute asphaltum paint with turpentine to a watery consistency and stroke on the pattern delicately with #6 brush. Load the brush very, very lightly. The markings, like those of other tortoise finishes, should fan out and be irregular in length and breadth. Allow to dry for a day, then give a coat of white shellac.

Repeat this step with undiluted asphaltum, and again, after one day's drying time, coat with white shellac.

Now mix burnt umber japan half-and-half with lamp black japan, and apply sparsely in irregular strokes over and outside the asphaltum markings. Leave some of the background uncovered. Dry thoroughly.

For the glaze, thin your viridian green oil paint with turpentine to a watery consistency and pat on with cotton (4). Then pat again with dry cotton so that some of the original yellow-green background is revealed. Allow to dry for two weeks.

Mix asphaltum with turpentine to a watery consistency and spatter lightly over all. When dry, coat with shellac; after an hour, varnish.

TORTOISE CONCEIT

Colors: Tortoise conceit has a background of either gold metal leaf—called Dutch metal—or aluminum leaf. We used Dutch metal in our sample. The pattern—applied with an eye dropper—is yellow ochre; raw sienna; burnt sienna and raw umber.

Tools: Brushes: 1-inch oxhair brush; 1-inch bristle shellac brush; 2-inch oxhair varnish brush. Also: #6-0 garnet paper; eye dropper; cotton swabs.

Materials: Paints: flat white; japan colors (signcraft red; yellow ochre; raw sienna; burnt sienna; raw umber); asphaltum. Hastings Quick Size; Dutch metal; 5-pound cut orange shellac diluted 50 per cent with alcohol; flatting oil; turpentine.

Directions: The Dutch metal leaf you will be using for the background is a gold-colored alloy of copper and zinc that comes in sheets, separated by rouge paper for easy handling. Before applying it, give the surface to be covered three preparatory coats of paint, using the 1-inch oxhair brush. The traditional ground color is a red-brown, obtained by mixing flat white with signcraft red and burnt sienna japan colors. Sand very smooth between coats. When last coat is dry, use the shellac brush to give a once-over with orange shellac.

The next step is sizing the surface so it will accept the metal leaf. Apply Hastings Quick Size with the 1-inch oxhair brush. Allow 20 minutes to an hour or so to dry until tacky. Test with your knuckle; if you mark the sized surface, it is too wet and needs more drying time.

Next, lay on the Dutch metal (5). With your thumb and forefinger, pick up a sheet with the rouge paper on top, lay the leaf on the sized surface, press flat, then remove the rouge paper. When surface is completely covered, polish with cotton. After the size has dried overnight, apply orange shellac.

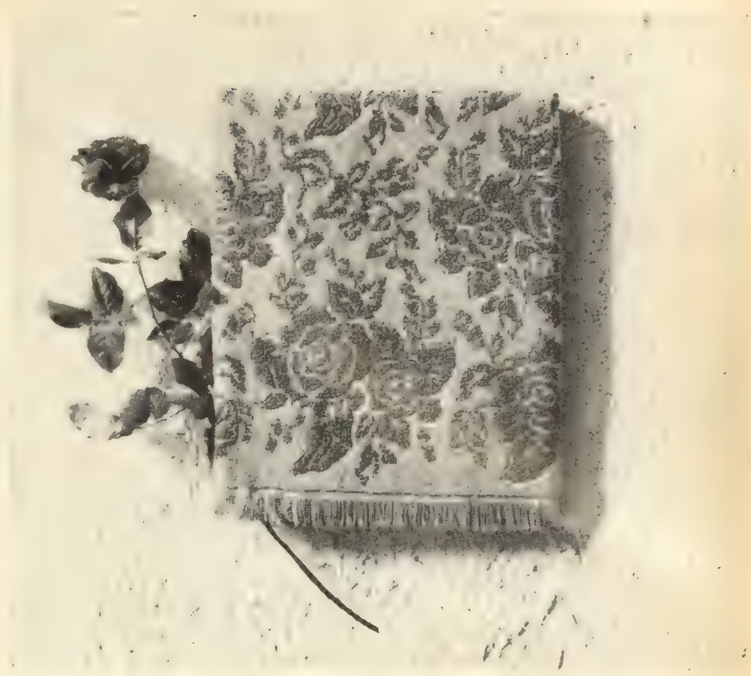
For the pattern, you will need four containers of japan paint, each mixed with flatting oil and turpentine: yellow ochre; raw sienna; burnt sienna; raw umber. The proportions: 1 teaspoon japan paint; 3 teaspoons flatting oil; 1 teaspoon turpentine. The consistency should be similar to thin milk. Keep a separate container of flatting oil handy.

With an eye dropper, make droplets of flatting oil over the Dutch metal surface. If you are not working on a flat surface, you will have to use a #6 brush instead of an eye dropper. Vary the circles in size (some should overlap), and leave some gold background showing.



Drop your colors into these circles of oil, beginning with the lighter, yellower colors. Use the japan colors separately and mixed to create varied hues. After adding color to some of the oil circles, clean out the centers with a cotton swab (6). In some of these, add a drop of flatting oil to the cleaned-out center and then drop in another color (7). Work slowly, stopping frequently to see what is happening as you go along. Remember to leave some of the background plain.

The last colors you drop on should be the burnt umber japan and raw umber japan. When all the droplets have dried, make a thin mixture of asphaltum and turpentine, and spatter over all.

Allow to dry a week, then coat with orange shellac to bring up the gold background. When thoroughly dry, varnish.

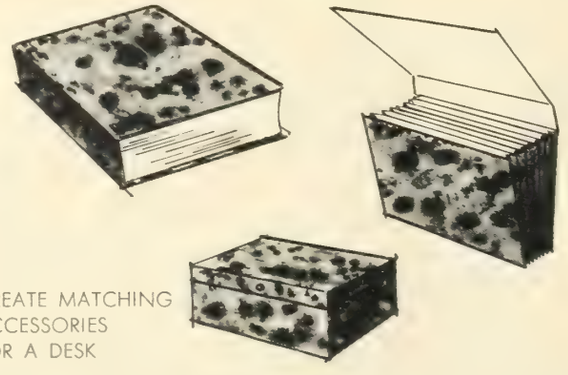
A new transformer:

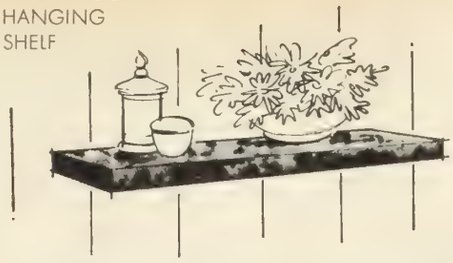


Tortoise-shell paper

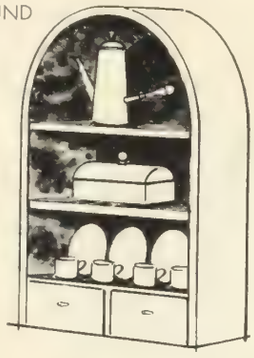
With the help of a new tortoise-shell-patterned paper, you can give a rich, tortoise-shell finish in an instant to all kinds of objects from a tiny box to a piece of furniture. The paper, called Tortoise-Tac, is a hand-painted and finished foil with a varnish base, so it is both washable and waterproof. The peel-off backing is marked in 1-inch squares to help you measure and cut the paper accurately and easily. To do the following projects you need only the simplest tools—a metal-edged ruler or square, scissors, a mat knife or single-edged razor blades, and a pencil.

GIVE AN OLD LAMP A FACE-LIFTING

The easiest kind of lamp to work with is one with a simple column-shaped or square base. Measure the circumference and length of the base and cut the tortoise-shell paper accordingly. Peel off the backing and apply. Top off the lamp with a simple drum shade in a solid metallic or a bright hue.



CREATE MATCHING ACCESSORIES FOR A DESK



To cover a telephone book, cut two pieces of heavy cardboard to fit inside the front and back covers; face with tortoise paper. Cut a long piece of paper to wrap around book—across front, spine and back—with one extra inch around outside edges of front and back. Miter corners and apply to book, folding extra inch inside cover. Cover file and box with separate pieces for each surface.

GIVE A NEW LOOK TO A HANGING
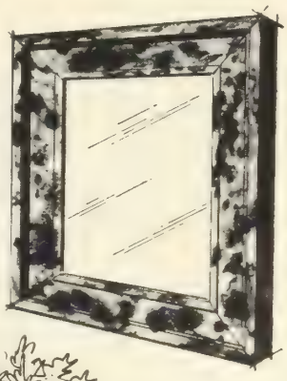
WALL SHELF



To cover a simple wall shelf (such as the one we showed you how to make in H&G October, 1962, page 226) measure length and depth of top, adding on depth of front edge plus one inch to wrap under shelf. Cut separate pieces for two side edges, with an extra wrap-under inch. To use shelf as a bar, finish with two thin coats of clear varnish for alcohol resistance.

MAKE A HANDSOME BACKGROUND FOR A COLLECTION

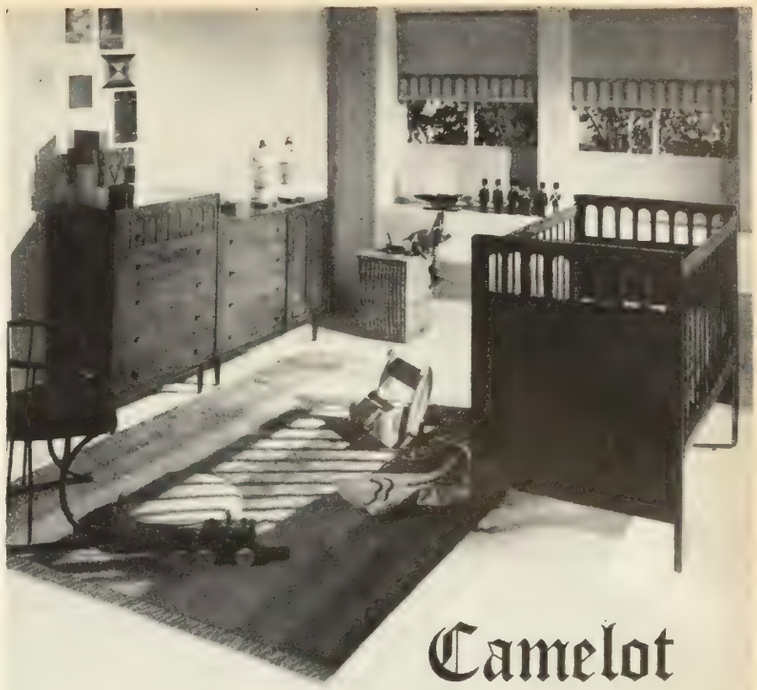
To line a small wall cabinet, measure and cut strips to fit interior sides plus a separate piece for the back panel. Apply smoothly. Cover the surface of each shelf, leaving the front edge bare to match the uncovered wood of the cabinet exterior. Cabinet by Richardson/Nemshoff.

DRESS UP
A PLAIN MIRROR

Find an old picture frame with a simple architectural molding. Measure length and width of each side of frame (taking into account contours of moldings). Cut four strips of tortoise paper and miter the corners; cut strips for outer edges of frame; apply. To finish, glue a narrow gold paper trim around inside edge of frame. Insert a mirror.

GIVE A SIMPLE DESK
A LUXURIOUS SURFACE



Paint, or stain in teak or walnut, all surfaces of desk not to have tortoise finish. Allow 48 hours to dry. Cover top and drawer fronts with tortoise paper. For bright accents and a lighter look, remove wood legs and large drawer pulls, substitute tapered brass legs, small brass pulls. Unfinished pine desk by Aristo-Bilt.

HOW YOU CAN BUY TORTOISE-SHELL PAPER

New Tortoise-Tac paper is available three ways:
In a package of eight 12-inch squares . . . . . $4.95 per package
In a roll 18 inches wide by 1½ yards long . . $3.95 per roll
By the yard, 37 inches wide . . . . . $4.95 per yard

Culled from every where, from Spain to Saigon: a prize handful of the finishing touches that make a house personal

An elegant little cube of oak marquetry is 14 inches square —quite big enough to be used as a stool, a chairside table or a teeterless plant stand. Available in natural, blue-green, tangerine or charcoal. $49. Lord & Taylor, New York.

Wonderful ceramic elephant can be an end table, a perch, a plant stand or, purely and simply, an ornament. 21 inches high with a 9½-by-13-inch "howdah," it comes from Saigon in a variety of hues. $195. W & J Sloane, New York.

To hold a bit of indoor topiary, a reproduction of an old English planter is of walnut with a copper lining, has ebony and brass handles, brass feet. 8 by 6 by 5 inches. $50. At Leigh Hammond, New York.

Slate and cork blackboard framed in teak serves to jog the memory, measures 12 by 24 inches, $13.75. Its partner, also cork and teak, is an easel bulletin board. $6.75. Both at Designed For Living, New York.

From Finland, brightly brash cotton pillows are zipper-closed and filled with (take your choice) chicken feathers or kapok. Many colors, designs; two sizes: 14 by 16 inches, $6.95; 24 inches square, $12.95. At Be Seated, New York.

Fifty million Frenchmen have made the casserole not only indispensable, but a work of art. This one (from France, of course) is of white ceramic, hand-painted in blue and yellow, has a coxcomb for a handle and holds exactly 4 quarts. $45. Soupçon, New York.

M. EHLMANN

A pillar of candle society, this sizable waxworks is molded to look like a column in the Alhambra. Twelve inches high, 2½ inches in diameter, it can be had in six striking colors. $3 each. At B. Altman & Co., New York.

Candleholders from Spain, forged and hammered, of heavy black iron, look like little medieval braziers. There are two sizes: 17 inches (this one could easily sit on the floor), $24.50; 11 inches, $21.50. At Halls, Kansas City, Mo.

Copper luster ceramic pitcher from a Spanish pottery is tall enough (27 inches) for prize-winning delphiniums or, in winter, cattails and such, or, anytime at all, to hold good old umbrellas. $55. At Georg Jensen, New York.

DARWIN HYBRID TULIPS
The Finest in Existence

Introduced by us to American Gardens. First New Race of Tulips in over 50 years. Largest flowering, strongest growing—the most prolific Tulips in existence. They are fragrant with the sweetness akin to the Night-blooming Cereus.

They have the fine qualities of the Darwin with large flowers plus the performance of the Botanical, thus producing a Tulip of outstanding quality. Unlike other Tulips the Darwin Hybrids may be left undisturbed in the garden for many years.

DOVER. Poppy red, a radiant bloom. Inside base star-shaped purple black with yellow edge and black anthers. Height, 26 inches, $1.65 for 10; $14.00 per 100.

GUDOSHNIK. Creamy yellow with each petal etched deep rose for a delightful effect. Inside of bloom shiny buttercup-yellow with black anthers and star-shaped deep purple base. Height, 27 inches, $1.85 for 10; $16.00 per 100.

JEWEL OF SPRING. Introduced by us in 1959. Beautiful clear creamy yellow with a thin pencil stripe of red at the very edges of the petals. It is a very beautiful tulip and combines very well with the other varieties in the collection. Still very scarce. Height, 28 inches. $2.75 for 10; $25.00 per 100.

H&G'S GARDENER'S

How do you evaluate a new rose in terms of your own garden requirements?

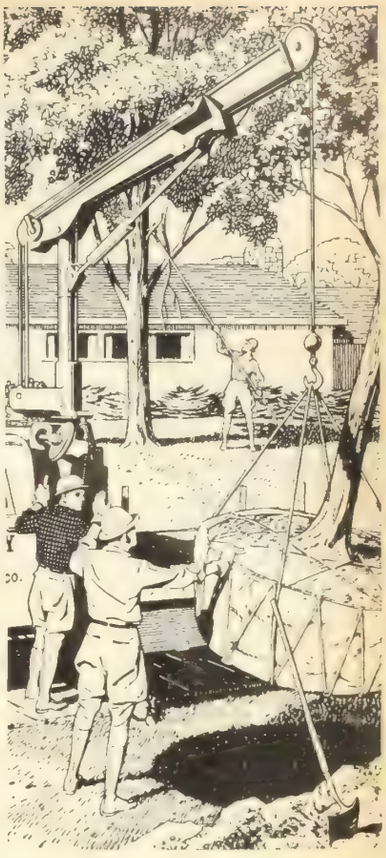
The proof of any plant is in the growing. But how can you grow a plant before you decide whether you want to buy it? The rose growers, taking a leaf from the seedsmen's book, have set up a testing program that, while it may have its weaknesses and uncertainties, does a surprisingly good job at protecting the investment of the venturesome rose enthusiast. The organization, of which every catalogue reader is at least aware by now, is the All America Rose Selections—abbreviated to AARS. The annual selections—sometimes one, usually two (as this year, right), rarely more—carry a special tag and a premium price. The premiated roses are listed by all the leading mail order rose nurserymen and sold in many good garden centers throughout the country, both as dormant plants early in the spring and as potted bushes throughout the season. The catalogue pictures invariably look unremittingly enticing. Yet their resemblance to anything you are likely to see in your garden may last for but a day or an hour. What to do?

First, just because the new rose in your garden may not resemble its catalogue picture, that does not mean it will not be a beautiful rose as you grow it. Second, the AARS program guarantees beyond any reasonable chance of error that the variety winning a Selections award will be above average in performance in your garden. The reason the All-America roses can be depended upon to do well in almost any garden where roses will thrive at all is attributable to the scope of the testing program. For two years prior to introduction, all of the All-America candidates that are submitted to the testing organization by the growers encounter all of the growing conditions the continental United States offers. They are officially rated, day by day, through at least two seasons, by the rose experts themselves. They are informally rated by professionals and experienced amateurs in a hundred gardens, both public and private, over the same length of time. Those chosen for awards are, admittedly, often the results of compromise. But the point is that the essential compromise is a virtual guarantee of universal acceptability.

H&G's approach to this matter of rose testing is even more pragmatic. We will make no editorial fuss (beyond mere announcement) over a rose that has not proved itself with average care in a normal home garden. It might be added that for a number of years we have published no pictures of important rose names that have not been photographed, in growth and on their own bush, under garden conditions. This year and these pages, on which we announce the two All-America rose selections for the growing season of 1964, are no exceptions. We, too, followed the candidates for two years or more. And the photographs, right, were made in mid-June, 1963, of plants that were set in the garden, as dormant bushes shipped by mail from the West Coast and the Northeast, in early April. They are both, on current evidence, worthy of the award they have won.

MONTH

There can be many a slip 'twixt catalogue page and planting hole, but the AARS test program helps reduce the slippage



'GRANADA,' a Hybrid Tea rose that has the dash and the graceful grandeur that the name seems to conjure up, appears full blown at the top of a strong straight stem. One of the two 1964 All-America rose selections, it was originated in California, but thrives in all rose-growing climates. The flower color is predominantly yellow in bud stage, with flashes of red. As the petals unfold, they ripple with stronger rosy lashings while still keeping the basic yellow ground. The flowers maintain their form well, from the first pointed bud to the last open flare. As with most good garden roses, their true character is revealed only when the flower passes bud stage and is fully open.

RALPH BAILEY

'SARATOGA,' a Floribunda rose of modest bush, is a welcome addition to the rather restricted list of truly white garden varieties. The burst of bloom at left is just as it developed on the bush with the exception of one flower that had faded and dropped. Comparable but slightly less abundant flowering will follow through the season until early November (in the Northeast). As with many of the recent Floribunda varieties, this one mixes single-flowering stems, especially later in the year, with stems that bear clusters. The foliage is notable for its starchy vigor. The keeping qualities of the flowers, both on the plant and when they have been cut, are outstanding.

Move it safely— call DAVEY—now!

Now's the perfect time to move that treasured tree to the very spot where you've always thought it should be — to really show off its splendid fall coloring.

Also, moving in big new trees — now — means you can enjoy the luxuriant shade and beauty of sizable trees without waiting years for them to grow. But remember — only experts can move large trees safely. It's a job that needs experienced, trained men, working with modern techniques and special equipment. Davey provides all this, to your economical satisfaction.

Davey deep-root feeding, expert pruning and cabling your trees now, too, will help keep them vigorous and beautiful for a fine spring showing.

NEW DAVEY SERVICE — LAWN FEEDING While Davey is servicing your trees, let us give your lawn its last feeding of the year, with Da-V-Green, the special Davey lawn food. Next spring your lawn can be a deeper, richer green than ever before.

Notes for September Gardeners

As the days shorten, you can begin to see the season's end in the twilight

First weekend

Up chrysanthemums! Except for the hours the sun rises and sets, there is no surer sign of shortening days than the beginning of bud development on your chrysanthemums. Some vegetative or foliage elongation may continue with the shortening of daylight periods to less than fourteen hours, but what earlier would have been leaf buds now become flower buds. And now, if ever, stakes must be set if straight-flowering stems are to be assured. There are as many staking methods recommended for chrysanthemums as there are chrysanthemum varieties. And each gardener generally has one that he least dislikes to adopt. But everyone who has tried to grow really good outdoor chrysanthemums in his garden agrees that some kind of support must be provided before permanent kinks can develop (and every kink is permanent, to be corrected only by a permanent bend in the opposite direction). If you are planning to enjoy chrysanthemums in anything more selective than landscape masses (which is not a bad way to grow them, at that), you might just as well grow them as well as you can.

With individual flowering stalks that have been disbudded to a single crown or terminal inflorescence, the simplest and still probably best method of supporting them is with a single stout bamboo stake and several carefully spaced string or plastic ties. (Beware the paper-and-wire kind, except for very short periods, lest the wire core break through and injure the stems.) To support plants that have been shortened periodically through the growing season to produce bushier growth with more but less spectacular flowers, shorter stakes, usually three to a plant with encircling strings, may be in order. If the plants are gathered up, so to speak, before they begin to sprawl, and then if they are kept gathered up inside string fences as the shoots elongate, straight stems are not hard to produce. Before you protest that straight stems are perhaps not worth all the trouble it takes to produce them, try arranging chrysanthemum blooms that have S-curved necks in any container other than a shallow bowl. Since you can't begin two weeks ago, it is probably a good idea to start your staking now.

Ace in the hole. Improved commercial methods of growing landscape plants in containers, plus improved design and materials of the containers themselves, plus the resulting enormously increased availability of vigorous plants at all seasons through a variety of retail outlets—all these factors make it possible as never before for gardeners to perform major transplanting tasks during the beneficent days of early autumn. But whereas the digging of planting holes in springtime is conventionally an adventure in making mud pies—cold mud pies—digging planting holes in the soft, dry September loam is likely to be too pleasant to be safe. If there is any one thing a fall-planted plant needs more than anything else as it gets ready for winter, that thing is moisture around roots. Spring soil may be heavy and messy to work in, but it is wet. Fall soil may be mellow and light to work, but it is likely to be correspondingly dry.

Ergo: Provide a reservoir of moist soil below the bottom of any plant roots you set in September ground in addition to providing plenty of water from the surface after the plant roots are in place. The best way to create such a reservoir is by preparing a layer of humus-rich, spongy loam (not less than 3 inches and seldom necessarily deeper than 12 or 15 inches when firmed) after the hole is dug. Since the soil mixture is likely to be dry, it should be tramped firmly in place, then—and only then—watered thoroughly. Depending on the size of the hole, you might do well to fill it and permit the water to drain away. Often, in especially dry times, this bottom watering is best done the day before planting, to make sure the reservoir takes up and holds its full capacity of water. Whether you firm the bottom layer with your own two feet or toss a small child into the hole to do the job for you (see drawing), make sure that the finished bottom level will bring the finished soil surface after planting at the point on the plant where the original soil stood in the nursery, and just below the surrounding level of your garden ground.

Third weekend

Garden asepsis. Any and all allusions to sterile techniques in gardens are illusory, if you can survive the pun. But good gardeners can borrow some of the attitudes of the medical practitioner to advantage. Sanitation, to use the layman's rather than the doctor's word, is the best preventive against the spread and virulence of plant infection. Sometimes preventive measures may take the form of eliminating the vectors of disease—which may be common garden insects simply going about their business. In other cases, ills may be caused or spread by viruses or by grosser organisms such as bacteria and spores. Garden cleanliness is your first weapon. And at this time of year, when a season's refuse has fallen on and perhaps spread disease in the garden, and just before the big seasonal leaf fall of autumn, a real cleanup will be enormously beneficial. Because if you wait to clean up possibly infected leaves until they can be taken up with leaves that fall for quite natural reasons, you run the risk of infecting every clean leaf in your compost heap.

And so we recommend that now, before the main leaf fall, you take rake in hand, remove from row and border the leaves that have fallen (and the green matter that has died) from other than natural causes—and burn the whole mess. Thereby, while you can scarcely claim to have achieved surgically sterile conditions in your garden, you will surely have reduced the risk of spreading infection needlessly.

Book note: "The Oxford Book of Garden Flowers" (Oxford University Press, $8) has two illustrators and five authors, and to find out who they are you will have to see the book itself. Written for and published in England, it is subject to the same shifts in emphasis that American gardeners are occasionally disconcerted by in English books. But the text is up-to-date and inclusive, the color drawings, while crabbedly composed in page-fitting groups, are helpfully explicit.

Follow-through. It is not enough to buy well-grown plants carefully balled and burlapped or encased in good containers. You have to plant them. And before you can plant them, you have to take care of them, or they may not be worth planting after all. The increase in the popularity and availability of container-grown plants that we referred to in an earlier note may tend to lull you into believing that once a plant is in a container it will remain in good condition until you can get around to planting it. Not so. In the nursery, container plants are stacked closely in considerable masses. Evaporation by air circulating around the foliage is reduced to a minimum. In addition, most nursery evergreens are kept under lath shades until sold. And they are all watered at least once a day in anything like warm bright weather. How about your backyard while your relatively few purchases of assorted shapes and sizes are waiting to be put in the ground?

In the matter of interim watering, often a forceful spraying of the foliage with a fine fog will do more for the plants' welfare than drenching the roots. This is especially true either when the containers are nonporous or when bottom drainage is particularly good. Both situations can mislead you as to what the plant requires. A heavy misting (with the hose nozzle set for its finest spray) once or twice a day, will keep the plant from losing too much moisture. And if it has enough moisture to begin with, the prevention of loss will be the best insurance you can give it. Of course, no amount of care in watering or shading can take the place of immediate planting on receipt of new plants. In their permanent locations, almost any plant can be given any remedial treatment it may need more successfully than it can in any container or with any but the most horticulturally efficient equipment.

Spring bulb make-up kit

A specialist's notes for improving spring's complexion

By M. M. Graff

EDITOR'S NOTE: In expressing some of her acute personal views on putting "a better face on spring," Mrs. Graff draws with affection on many years' accumulation of expert knowledge about the qualities and characteristics of many springtime bulbs. She, like the late great English gardener, Gertrude Jekyll, has "developed certain instincts about a great many growing things that are by way of being useful knowledge." Here are some of them, in amplification of the choices suggested on page 158, for which she was H&G's consulting expert.

1. Muscari armeniacum or 'Heavenly Blue' and Hyacinthus azureus

The common grape-hyacinth (Muscari armeniacum) seems as indispensable to the April garden as forsythia and the Dutch hybrid crocus. Its blue-violet spikes are too somber for star billing, but effective in the subsidiary role of edging a daffodil bed. By contrast, its stormy hue enhances the clear, light colors of early tulips.

The grape-hyacinth is virtually indestructible, increasing with a weedy vigor that limits its use to the company of equally rampant growers. A more serious hazard is the hank of limp leaves produced in the fall. These persist through the winter, and should really be removed by early spring.

Hyacinthus azureus, the smallest, earliest and bluest of its clan, is admirably scaled to the rock garden. Its manners make it suitable for the most select company: the leaves thrust up with the blue nose of the bud already showing between their tips, and take themselves neatly away after flowering.

The 4-inch spikes open in mid-March just as Scilla tubergeniana is going by, and take over the role of providing a tall form to accent the cups of eranthis and the last species crocus.

The hyacinth's flaring bells, a soft but bright tint of cobalt blue, are striped with deeper color on the outside. Although dainty enough for a Staffordshire flower group, the plant is rugged in constitution and seeds itself freely.

Hyacinthus azureus is alas often miscatalogued as Muscari azureum, although its open bells reveal no kinship with the muscari's close-lipped pout.

2. Puschkinia scilloides and Scilla tubergeniana

Puschkinia scilloides carries a small chime of blue or white bells on an 8-inch stalk, in scale with kaufmanniana tulips or as a background to medium-sized narcissus such as N. calcicola or N. obvallaris (or lobularis). It increases very slowly and, because of its soft stem, is likely to blow over in very rough weather.

Scilla tubergeniana, surely one of the most valuable bulb introductions of recent years, is described as an improved puschkinia. On the basis that it blooms six weeks earlier and increases so prodigally that it forms fluffy mounds of flowers in a short time, the comparison may be apt.

The scilla's somewhat belled yet starry flowers are colored like the puschkinia's, the palest of blues with a slightly darker midrib. Instead of being bunched toward the top, the scilla's flowers are thickly set along a short stalk, not more than 5 inches tall and stout enough to hold erect in rainstorms or even to raise itself after being beaten down by snow.

Honeybees work over the scillas avidly, forcing their way deep into the cleft of the leaves to reach half-open flowers still in the throat. Despite their activity, few seed capsules form, and even these rot off before seed can ripen, so there is no problem of invasion.

3. Eranthis hyemalis and E. tubergenii

The little wilding Eranthis hyemalis is often difficult to tame in a garden. In a moist spot—not a stagnant bog, but a water meadow or seeping, spring-fed slope—it seeds so freely that it makes a glistening carpet of green-ruffed, almost stemless buttercups. It often does poorly in a rock garden, thoroughly drained as the garden must be for the health of most bulbs and alpines.

The hybrid E. tubergenii (E. hyemalis × E. cilicia) is a much more tractable plant and a showier one, standing 4 or 5 inches high on red-tinged stems. Because it is sterile, its flowers last a long time in good condition. Its sharp, citron-toned yellow is eye-catching in the late March garden, but not wholly compatible with cream-colored, canary or tawny yellow crocuses. A buffer zone of blue flowers—Scilla tuber- geniana and Hyacinthus azureus —will assure harmony.

4. Chionodoxas luciliae and C. gigantea

Chionodoxas, like snowdrops, include both a standard species and a better one. Chionodoxa luciliae, the species most frequently listed, has many small, starlike flowers on a tall, weak scape that is quite likely to go over in the mud when the flowers are weighted by rain. Its flowers range from gentian blue through varying tints of blue-violet to white and, less successfully, a rather dingy mauve pink.

C. gigantea usually has fewer but larger flowers, set face upward on a short, sturdy stem. Its color range is similar to that of C. luciliae but usually in somewhat lighter tones. Because of the greater breadth and substance of the flowers and because they are bunched to the point of overlapping, they present a more concentrated blueness than the widely spaced stars of C. luciliae.

Used as a mimic pool for Tulipa kaufmanniana to float above, Chionodoxa gigantea heightens these tulips' resemblance to waterlilies. Although they will grow in sun, chionodoxas last longer in open woodland where budding leaves throw a dappled shade. A massed planting, especially at dusk when the color is intensified, glows as blue as an alcohol flame.

C. gigantea offers a pleasing variety of soft shades of blue and violet, giving a random planting the effect of changeable silk.

5. Galanthus nivalis and G. elwesii

One of the puzzles of plant distribution is the fact that one species becomes so firmly established in the public mind as the sole representative of its genus that other and far superior forms are virtually unknown. Snowdrops are a case in point. The common little hand-me-down, Galanthus nivalis, has the happy merit of thriving in hard-luck places, in shade and among tree roots, and of increasing steadily without care. It flowers toward the end of March, a laggard date for snowdrops, although it serves to extend their season. The sepals of G. nivalis are so skimpily cut and its scape so drooping that the flower presents a rather meager appearance and seems anticlimactic to the robust varieties that precede it.

Actually the king of snowdrops—at least of those that are most readily available—is G. elwesii. Its nobly rounded sepals will measure well over 2 inches when flattened against a ruler, and are carried on a sturdy stem up to 10 inches tall. Leaves are proportionately scaled, being broad and glaucous enough for a tulip, but of a much deeper green. If its majestic size isn't sufficient identification, G. elwesii and its hybrids wear a unique hallmark, an additional emerald zone near the top of the tube. This second green patch varies in size and shape, sometimes extending downward to join the marginal horseshoe, forming a fork-tailed pattern like the silhouette of a Luna moth.

Galanthus elwesii does equally well in sun or shade, as it flowers before trees are in leaf. It usually sends up its leaves in December, with the pointed bud clasped between them, and flowers with the first January thaw, but with a fine disdain for conformity, it has twice been found in full bloom in October. Despite its splendid form, size and earliness, elwesii is no more expensive than little stringy nivalis so there isn't even the excuse of economy for buying the poorer species.

But the variety G. nivalis 'Samuel Arnott' is quite another matter. A superlative snowdrop, it is not quite as large as G. elwesii, but has even more graciously rounded sepals. 'Samuel Arnott' is scarce and expensive, but it deserves to go high on your wish list.

6. Species crocus, old and new

To gardeners who know only the huge Dutch hybrid crocus, the first glimpse of winter-flowering species will be novelty enough to commend them. First choice for a starting collection is Crocus sieberi atticus, a luminous violet which usually opens in January but may, in an especially favored spot, come before the end of December. C. chrysanthus 'E. A. Bowles,' attaining a height of nearly 4 inches and thereby the largest of the early spring-flowering species, is light canary yellow with a clove brown thumbprint at the base of the outer segments. C. tomasinianus 'Whitewell Purple' is almost daisy-shaped, rather slender in itself, but so prolific that its flowers overlap to present a solid block of color. It is a rich shade of red-purple, quite unique among species crocus, approaching the intensity of the Dutch hybrid 'Paulus Potter.' C. chrysanthus 'Cream Beauty,' a bowl-shaped flower with fiery orange stigmata to accent its mellow tone, would be a harmonious fourth.

Lovely as these old favorites may be, some of the latest introductions show startling innovations in pattern and color combinations. One, crocus sieberi × 'Hubert Edelsten,' packs a fantastic play of color into its 2-inch height. The outer segments are royal purple crossed with a sharply drawn white chevron. Inner segments are palest lavender, the throat yellow and the extravagantly flared stigmata are tangerine orange highlighted with gold ruffles at the rim.

'Hubert Edelsten' takes its coat of arms from one of its parents, the tender C. sieberi versicolor of Crete, but the coloring of C. chrysanthus 'Advance' is its own distinct and happy invention. The outside is basically yellow, but so closely striped and stippled with dull reddish purple that the closed bud appears violet. The low-keyed exterior gives no hint of the brilliance within: a strong tawny yellow with a curious matte finish, quite unlike the glossy surface of most crocus. The widely expanded stigmata are glowing persimmon orange, spotlighted—like those of 'Hubert Edelsten'—with a paler gold edge which makes them conspicuous.

'Advance' would open flat to its full 2-inch width if it had room, but the flowers bubble up so profusely that their segments interfere. The intermingling of violet and yellow petals is so improbable that it seems at first glance the result of a mixed lot of bulbs and not the combined coloring of a single variety.

And does this complete the crocus story? It is not even the end of the beginning.

7. Early tulips

The earliest species tulips such as T. biflora and T. turkestanica are enchanting when they open in warm sunshine to reveal their white interiors and golden throats. In gray weather the closed flowers, camouflaged as they are with dusky brown or greenish shadings, have little decorative value.

For a dash of hot color, in fair weather or foul, try T. 'Scarlet Elegance,' a selection from T. kaufmanniana coccinea. It blooms before the end of March when a good rousing vermilion is heartily welcome. Four inches high and as much across, it is better suited to the rock garden than the great floppy 'Red Emperor.'

The relatively new greigii hybrids (T. greigii × T. fosteriana) are larger in scale but still short-stemmed enough to be in keeping with the majority of rockery plants. 'Jessica' is but one particularly fine red greigii variety, a little more intense in tone than 'Scarlet Elegance' and with a glistening brushed finish. Its leaves on first unfolding are boldly striped with chocolate brown.

A dozen proven single early varieties, such as 'Pink Beauty,' consort well with all but the earliest species. And many newer fosteriana hybrids, like 'Easter Parade,' can be spectacular.

I imagine pilgrimages to the Tennessee Valley, to Grand Coulee and to Boulder Dam. I think of holiday tours along the St. Lawrence Seaway, with river-steamers full of bands and picnickers toasting all that good sense, engineering training and peace between nations have wrought there. The irrigated valleys of California could show off their wealth.

Above all, each city should offer thanks to its sanitary engineers, who might appear with an accompanying guard of master plumbers—for even the grimmest nature may sweeten a little once it feels itself appreciated. The Mayor might read out the proud statistics citing the number of years since typhoid or cholera claimed a victim within his purlieus; and if the statistics should by any chance not be so proud, how quick the Mayor and the Department of Sanitation would be to improve them! And each year the ceremony would be crowned by the dedication of some new Wonder of Water: a handsome public pool, or a fountain with a bit of green about it, shining and leaping in the center of the city where passers-by could refresh their eyes. Or a boat basin. Or a new wing on the aquarium. Or—

But you see what I mean. Water is a universal symbol because it is a universal need. As we live now, it is beyond the power of the individual, in the vast majority of cases, to satisfy this need on his own. Only men working together can build reservoirs and aqueducts and dams and hydroelectric stations and sewage conversion plants and, soon no doubt, great structures to desalt the sea and make the desert blossom like the corn tassel and the alfalfa.

Our Festival of Waters, then, would be a holiday to celebrate the things that men working together can achieve. What could be more appropriate? For as we all know, the just and the unjust both get wet when it rains and thirsty when it does not. Too often, in the past, the just and the unjust have preferred to disagree and to create deserts rather than settle down and share out their water rights. But now our engineering knowledge is growing with the world's population, and with its need for water. Might not, for once, new skills combine with new needs? Might not the just and the unjust decide to work together, literally for dear life? And might not these projects to control the fluid strength and the eternal changeability of water teach us something about controlling the fluid strength and eternal changeability of human nature?

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

FRENCH EMBASSY

On the cover: A wonderful screen made of five panels of very old French boiserie dominates one side of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Avery's living room in Hillsborough, Calif. The screen balances an ornate mantel on the opposite side of the room, as well as making a warm, mellow background for the cool greens and whites of the furniture and rug—and like all things that are perfectly cast for their roles, it has a look of inevitability. Nevertheless, in the event of change, it is quite capable of playing other roles just as brilliantly—as the pièce de resistance of an entrance foyer, as a handsome stretch of paneling to face the book wall of a study. If only three panels were needed, the other two could become a double door in the grand manner. The room was designed by Michael Taylor.

Sit down and listen while we give away some trade secrets about making furniture.

hese are the things very furniture maker knows:

1 A dark finish will hide mis-matched grains and imperfections the wood. If it's a clear finish, it asn't a thing to hide.

2 Drawer and door fittings can be done sloppily. Or right. So that rawers glide on ball bearings, von't stick or tip. So that lass doors won't rattle.

3 The inside of a cupboard doesn't have to be finished like the outside. It just looks better.

4 Extension table slides can be made of wood. But metal slides move more smoothly.

5 Drawer sides of plywood are cheaper. But solid oak lasts longer and looks better.

6 It's easy to leave out little niceties. Not all buffets, for instance, have silver trays lined with tarnishproof cloth. But ours have both. And cushioned grooves where plates can't slide or rattle.

Lane knows all the secret short cuts.

And still does everything the hard way. You'll see the results in Rhythm, the new Contemporary American Group. Clear, beautiful finishes in richly grained walnut. Gracefully sculptured lines. No skimping anywhere

The Rhythm Group includes cocktail tables, bedroom and dining room furniture. Expensive? Not when a 58″ cocktail table costs just $39.95.*

The mellow, time-burnished quality of Esperanto lends an heirloom look that belies the price. For example, the cocktail table in Hispania finish, with Spanish-inspired Baroque base, approximately $129 (slightly higher in the West).

Carefully matched pecan veneers and other select hardwood solids are finished in a warm Moreno brown with soft, glowing patina. Accent pieces are finished in a rich, deeper Hispania tone, others come in antique green and gold.

questions &answers

BY THOMAS H. ORMSBEE

THIS COLUMN IS DEVOTED TO QUESTIONS ABOUT OLD THINGS. NO ATTEMPT AT EVALUATING THE ANTIQUES WILL BE MADE. LETTERS WILL EITHER BE ANSWERED ON THIS PAGE OR BY MAIL. ONLY ONE QUESTION TO EACH LETTER, PLEASE. MAIL ALL LETTERS TO HOUSE & GARDEN, 420 LEXINGTON AVENUE, NEW YORK 17, N. Y.

RICHARD JORDAN PLATTER

I would like information about this antique platter. The mark on the back states "The Residence of the late Richard Jordan New Jersey" and under that the initials J H & Co.

F. W. C.—Frankfort, Ind.

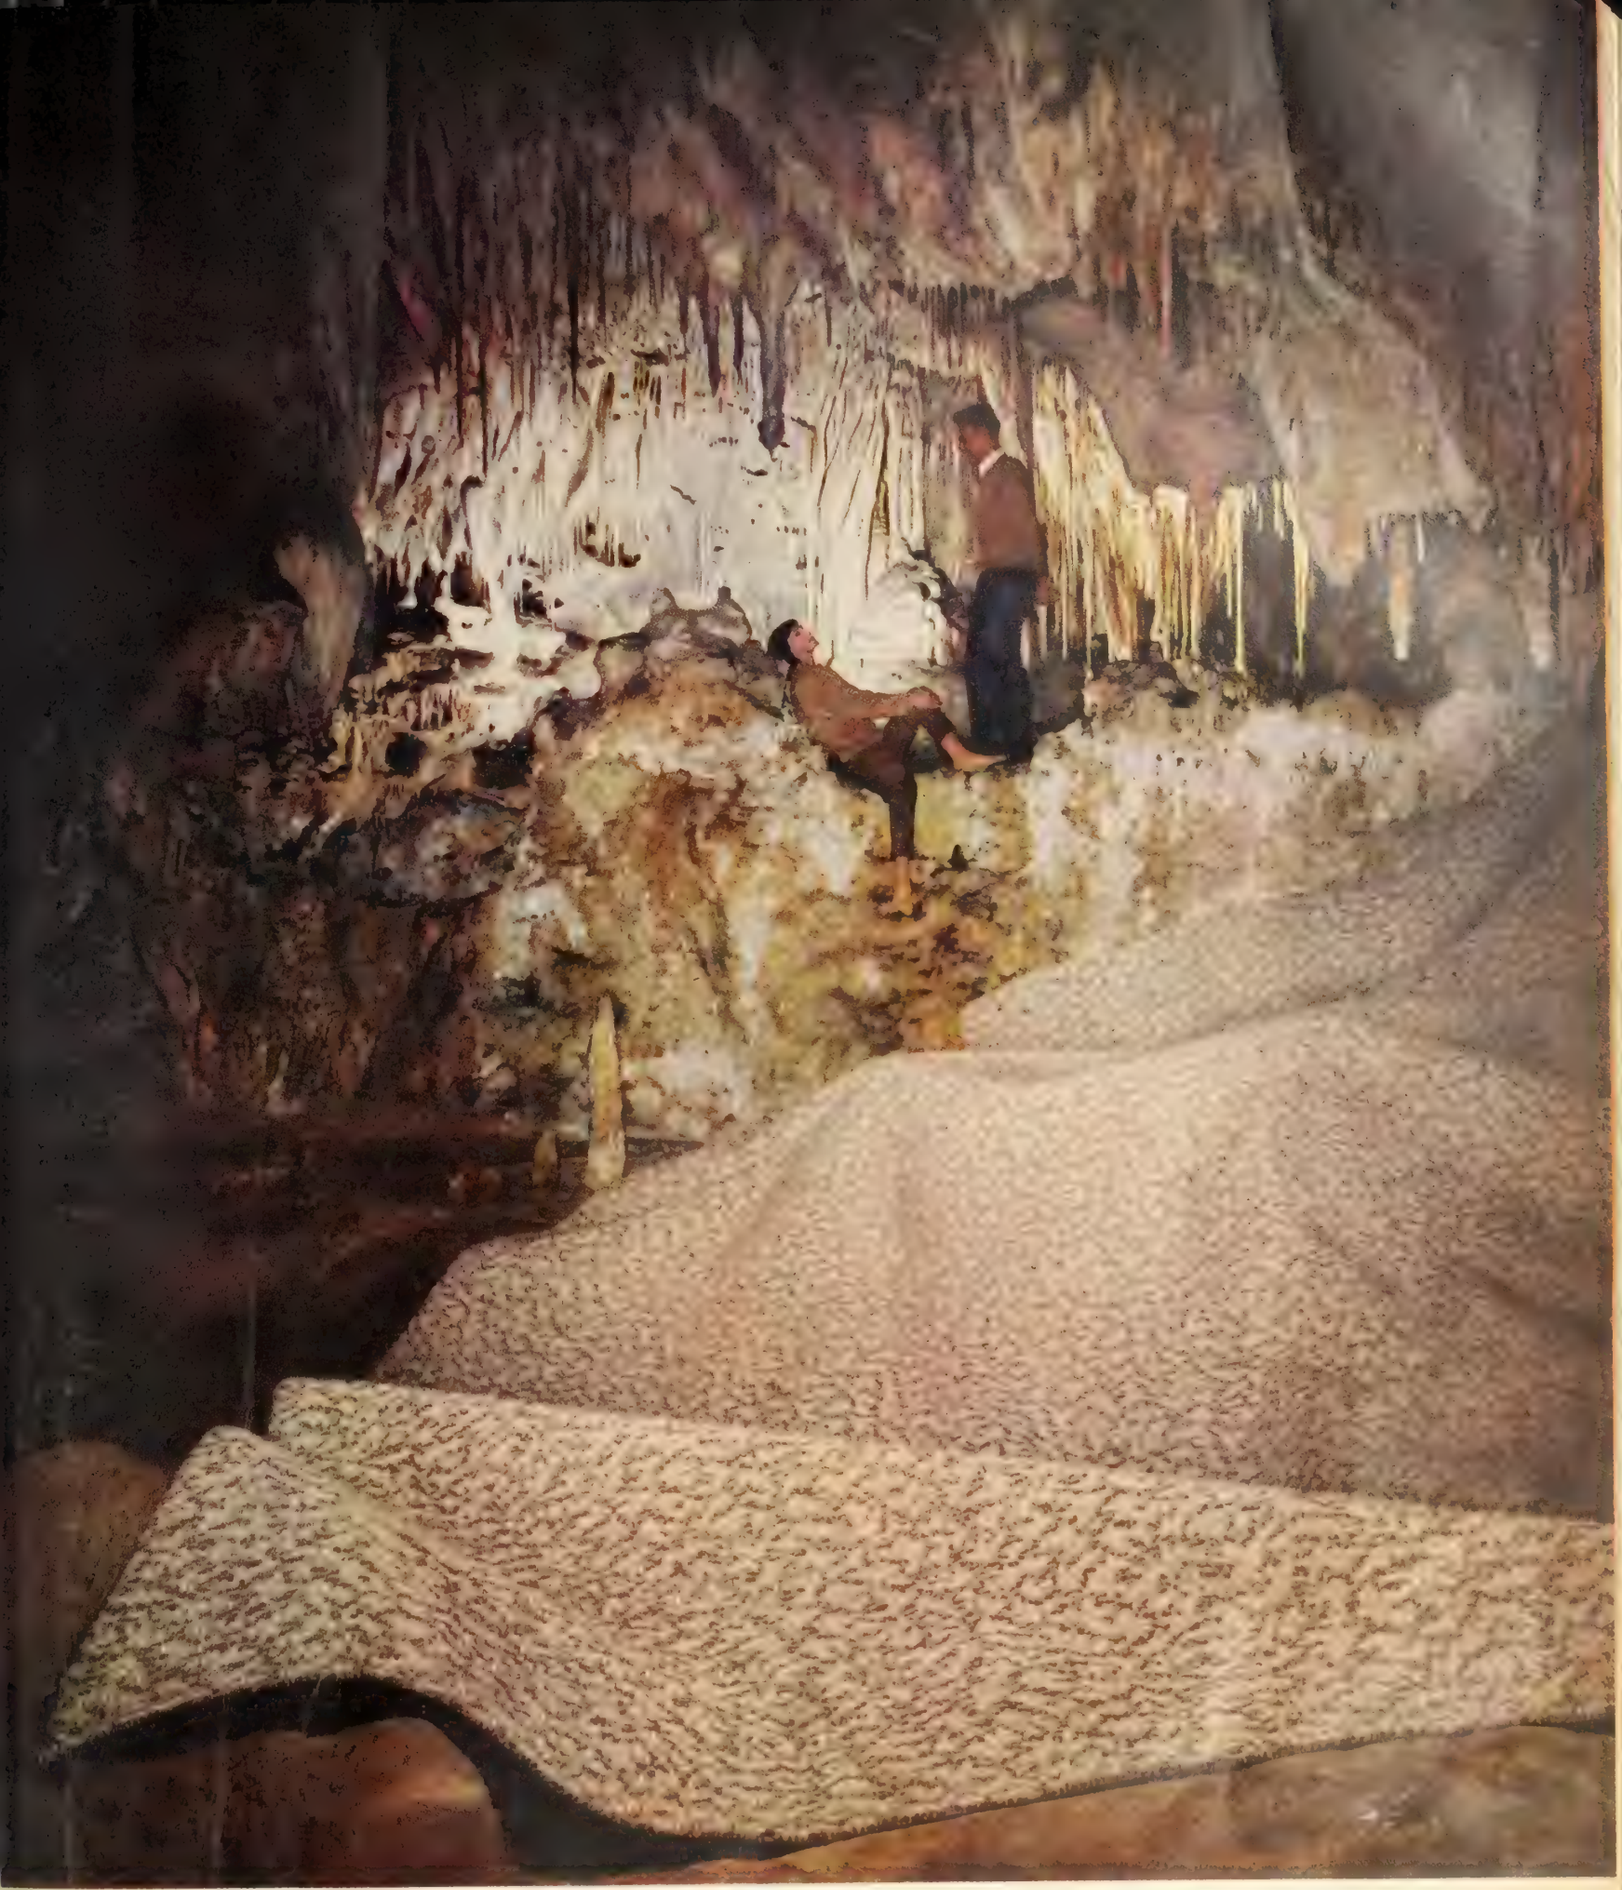
Richard Jordan was a prominent Quaker minister at Newton, N. J. After his death in 1826, his friends sent an engraving of his residence to the Joseph Heath Company of Tunstall, Staffordshire. Heath used the picture as a pattern to decorate entire dinner services; your platter must have come from one of them—they were popular with American Quakers.

WAG-ON-THE-WALL CLOCK

My father, at age eight, was with his father in London when this clock was purchased, the year 1835. Can you add to my information about my clock?

E. R. B.—East Hampton, N. Y.

Wag-on-the-wall is the name for clocks with exposed pendulum and weight chains. They were made here and in England during the early nineteenth century. The design of your clock dates it between 1815 and 1830.



OPEN-FACE CUPBOARD

Could you tell the age and origin of my pine cabinet? The nails are handmade. Is it properly called a Welsh dresser?

D. C. B.—Port Washington, N. Y.

Practically all American open-face dish cupboards were made of pine with handmade nails. So instead of being Welsh, it is probably from New England and could date from 1760 to 1825.

nature...captured in carpet by magee

This is the most sensitive palette in the world. Not cold, tense, man-made colors...here, instead, is the deep deep richness that only time can burnish. Colors that bask with the warmth of the sand and earth, rocks and trees. Calming. Tranquilizing. Beautiful. A new idea in carpeting loomed to last: 'the naturals' collected in carpet by magee.

IRONSTONE TUREEN

This mark is on both my ironstone tureen and its platter. I would like to know where and when they were made. M. K.—Orefield, Pa.

T. & R. Boote & Co. were potters of Burslem, Staffordshire. The diamond-shaped mark shows that Boote registered the design (named Union Shape) at the British Patent Office on August 22, 1856.

ORNATE BABY CARRIAGE

Could you tell me the true age of this baby carriage? B. O. S.—Clear Lake, Iowa

SHEFFIELD CANDELABRUM

My grandmother's silver-plate-over-copper candelabrum has a mark like a double sunburst. Can you tell who made it and when?
M. J. P.—Hartsdale, N. Y.

Your candelabrum is genuine antique Sheffield plate. Matthew Boulton of Birmingham made Sheffield plate with this mark from 1784 to 1809.

BOSTON ROCKER

The finish and workmanship look to be old on this chair I bought in Athens, Ohio. But most old rockers have more than six spindles. Is it an antique?
M. McD.—Parkersburg, W. Va.

Yours is a Boston rocker typical of those made by chair shops in the Boston area. Makers varied the number of spindles to suit their fancy. This one dates about 1830 to 1850 and seems to retain its original stencils.

WRITING BOX DESK

I believe this old box to be an antique lap desk. Can you give its age and original use? H. J.—Decatur, Ala.

This is an American or English writing box desk dating about 1800 to 1830. The user opened the box, wrote with a quill pen on the slanting velvet panels.

LIVERPOOL PITCHER

Is it possible to tell how old this pitcher is and where it was made? It has no mark.

Between 1800 and 1820 several of the Liverpool potteries made similar ship pitchers with the arms of the United States on them. They sold them as souvenirs to American seamen.

A guide to vinyl floors

Eight pages of facts, pictures and decorating ideas to help you choose the vinyl floors best for any room. Presented by the people who make every kind of vinyl floor.

Armstrong

Decorating a home today is more challenging, more interesting than ever. There's more choice of things to decorate with, which means you have to take more care in the choosing.

This 8-page guide tells you all about one of the important contributions to good decoration and easy home care: vinyl floors. It shows you the wide and various choices of vinyl floors available and helps you choose intelligently the ones best for you, your home, and your own taste in decorating.

Why vinyl is so perfect for floors

Of all the floors available today, the most fashionable and popular are vinyl floors. Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors. (Corlon is Armstrong's trademark name for its vinyl floors.)

Vinyl is an extraordinarily adaptable "raw material." The Armstrong designers and research people have discovered that there are almost no limits to the effects they can achieve with vinyl in floors. It can be crystal clear or vividly colored. It can be translucent or opaque. It can be richly textured or satin smooth. It can be combined with other substances, like cork or glittering metallics. And vinyl makes floors that are beautifully smooth and easy to care for, wonderfully tough and long wearing.

Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors are created for the way you live—now. They're distinctive. They help you decorate your home comfortably, imaginatively, and with your own particular stamp of individuality.

Corlon floors help you express your individuality.

There are two basic types of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors:

1. Sheet Vinyl Corlon
2. Vinyl Corlon Tile

1. Sheet Vinyl Corlon comes six feet wide and up to nine long. The styles and colors of Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors

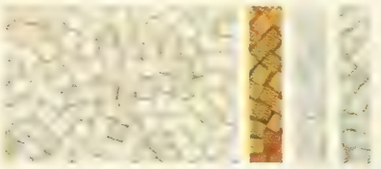
There are two basic ways to use a floor when you decorate. It can set the mood of a room, providing the decorative theme by being the dominant element. Several kinds of Sheet Vinyl Corlon come in colors that do this for you, such as lavender, teak, or peppery mixtures of colorings.



More often, the floor is a background—handsome and distinctive in its own right—but still a background. Every kind of Sheet Corlon comes in a range of mute[illegible]ngs that provide [illegible]round for [illegible]t leave

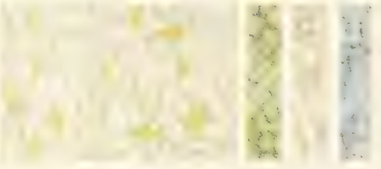
Montina Corlon

Gives you a floor that's rich, warm, natural looking. Vinyl chips, colorfully veined like natural stone fragments, are set in deep translucent vinyl. They form intriguing patterns and give Montina a gentle texture you can actually feel. (l. to r. styles 86702, 86701, 86700, 86705.)



Tessera Corlon

Cubes of colored vinyl (like this, actual size) in a vinyl background weave into flowing patterns. Tessera is a tasteful setting for any furniture. It comes in monochromatic and multicolored effects. It, too, has a textured surface. (l. to r. styles 86541, 86551, 86542, 86539.)

Paventi Corlon

Here's a totally new idea in vinyl floors. Large vinyl "stones," gently veined and tinted like natural marble, are set in a softly mottled, neutrally colored background. Extremely subtle. And Paventi has a look of depth that is frankly luxurious. (l. to r. styles 87021, 87020, 87023, 87022.)

Patrician Corlon

Its over-all appearance is subdued. Tiny, colored vinyl fragments merge into a softly mottled expanse. Some patterns are in a single coloring, some have accents of metallic or contrasting colors. And it has a gently textured surface. (l. to r. styles 86005, 86003, 86011, 86014.)

This important new floor color-coordinates for you! Every pattern has a white background. Each has varying shades of a single pastel accent color, specially chosen to go with the most popular colors in appliances, counter tops, bathroom fixtures. (l. to r. styles 86406, 86403, 86405, 86401.)

Tracino Corlon

Tracino Marble has a rich, classic look. Delicate veining weaves through a softly colored background. The veining is gently embossed and is strikingly realistic. You can choose from an interesting range of fashionable colorings. (l. to r. styles 88021, 88025, 88020, 88024.)

The textures of Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors

Montina Corlon, style 86707.

Texture, in and of itself, can be beautiful.

Consider a pebbled beach.

Lately, texture has become a very important part of good decoration and of good decorating materials. It adds warmth, new interest, aesthetic appeal.

Many Armstrong Sheet Vinyl Corlon Floors have gently textured surfaces. You notice the texture of Tessera and Montina, right away. The vinyl chips are raised slightly above their translucent vinyl background. The result is a look of depth. You can look down between the chips. The surface of the floor is rippled, nubbly. When you run your finger over it, you can actually feel the texture.

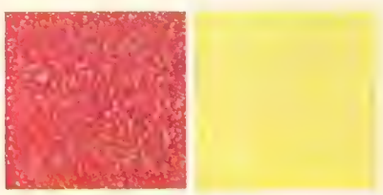
Texture does more than make these floors especially interesting. It gives them practical advantages. It helps hide accidental scuffs and the marks of spiked heels. And it conceals minor irregularities in the subfloor.

Custom designed floors

A custom designed floor makes a room more distinctive. You can combine two or more colorings of the same style. You can even combine different styles. Custom designs can be used functionally, too. They can separate areas in an open plan house or set off special decorative features.

Because Sheet Vinyl Corlon comes in long, wide rolls, it lends itself particularly well to curving custom designs such as the one shown above. Your dealer can also create striking custom effects by installing Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Feature Strips with your new floor. These long strips come in many colors and in various widths.

Same entry hall . . . 4 kinds of vinyl tile. Here, Rochelle, 1330, with brass strips.



And here is a custom floor of Sabrina Corlon Tile, 1381, with walnut strips.

The styles and colors of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Tile

Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Tiles are highly original in styling and color. They take the unique properties of vinyl and turn them into design effects and colorings that give you exceptional opportunities to create a beautiful floor with a distinctly individual look.

There's a fine choice of styles in Corlon Tile. Each has its own unique look, and its own range of colorings.

In the pictures above, we've taken the same room and decorated it four different ways to show you the wide variety of effects you can achieve with Vinyl Corlon Tiles.

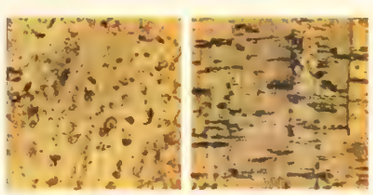
Rochelle Corlon Tile

A unique tile which gives a room great elegance. Tiny, colored vinyl chips and golden flakes are suspended in clear vinyl, like this: to create a dramatic three dimensional effect. (l. 1336, r. 1329.)

Sabrina Corlon Tile

This new floor provides a tasteful setting for almost any interior. Smoky striations of color weave throughout this subtly toned, yet interesting, tile. Sabrina comes in a wide variety of smart colorings. (l. 1383, r. 1385.)

Here, Paiselle Corlon Tile, 1725, is combined with Rochelle, 1333 and 1334.



This is the Parquet design in Custom Vinyl Cork Tile, 1011, with white vinyl insets.

Paiselle Corlon Tile

Perfect for very high-style decorating. (Paiselle is a pet of interior designers.) It's vivid in color, bold in design, with a luminous quality and an unusual look of depth. (l. 1720, r. 1722.)

Paiselle is a trademark of Armstrong Cork Co.

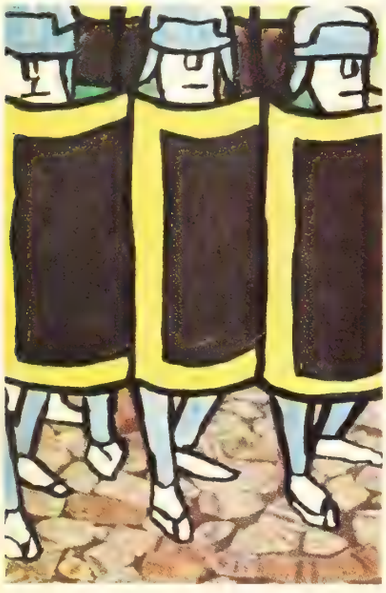
Custom Vinyl Cork Tile

A new kind of floor with the beauty of cork and the practicality of vinyl. A smooth, protective layer of vinyl is fused to real cork. Several styles. At left,* above, Random Driftwood (1006); at right, Parquet (1011).



Custom designed tile floors

You can create countless custom designs with Vinyl Corlon Tiles — ranging from a basic checkerboard of two colorings to borders made of contrasting tiles, or abstract random patterns. You can combine a variety of colorings in a single styling because the predominant color in one tile is echoed in the accent color of others. You can add feature strips or use inlays of other materials, like brass, cork, silver, wood. Your flooring dealer or decorator can help you plan a distinctive custom designed floor.

The practical side of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors

How well will a Vinyl Corlon Floor wear?

If you marched a Roman legion back and forth on a Vinyl Corlon Floor for six months, like this:

. . . there would be no floor left.

Vinyl is not indestructible. No floor or floor covering is immune to the eventual sign of wear—not even a steel floor would be. But unless an envious neighbor does something wantonly destructive, your Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floor will stay good-looking for years. Its colors will last the life of the floor because they go through to the backing.

How do you take care of Vinyl Floors?

We've heard it claimed that vinyl floors need no waxing and no upkeep. Don't you believe it! Like any other fine material, vinyl floors do need some attention to keep them looking their best . . . and the lighter colors obviously will require extra care.

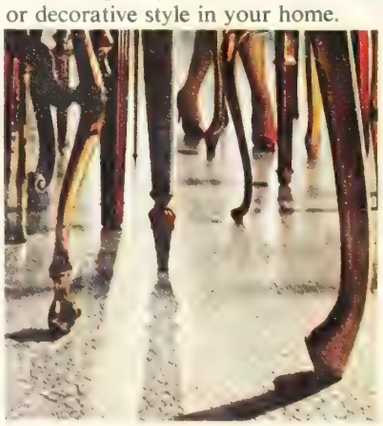
The point is, vinyl floors need less upkeep than other floors do. Vinyl is remarkably resistant to grease, water, perfume, foods, ink—most of the run-of-the-mill things that get spilled around the house.

A run-of-the-mill thing.

The best way to take care of your Corlon Floor is to give it an occasional cleaning and waxing. How often depends on how much use your floor gets. In between, all that's necessary is a quick once-over to remove loose dirt and dust. Of course, spilled things should be wiped away as soon as convenient.

To help you take the best care of your vinyl floors, Armstrong has developed special cleaners and polishes which are available from your flooring dealer. He can recommend the Armstrong floor care products best for your new floor.

Where can you install a Vinyl Corlon Floor?



Upstairs, downstairs, in my lady's chamber. Sheet Vinyl Corlon with the exclusive Armstrong Hydrocord Back can be used in any room in the home—even on the ground floor of basementless houses, and in most basements. That's because the Hydrocord Back makes Sheet Vinyl Corlon resistant to most alkaline-moisture conditions in concrete in contact with the ground.

All the tile floors shown in this guide can also be installed anywhere in the home, with the exception of Custom Vinyl Cork Tile, which cannot be used in basements.

How do Corlon Floors blend with your furnishings?

Some Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors are bright and gay. Some are subdued. Some go with modern furnishings, some go with traditional or antique. Some go with everything.

One thing is certain: There's an Armstrong Vinyl Floor for any room or decorative style in your home.

Vinyl Corlon goes with any furniture style.

When you buy an Armstrong Floor, your flooring dealer can get free decorating help for you from the decorators at the Armstrong Bureau of Interior Design. They will prepare color schemes—including paint and fabric swatches—to go with your flooring choice and your furnishings.

How can you make sure your new floor will be properly installed?

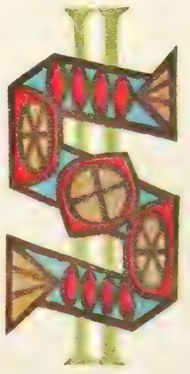
Three pieces of advice are worth bearing in mind: First, select a store with a reputation for good workmanship. The dealer people speak well of can earn that praise only by doing a good job.

Second, remember that you're investing in something you will use for years. So don't choose a dealer on price alone. Since the finished floor is only as good as its installation, it's not worth taking a chance on less than the best in workmanship to save a few dollars.

And look for this sign. It means that the dealer has installation craftsmen who have completed a special course on floor installation given by Armstrong.

A wider choice of floors than ever before

Armstrong makes many more floors than are shown in this guide. For fifty years, Armstrong Linoleum has been a favorite for kitchens and bathrooms; especially popular today are the embossed brick and flagstone patterns. Then there's Armstrong Excelon Tile, a rugged, vinyl-asbestos tile that's a favorite of do-it-yourselfers. To install it, you just brush on the special adhesive and stick down the tiles. If odd-shaped pieces are needed, you can cut them with scissors.



Excelon Tile comes in dozens of colors and styles and is very economical.

Armstrong also makes rubber tile, linoleum tile, and cork tile. A good, temporary floor covering is Armstrong Vinyl Accolon, a rotogravure-printed, vinyl-coated material that's very inexpensive.

Your dealer also has a special kind of baseboard—called Armstrong Vinyl Cove Base—that eliminates dirt-catching joints between floor and wall. A handsome decorative asset, it comes in a variety of colors.

What about prices?

Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors vary in price. Some are fairly low in cost. Some are downright expensive. None are cheap. Cost depends on the complexity of design, the way the floor is made, and many other factors. Unfortunately, we can't give you the exact price of a floor installed in your home, because it depends on varying things, such as room size and shape, condition of the subfloor, whether your home is new or whether you're remodeling, custom work done (if any), local labor rates, and so on. But your dealer will give you a free estimate. Easy terms are usually available.

Where to see Armstrong Corlon Floors for yourself

You really have to see the floors themselves to appreciate the depth, luminous colorings, texture, metallic accents of Armstrong Vinyl Corlon Floors. These qualities just can't be reproduced on paper. Visit the showroom of a nearby Armstrong dealer. He will be happy to show you the real thing. If you would like a free, permanent reference copy of this guide, write Armstrong, 6310 Maple Ave., Lancaster, Pa. In Canada, Dept. 103-K, Box 919, Montreal, P.Q.

Armstrong VINYL FLOORS

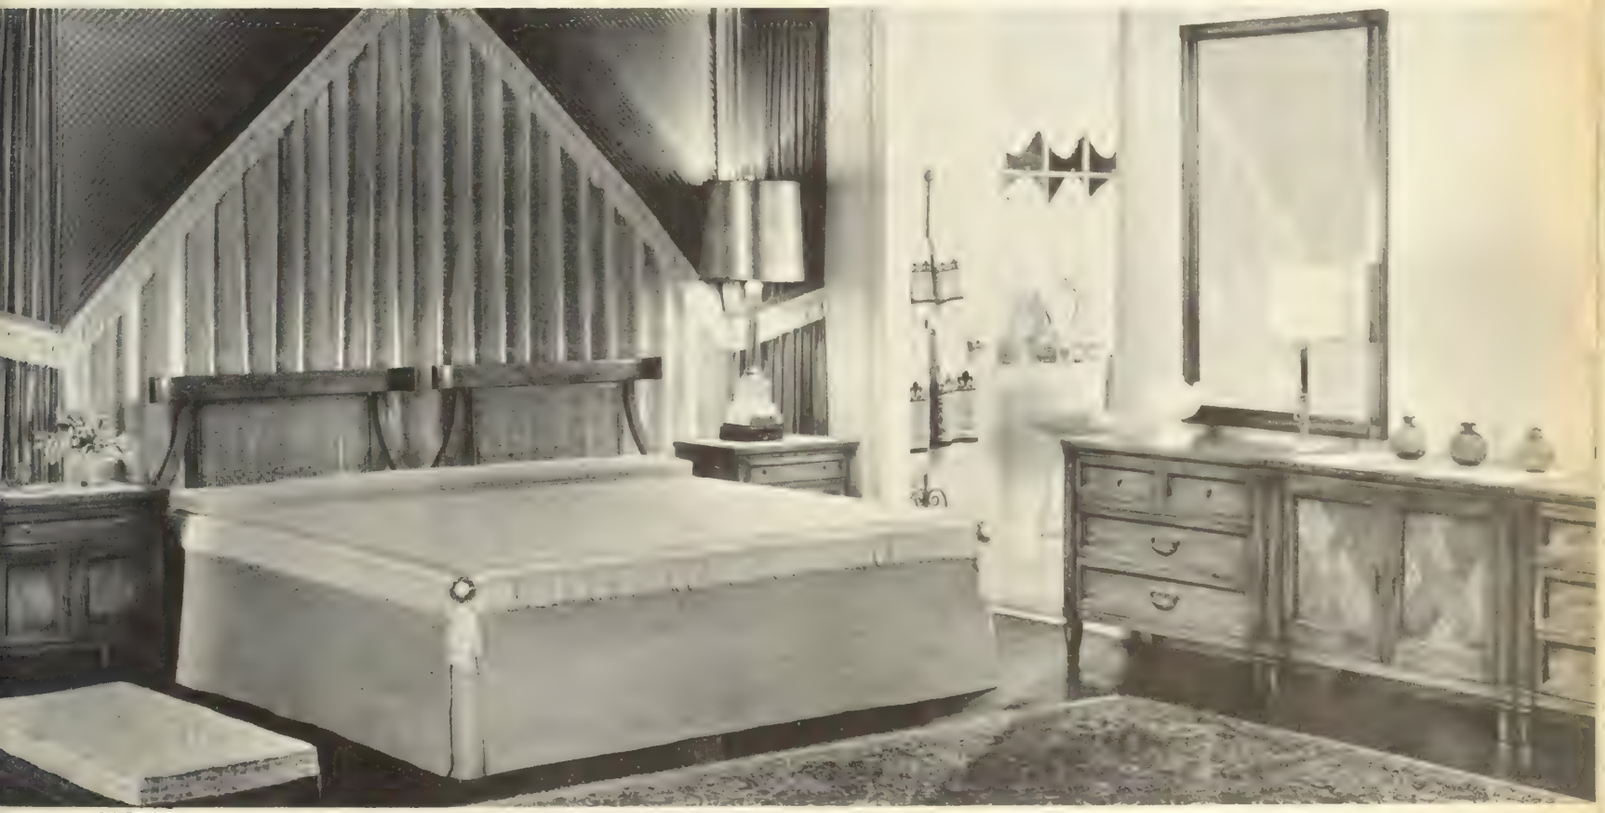
The well-dressed letter

A wardrobe of writing paper should be comprehensive, good-looking and tempered by taste

One of the fascinating things about writing paper is that—even with nothing written on it—it is a key to character as revealing in its way as its owner's penmanship. That is why it behooves everyone (short of masters of belles lettres who can write on anything and still be treasured) to choose their letter paper with the same care given to something as important and revelatory as a new hat.

There has never been, of course, and may never be, much leeway in the choice of paper for formal correspondence. It should be heavyweight, have a kid or dull finish and be of the best quality your pocketbook is up to. At one time, white, and white alone, was de rigueur. Today, arbiters of etiquette have relaxed to the point where cream or the palest of grays is quite permissible. The size—about 6 by 8 inches—can vary slightly according to personal taste, but a double sheet must always be used. Engraved with the house address only, this paper answers such things as engraved invitations, et al., and is correct in any instance, any time.

But the point in having a wardrobe of writing paper is to have something in your desk other than heavy white vellum. Ardent correspondents do a great deal more than answer engraved invitations. In the strictest protocol, even so-called informal writing paper (once designated by an authority as suitable for "acquaintances, congressmen and shops") is still pretty hidebound: it can be thinner than formal paper and, if you like, a quiet shade of blue. But protocol, carried too far, can be a bore, and it is perfectly proper today to use any kind of informal paper that pleases you as long as it is in good taste—a quality often captured simply by taking the following precautions:



1. Steer clear of bumpy, surface-of-the-moon paper. It's difficult to write on and is apt to look artsy-craftsy.
2. Unless the paper is handmade and of fine quality, avoid deckle and feathery edges.
3. Be sure that, in double-sheet paper, both folds are of exactly the same size. In inferior papers, they sometimes are not.
4. Look out for outré colors such as violent pinks and mauves. They suggest either that you are color blind or are trying too hard to be different.
5. Gilding and metallic touches are apt to be florid or ostentatious. Better to pass them by.
6. In engraved paper, select only classic lettering. Fancy scripts and "Oriental" calligraphy are deeply suspect.
7. Eschew envelopes of curious shapes. A square or oblong tailored to post office regulations is always best.

Informality's golden age

Once these bits of punctilio are met, you may choose as you will. Well-designed informal letter paper is enjoying something very close to a golden age. If you like gray, there is a dove gray paper edged in lemon yellow that would please even Emily Post. Also approved, in that they are rather formal, are two papers of fine quality: one a white double sheet edged in turquoise (the envelope is lined in the same color) and engraved with a turquoise facsimile of your signature; the other a double sheet of pale French blue, edged and monogrammed with an envelope lined in a geranium pink that would make your mouth water. There is a simple single sheet of white vellum that wears, instead of a monogram, a single crimson anemone in one corner, and a very thin white paper with an envelope lined with tissue patterned in painted daisies. Another envelope in pale blue is lined with a blue plaid that looks like gingham. (This one is for teen-agers.) A blue snowflake is used like a crest on paler blue paper, and—for sentimentalists—a thin white paper is sprigged with an over-all design of rosebuds. This envelope, naturally, is lined with pink.

Certain papers, like a wonderful dress, lend flair to special occasions. Brides or brides-to-be acknowledging gifts and best wishes should find a largish paper

Is it hard to choose a silver pattern?

Actually, it shouldn't be—once you've settled on certain facts. Such as the fact that you want sterling—heavy solid sterling and nothing less. Such as the fact that you want uncompromising good taste—such as the authoritative designs of Lunt. Then it's simply a matter of which. And here you let your heart decide. Look at the designs above. Doesn't one pattern almost immediately seem to be you, to express your own idea of taste. That's it. It's not only your wisest choice...it's a solid investment that will grow even lovelier through the years, that will repay you in pride each day it is used, that will last to be a joy for your heirs one day to own.

Dishwasher giving you spots? Look!

WATER DROPS—See what happens when even clean water is sprayed on dishes. Drops like these dry into ugly spots and streaks.

CASCADE—Because of Cascade's "sheeting action," drops don't form. Cascade with Chlorosheen does it—and only Cascade has Chlorosheen!

Cascade's amazing "sheeting action" eliminates drops that spot!

Nothing beats Cascade at getting dishes clean. Cascade's remarkable "sheeting action" even eliminates the drops that cause ugly spots. Water ripples right off in clear-rinsing sheets. Dishes, glassware and silver come from your dishwasher as spotless and sparkling as possible, all ready for the fanciest table without the need for towel touch-ups.

And Cascade is rated safe for china patterns. The makers of Castleton, Flintridge, Franciscan, Lenox and Syracuse china—through the American Fine China Guild—have verified Cascade's unsurpassed safety to delicate patterns.

What's more, every leading dishwasher manufacturer recommends Cascade. So do women everywhere. They've made it America's favorite dishwasher detergent by far!

Give your dishwasher the best—Cascade—it's got "sheeting action"

If you mean Kirsch, say Kirsch. Otherwise heaven only knows what you'll get.

I went into a store the other day and told the man I wanted Kirsch drapery hardware and he said, "We don't carry that line, but this one is just as good." Well, I believe in keeping an open mind so I said, "Fine. Do they make 1123 different items to cover every window situation you can think of?" And he said, "Maybe not 1123, but . . ." And I said, "Do they have rods to go with modern and provincial and traditional and casual and oriental decors?" And he said, "For goodness sakes, lady." And I said "One other thing. The Kirsch people say their rods are guaranteed longer than anybody's." And he said, "Look, what's a couple years one way or the other?" And I said, "Well, thanks anyway." And he said, "Where did you learn all that stuff?" So I explained that I sent Kirsch 25¢ for their book "Guide to Window Beauty" and asked him if he'd like to have the address. But he said, "No." So if you want Kirsch, ask for it by name. Firmly. Otherwise heaven only knows what you'll get.

Build year-round comfort into your new home with Thermopane insulating glass in every opening. Come summer, you'll have better air conditioning and lower bills. Come winter, your home will be toasty-warm even near large window areas, and your fuel bills will be reduced. And, of course, you won't need storm windows, so you can forget the chores that go with them.

Your builder will be happy to install Thermopane. He can conveniently include the cost in your mortgage where it will add very little to your monthly payments. Later, if you should decide to sell your home, Thermopane insulating glass will add considerably to its appeal and its resale value.

To get more details on Thermopane and its use in all kinds of windows, send 10¢ for our booklet. Write to L·O·F, 32103 Libbey·Owens·Ford Building, Toledo 2, Ohio.

Two types of Thermopane insulating glass are available: the GlasSeal® edge shown here, and the Bondermetic Seal® which is recommended for larger glazed areas. Both types have clean, dehydrated air sealed between the panes. For your protection, the famous Thermopane name is etched on the glass.

L·O·F GLASS

THE QUALITY MARK TO LOOK FOR

When you build or buy... look for Thermopane

It's a sign of extra comfort and extra value in your home. Be sure to get the heat saving and convenience of having Thermopane insulating glass in every window.

Thermopane is available from L·O·F glass distributors and dealers. It is also used by manufacturers of all types of quality windows, as well as sliding glass doors.

For the names of glass or window distributors or dealers in your community, see the yellow pages of your telephone book.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

The Pettigrew's daughter has chosen a most graceful pattern for her "Sunday best" china I noted with delight when I went to the jeweler's to pick out her wedding present. It is Royal Worcester's Bacchanal, a vine and grape design encircling a fluted edge banded in gold. The almost translucent white of the bone china makes a perfect foil for the richly variegated green leaves and the reddish-purple fruit. The fluted cups and saucers are particularly elegant. In addition to ordering a dozen salad plates for her, I almost have a mind to add a plum-colored tablecloth I saw; the combination would be so right.

Wedding china sure to be heirloom

It's a good idea to keep a mental list of emergency centerpieces that you can create on those occasions when you are hostess at a surprise party (a surprise to you, that is, when you have nothing planned). Votive lights, or those little squatty candles for food warmers, are amazingly festive placed in muffin tins and adorned with bits of greens and short-stemmed flowers. One candelabrum, placed on a silver salver and set dead center on the dining table, can produce an elegant effect. No need for flowers—the flames reflected in the polished silver create enough drama.

Fruits and/or vegetables can always be counted on: I once made a spur-of-the-moment centerpiece of rosy Astrachan apples piled high in a glass bowl, with feathery spikes of pink cleome tucked among them. And a friend of ours whose salads are works of art frequently has them occupy the place of honor in the middle of the table. Even though they do get eaten up, the initial effect is attractive.

Speaking of centerpieces, the most pleasing I've seen of late was dreamed up by a neighbor of ours, who combined marigolds in all colors—from pale yellow through orange to mahogany—with red and yellow cherry tomatoes and very small, young green peppers. She placed them all in a marvelous old copper milk pan, with crushed Styrofoam in which to anchor the flowers. The vegetables were speared on green toothpicks and arranged among the blossoms. The effect of all this color was really dazzling.

There are food warmers and food warmers: some pretty to look at but not too practical, some so functional they had best stay in the kitchen. But Beth Halleck picked up a Swiss import at Georg Jensen that's got everything. Made mostly of wrought iron, this warmer has two copper-clad spirit lamps that can be moved into five positions on the curvilinear frame under the grill, to heat both ends against the middle, or vice versa. It's the right height, too—low enough for easy serving, but high enough for safe heating. The wicks need never be replaced; a box of matches and an occasional shot of fuel is all the care it needs to keep it functioning.

Food warmer, steady and ample

The Summertime of Spode

Spode is color. As a sun-filled garden is color. Spode is Bone China. (See the beauty of a hand-painted rose against its stark whiteness!) Spode is Fine Earthenware—fine-grained, tough-bodied, hard-glazed. Spode is also the unadorned beauty of shape alone — scalloped, fluted, embossed. It is always correct — whatever the time of day, kind of occasion, style of serving. Don't wait to inherit Spode. Of the hundred or so patterns readily available, there is one just for you. Now, at the best store you know. Write for the colorful Spode Booklet 37.

WHOLESALE DISTRIBUTORS/COPELAND & THOMPSON, INC. ☐ 206 FIFTH AVENUE ☐ NEW YORK 10, N.Y.

George and Emily Wilkins are celebrating their twenty-fourth wedding anniversary and have invited their friends to come to a big buffet supper. We have risen to the occasion by planning the most original gifts we could think of to give them. Since the last thing George and Emily need is silver, we put our heads together and came up with a list of presents to last throughout their whole anniversary year. Their young son-in-law, for example, made a deal with a local garage to treat George's car to a wash every two weeks, rain or shine. The Laphams ordered a bottle of vintage wine to be delivered the first week of every month. Another couple arranged to have the local gourmet pantry service keep them supplied, at decent intervals, with home-made fancy frozen foods. We made plans with the local florist to send Emily Wilkins cut flowers monthly. The Smallwoods are arranging for a year's subscription to a very fine art magazine for Emily, and the Manchester Guardian for George.

Other friends have thought of four seasons' worth of bulbs—some to go in the garden, some to be grown in the house—all to give year-round pleasure; a Care package to be sent out in their name several times during the year to the country of their choice. We're all immensely pleased with ourselves and can't wait for the party to present all these gifts to George and Emily.

Tina Ryan told me the other day that when Tim's professional fraternity meets at their house next month, she's going to decorate the buffet table with a really unusual centerpiece. Tim is an aficionado of old ship models, and in an antique shop Tina came across a real gem of a four-masted schooner. She's getting it all fixed up and will set it on the table magnificently afloat in a sea of crushed green slag. After the dinner, Tim can have it to keep in his study or even take to his office.

Irene Camp had often said that what she always wanted for her dining room was a chandelier over the table. But the wiring problems in her 100-year-old house made this out of the question, at least for an electrified chandelier. The other night when we were at the Camps' for a dinner party, however, I observed that Irene had hit on the solution. Suspended from the low ceiling was a small wrought-iron candelabrum, painted white and holding eight lighted white tapers—perfect! The center rod can be removed, she told me, when she wants to set the candelabrum on the table or sideboard instead of hanging it. She got it at our local gift store; it's made by Victrylite Candle Company of Oshkosh, Wis.

Graceful candelabrum-chandelier

There are times when the cocktail hour before a dinner party calls for truly hearty hors d'oeuvres. If guests are coming after tennis or golf, or if dinner will be served fairly late, most people appreciate something more substantial than canapés or tidbits to nibble on. A friend of ours pleases everybody—and simplifies things for herself—by serving the first course of the dinner with the pre-dinner cocktails. At her last party this was coquilles St. Jacques; other favorites of hers are patty shells filled with mushrooms or hot crab meat on toast. All are delicious with drinks and, as many a grateful guest will testify, take the edge off a ravenous appetite.

A male friend of ours who loves to entertain informally has a most original way of serving steamed clams. I couldn't believe it until I saw it, but the setup he uses is a truly gigantic white coffee cup and saucer. The clam broth, steaming hot, goes into the cup, of course, and the bivalves are piled around it on the huge saucer. George introduced us to this zany notion at a recent party he gave, where he offered the clams before the main course. There were matching but regular-sized cups and saucers set out for each guest, and we helped ourselves from the big container to the small. I believe that the giant cup was originally designed by Langbein Originals to serve coffee ice cream. Could be, but I like George's idea even better.

Carriage Trade

Would you like to go to sleep watching the firelight fade? This is the spell "Carriage Trade" can weave — even without the fireplace. For each piece is deftly finished to wear the look of a loved antique. Selected pieces in Celadon Green and Black (like the Franklin Stove table by the chair).

We are Incorrigible Moderns

We have been since 1824. And our eyes are still focused on the future. We see a suspension span or a swept wing and reclaim this purity for sterling. The silver must be as beautiful as its inspiration. Every new pattern, each oyster fork or knife we craft is subject to ruthless scrutiny. Is the balance superb? Are its eating manners impeccable? Could it dine with ancestral china? Forever we shall keep our stubborn stand. To give you sterling of the very finest. Reed & Barton lives as long as we believe love should. And we are awfully unmodern about that.

Why do we put seven coats on every piece of Village Square?

Because when we start a job, we finish it. And the finish on Village Square by Williams, is built up of coat upon coat upon coat of satin-smooth, baked-on beauty! Each coat is rubbed down to create that soft-glowing luster you can't help stroking. Like the finest antique—and you'll be just as proud of it. Village Square is built from a perfectly blended assortment of fine hardwoods and veneers. It carries the official certification of the Fine Hardwoods Association. Every piece is designed—with a Colonial accent—by Charles Horton. Visit the fine department or furniture store which features Village Square. Williams Furniture Corporation, Sumter, S. C.

Going places, finding things in New York State

Preserved in its restorations and museums are the houses, furnishings and decorations of an intensely individual period in American History

By Mary Roche

EDITOR'S NOTE: H&G's managing editor, Mary Roche, is a dedicated house-watcher even from the driver's seat of a car. With the zeal of a busman on holiday, she purposely followed on this trip the westward route of the post-Revolutionary pioneers the better to see the houses built by those who settled along the way.

The well-publicized claim that New York State has everything is no idle boast. Where else can you find within one state's boundaries: cosmopolitan cities and isolated villages; huge industries and one-man craft shops; forests and vineyards and thriving farms; beaches, lakes, mountains—and more different kinds of museums than you ever knew existed?

New York is a big state—even if you discount parts of it that appear on the map. For it does not, according to dyed-in-the-wool upstaters, include New York City. (Every now and then Manhattan politicos start a movement to secede from the state, but upstaters show so little concern that the campaign collapses, for lack of opposition.) Nor does New York, in the mind of the upstater, include Long Island. To him, that land of The Railroad, the ducks and the sandy beaches might just as well be part of the state of Florida.

Apart from those two outlands, the state is comprised of four loosely defined geographical regions that differ markedly in scenery, economy and atmosphere. Three of them are the mellow, historic Hudson Valley-Catskill area in the southeast; the wild invigorating Adirondacks to the north of it; and the remote (to Manhattanites) land of the St. Lawrence in the northwest. The fourth region is the big broad belt across the middle of the state which is sometimes divided again into the northern Mohawk Valley and the counties known as "the southern tier." It is this middle belt that most people are thinking about when they say "Upstate New York." And this is the country I decided to revisit last summer when a few days of driving looked like a nice antidote to Manhattan air conditioning.

I had never had time before to enjoy in detail New York's handsome Greek Revival houses. I had never been to Cooperstown. I wanted to go back to the Shaker Museum at Old Chatham. And since I don't like to drive fast and do like to see things, I was determined to shun the New York Thruway. (The term "shunpiker," I

Even if you can't read music— in only 15 minutes you can play "Brahm's Lullaby" & render "My Bonnie" & sing along with "Home on the Range" & swing "Swanee River" & strike up "Skater's Waltz" & perform "Auld Lang Syne" & light up your life all with the Thomas organ & Color-Glo keyboard.

Light up your life: light up the Thomas. Just press a button. The top keyboard lights up to show you the melody notes to play. And the lower keyboard glows in color to help you play chord harmony. You don't need to know how to read music. Just follow the colors. We call this exclusive new feature Color-Glo. (What a colorful way to learn to play the organ!) Try it. You'll see how easy it is. And you'll see what fun it is to have a Thomas in your family. There's a complete line of Thomas organs starting at $469.95. (And even our lowest priced models have luxury organ features like Repeat Percussion.) Each comes with a five year warranty on transistor tone generator boards — the heart of the Thomas. (Replacement upon prepaid return of undamaged board.) Free illustrated brochure is yours for the asking. Write Thomas Organ Company, 8352 Hayvenhurst Avenue, Sepulveda, California.

discovered, is indigenous to New York State: Travelers who resented the toll charged by the private companies that built the earliest roads west by-passed these turnpikes in favor of their own routes or "shunpikes.")

High Colonial elegance

It seemed appropriate to start from Albany since that city is not only the capital of the state but the unofficial gateway to *up*state. So I flew there one evening from New York City and picked up a car. My first stop next morning was Albany's Schuyler Mansion, one of some twenty restorations throughout the state that are administered by the State Education Department. You might not even notice the Schuyler Mansion if you were driving by, for it sits high above the street on a steep knoll (Albany is almost as hilly as San Francisco), and you have to climb two or three flights of stone steps just to reach the front lawn. Built in 1762 of red brick with white trim, the house has a double-hipped gambrel roof edged with a delicate Chippendale railing. But its Georgian classicism is somewhat denatured by an octagonal vestibule added in the nineteenth century.

Once you are inside, however, the vestibule seems a charming prelude to the broad and lofty entrance hall. This is a house that impressed some of its earliest visitors as one of extraordinary elegance, and it is hard to think of any house, old or new, that could surpass its elegance today. Beautifully restored, beautifully kept up, its rooms seem even more interesting for the way they are actually furnished and decorated at the moment than for the stories of what went on in them two hundred years ago.

The drawing room with its handsomely paneled fireplace wall and scrolled over-mantel is graced with an astonishing complement of furniture: two Hepplewhite sofas and eleven shield-back chairs, all matching, all upholstered in pale blue-gray silk. General Schuyler's daughter, Elizabeth, was unquestionably a lucky young woman to have had this room as a setting for her wedding to Alexander Hamilton. And her mother was equally blessed to have as beautiful a room to entertain in as the hospitably proportioned dining room with its sunny yellow walls and white moldings. Every piece of furniture in the house is worth a long look. I was puzzled by the un-Colonial flavor of an elaborate bombé vitrine in the upstairs hall until I learned it was a seventeenth-century Dutch piece and remembered that the Schuyler family had originally emigrated from Holland.

N.Y. STATE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

In the drawing room of Albany's Schuyler Mansion, the wainscot, ceiling cornice and elegantly paneled fireplace wall are painted a soft Colonial blue. The silk upholstery and curtains are a light gray-blue, the Oriental rug a mellow rose.

Common sense esthetics

From Albany I headed east across the Hudson to Old Chatham, by-passing Fort Crailo, in Rensselaer, where I could have browsed through rooms furnished in the earlier manner of the Dutch patroons. But I was hoarding time to spend at the Shaker Museum.

Old Chatham is in the western foothills of the Berkshires. As you drive along Shaker Museum Road past the well-manicured Masterpiece, a new sterling pattern.

For the baroque richness of International's new Masterpiece, our designer went to France. And came back with an idea inspired by the flowers in the gardens of Versailles and by the splendor of its palace.

International fashioned bowls and tines and blades to complete this idea. Then found a way to make this new pattern easy for you to own.

The Bride's Set unit.

The Bride's Set saves you $65.

It brings you the new Masterpiece pattern in a 44-piece service for eight.

That includes 16 teaspoons, 8 place forks, 8 place knives, 8 salad forks, 1 sugar spoon, 1 butter knife, 1 regular tablespoon, and 1 pierced tablespoon.

All in a solid walnut drawer chest.

It would cost you $451 in open stock. It's only $386 in the Bride's Set. What an elegant way to save $65.

farms and hunt stables, you might easily think you were already in Massachusetts. Set on a high rise of ground surrounded by well-kept white-fenced fields is a cluster of red buildings that look like glorified barns. That is the museum.

The collections have grown enormously in the past ten years, especially the furniture. Seeing so much of it at once, I marveled all over again at the delicacy and refinement achieved by those dedicated craftsmen who shunned all conscious attempt to produce beauty for its own sake. In the entrance hall is a large two-door free-standing cupboard as elegant as any Directoire armoire I have ever laid eyes on. And I came across more and more evidence of the famous Shaker ingenuity: lightweight slat-back chairs with a subtle backward list to make them more comfortable; dining chairs with very low backs so you could slide them under the table between meals. I had never seen nor hoped to see a combination rocking chair-wheel chair. But the Shakers made one—and a very pretty piece of furniture it is.

FROHMAN

In the "Sisters' Sitting Room" at the Shaker Museum in Old Chatham: a sensibly shallow cupboard, a rocker with drawers under the seat for sewing materials.

In the Museum shop you can buy such things as Shaker-made jellies and aprons—the work of a few Shaker sisters still left in the communities at Canterbury, N. H., and Sabbathday Lake, Me. You can also pick up a list of antique shops in the area with a map showing where they are.

I left Old Chatham determined to find the town of Rensselaerville which is quite a feat to find, even on the map. Presumably, if you take Route 85 out of Albany and cling to it doggedly through all its twists and turns, you will eventually get to Rensselaerville some twenty-five miles to the southwest. But Old Chatham is about the same distance southeast, and the Hudson lies between. So I picked out a crow's route and an hour or so later was as surprised by the town itself as I was to find myself there. For after driving several miles over a lightly traveled road through woods and farmland, with houses few and far between, you hardly expect to dead-end in a tree-shaded street lined with handsome post-Colonial houses, each distinctly individual, each looking as if it were maintained by the National Trust. These are no restorations, however. They are very much lived in. I felt almost rude driving up and down the street (it's only three blocks long) at ten miles an hour with my head poked out the car window to take in the beauty of every house.

Shunpiker's reward

You leave Rensselaerville just as abruptly as you arrive and you have to drive quite a way before you come to as much as a four-corners. The road to Middleburgh was closed ("freshly oiled" the sign said) so I continued on toward Livingstonville and five minutes later sang a loud hallelujah to the state highway department. For after climbing a long steep and winding hill, I had come out on a ridge, suddenly facing a breathtaking panoramic view of the northern Catskills.

It was almost 10:00 when I reached the Hotel Otesaga in Cooperstown, and I was very happy to flop on a chaise in an enormous bedroom overlooking Lake Otsego (James Fenimore Cooper's "Glimmerglass") and gather strength to go to bed. But energy had returned by next morning when I breakfasted among the golfers in the big sunny high-ceilinged dining room.

Although the Otesaga was built in the grand resort-hotel style of the Edwardian-Taft era, the dining room has the earlier neo-classical flavor that pervades so many upstate buildings: clear yellow walls, white pilasters and cornices, tall windows with simple frames extended at the top. I admired the extreme simplicity of the window hangings—single lengths of plain white cotton trimmed with ball fringe. They were swagged across the tops of the windows and gathered up at the corners so that the folds fell to a graceful point, about halfway down the upper sash.

Of New York State's horde of museums, Cooperstown has five.

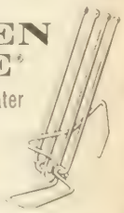
2 Shortcuts for Making Draperies



1. BESTPLEAT®

Just sew this Conso tape to the top of your fabric. Its evenly-spaced, non-rip, woven-in pockets eliminate complicated measuring and sewing.

2. GOLDEN NIP-TITE®

Then slip this Conso pleater hook into the Bestpleat pockets to form pleats; the exclusive middle arm holds pleats evenly—prevents slipping.

PRESTO! This "perfect marriage" of Nip-Tite and Bestpleat gives your draperies a professional, custom look. Important—Bestpleat pleater tapes are preshrunk. Golden Nip-Tite hooks are easily removed for washing or cleaning—their golden finish is your sign of quality.

IDEAS!

If you're looking for decorating ideas, get the new 20th Edition of "1,001 Decorating Ideas™" where drapery fabrics are sold or send 50c in coin to Conso, Dept. HG-8, P. O. Box 325 N. Y. 10, N. Y.

Since time was limited, I decided to skip the Indian Museum, the Woodland Museum and the National Baseball Hall of Fame in favor of Fenimore House and the Farmers' Museum, both of which are operated by the New York State Historical Association.

Folk art and furniture

Fenimore House, the former home of Edward Severin Clark, has a notably relaxed and notably un-museumlike atmosphere, enhanced by the presence of a great part of Mr. Clark's beautiful furniture. In the basement is the famous American folk art collection and on the first floor, a comprehensive collection of American landscape paintings, largely of the romantic Hudson River school. But fascinating as these were I was even more enchanted by the folk portraits of children, in a small room on the second floor. There you could spend hours wondering whose idea it was to paint a little girl dangling one red shoe by its laces while the foot it was supposed to cover was bare. Or imagining how much cajoling it had taken to get a strong-jawed young man named (by the museum staff) Butch to pose in a demure A-line dress with flounced collar and slim pantaloons.

In another room on the second floor is a spectacular set of parlor furniture by Belter, the New York City cabinetmaker whose elaborately carved designs were so popular just before the Civil War. The eleven matching pieces include sofas, chairs, tables and two abbreviated chaises or "single-end sofas," just long enough to accommodate a lady sitting in a mid-Victorian modification of the Madame Récamier pose. One of the chairs, I was delighted to discover, was chipped at the top of the back, offering a chance to see at first hand how Belter built up his wood in layers, plywood fashion, before carving it.

Decorative fakery

The Farmers' Museum, across the road from Fenimore House, is a place to linger for a whole day or to walk through briskly, absorbing what you see by a kind of rapid-reading technique. I chose the latter method but slowed down long enough in Bump Tavern—the largest of the buildings that make up the "Village Crossroads"—to examine some of the humbler decorating techniques of the early 1800's: the solid black and green "tiles" painted on the floor of the hall; the scenic patterns painted on the window shades of the ladies' parlor and the "rug" painted on the floor: the stenciled wall decoration in one of the bedrooms.

Covered wagon trail

After lunch I drove back north to Richfield Springs where I picked up U.S. Route 20, a highway that spans the state from the Massachusetts border to Buffalo. When the great trek westward began after the Revolution, the pioneers with their covered wagons and oxcarts opened up two series of trails long used by the Indians. One was the northern Mohawk Valley route, later paralleled by the Erie Canal and later still by the New York Thruway. The other way west was the Cherry Valley route or "Great Western Turnpike" that cut through country famous for its Indian raids and massacres during the Revolution. Today this is Route 20, and to shunpikers less eager to make time than to enjoy autumn foliage, panoramic views and pleasant villages, this historic highway offers notable advantages. For one thing, there are no cities between Albany

IT LEVEL designs. As warm air rises to upper ls, cooler air moves to lower rooms. This can cause omfortable heating or cooling problems.

ROOMS OVER UNHEATED AREAS, such as a garage or excavation, make the floors and walls cold, can make the room too cold to be used.

LARGE GLASS AREAS alter inside temperature each time sun, wind or outside temperature changes. Even true of double-paned windows.

READOUT FLOOR PLAN. The effects of sun, de and wind in different areas of the home can se widely different heating or cooling requirements.

FINISHED BASEMENT. Because it is partially below ground level, the temperature needs in a basement are far different from the rest of the house.

SEPARATE LIVING AND SLEEPING AREAS require different temperatures—warm and relaxing in the living area—cool and comfortable for sleeping.

How you can prevent these heating or cooling problems in your new home

(or correct them in your existing home)

What good is the world's most expensive home if it isn't comfortable to live in?

One of the best investments you can make in your new home or your present one is to take a little time and spend a little extra on insuring your comfort—with adequate heating or cooling.

This means Zone Control—dividing your home into two or more areas that you can keep at different temperatures to suit your family's needs.

Zoning is simple! In a forced air system, for example, all you need are a separate thermostat for each zone along with a damper and damper motor to control the air distribution. In hot water systems, you need thermostats and zone valves to control hot water flow. In some cases, two small furnaces or boilers are used. Installations are made quickly and easily.

How you can zone your home. The first step is to decide how you want to divide your home, by zones. Then call your heating or plumbing contractor. Be sure he understands you want to zone and where. He can design a system that will assure you the comfort you need and deserve.

In a new home, he'll lay out a piping or duct system for each zone. If he can do this at the planning stage, you can have Zone Control for very little extra cost. In your present home, it may be as simple as adding a thermostat with its associated controls.

For more information on Zone Control, write for free literature. And, now available to help you in your planning, an informative 48 page booklet "How to get the most out of your heating and cooling dollar"—50¢ postage paid. Write Honeywell, Dept. HG10-49, Minneapolis 8, Minnesota

THE HOBBY YOU CAN ENJOY

ALL ALONE

OR ALL TOGETHER

Music is the mood-matching hobby. Feel quiet and reflective? Feel "lost," uncertain, troubled? Then sit alone at the Conn Organ and let your fingers wander idly over the wondrous keys. What a source of relaxation and consolation and inspiration! But when you feel a surge of happiness and wish to share it—then gather the clan around the Conn and strike up a gay tune. Soon your home will be filled with music and song and warmth and affection. And the whole neighborhood will take on a brighter glow!

We repeat—all alone...or all together...you and your family can work wonders with a Conn. And it's so very easy. You see, Conn has developed a remarkable new learning method called "Instant Music." If you know your alphabet from "A" to "G," you can play any one of 39 familiar songs in a matter of minutes!

Not only that, but you play with both keyboards, with various instrumental effects, and with the foot pedals, too. You play, in fact, just the way a professional organist does—naturally, with true human expression.

That's because the Conn is created by music men, not gadgeteers. It has no gimmicks, no pushbuttons, no one-finger chord makers. It is, instead, a professional-quality home instrument of great tonal versatility and musical potential...created by C.G. Conn, Ltd., world's largest manufacturer of band instruments.

Your Conn Organ dealer can arrange easy terms on any of seven beautifully-crafted models. Prices start at $995—a modest figure for a lifetime of family enjoyment. *For your copy of our helpful free booklet "How To Choose An Organ," plus a free LP record "Caprice Capers," just write to Dept. and Auburn, and only Geneva between there and Buffalo. And since it is for the most part a two-lane highway with long stretches where passing is prohibited, traffic is gloriously light. I also noticed a sparsity of long-haul trucks and trailers, though I didn't fully appreciate the reason until later in the afternoon.

Land of milk and honey

Much of the region between Richfield Springs and Cazenovia is dairy country. The landscape is dotted with red barns and silvery silos, and the roadside with "Cow Crossing" signs. No run-down roadside shanties depress the atmosphere of thriving prosperity, Upstate symbols: the hipped-roof barn and the silvery silo.

but occasionally you come to a derelict house, almost always set on the brow of a hill, almost always a substantial Victorian type that must have been built in some family's heyday. You wonder why, in a land of apparent plenty, this particular homestead should have fallen into decay. Was it a personal tragedy? A family quarrel? A young man's impatience to get to the big city?

At Cazenovia I parked the car, rambled through the parlors of the Lincklaen House—a hotel built in 1925 of yellow brick with stone side porches—and browsed for a bit in the town's only antique shop. But once on the way again, the leisurely mood of the early afternoon quickly evaporated.

Automotive acrobatics

Barely a mile west of Cazenovia, the road starts to drop straight downhill and continues downward steadily for more than a mile. Long before I got to the bottom I knew there would be no respite there, for I could see the road ahead climbing straight up again. Belatedly I remembered reading about a giant 32-mile roller coaster and knew I was on it for better or for worse. I was just getting used to the idea—going down the second hill, pushing the speed limit—when I glanced in the mirror and saw a big red monster riding the tail of the station wagon. When I got to the brief level stretch at the foot of the hill, I gave him anguished signals to pass me. He did—it was an empty carrier bound for Detroit—but with obvious reluctance. I understood why, when I was forced to pass him halfway up the next hill. Once over the brow, there he was on my tail again, clearly having a wonderful time. For the next ten minutes (or was it sixty?), he chased me gleefully as I flew up and down the hills (all posted "Trucks use second gear").

Finally I collected my wits to plot an escape. Only going uphill could I get far enough ahead of him to risk slowing down, so as soon as I reached the next peak I looked for a big broad shoulder, found one, and pulled off the road. When my tormentor went lumbering by, I took a good look at him. Fixed high up on the rear of his creaking trailer was a sign: "Stop tailgateing."

I sat there for twenty minutes. After that I was able to take the roller coaster in my stride. I would not care to drive it in slippery

How to buy an organ

In the final analysis, and whatever the price tag, it is an organ's sound alone—and your reaction to it—that makes the instrument a possession to delight in.

Generally speaking, there are two basic kinds of organist, and there are two kinds of organ to buy. If you are a casually trained performer who never got much beyond, say, "The Jolly Farmer," you are organist number one. If you are a fairly accomplished pianist who has studied the pipe organ and become completely enamored of the instrument, you are organist number two. The difference between the performers and their needs is obvious. Not that there is anything look-down-the-noseable about "Jolly Farmer" organists—they have a very good time. But unless you plan to study the organ seriously and work your way up to plateau number two, you will be quite happy with a not-too-elaborate instrument at (to speak with a grain of euphemism) a not-too-elaborate price. There is no point in spending $10,000 on an organ unless you can not only afford it but can toss off the Great Fugue, con brio.

Way down at the bottom of the scale, of course, is the performer who isn't a performer at all, but just a happy soul who can pick out a tune and wants something to pick it out on. For him or her there is a little electric organ with 27 keys and an automatic chord player that a bright child can learn to play in no time. So why not a bright adult? Weighing only 33 pounds, the organ packs into a carrying case, is easily totable, and costs a mere $30. Not a serious investment, it is not a serious instrument, but it is fun. It sounds like a nice loud harmonica.

From this point on, things take a serious turn—well-marked by dollar signs. There are no bargains in good organs: you pay for every nuance built into the instrument. By way of consolation, it will help you to remember that not even E. Power Biggs can get any more out of an organ (although he can make you think so) than the builder put into it.

With this thought in mind and checkbook in hand, you set out on a round of organ shopping. Unless you are blessed with definite expertise in the field, you will profit by taking with you an old hand at the game. Organ salesmen are equipped with a winning jargon that is most impressive—so get yourself an interpreter.

The type of organ most favored in the home today is the "spinet," a small, scaled-down electronic instrument with, as a rule, 44-note keyboards and 13 pedal notes—sometimes less. These are very pleasant performers and run a price gamut from around $1,000 to a little less than $2,000. But if you are dedicated to classical organ music, remember that it can only be played with the distinction it deserves on a full-sized concert-type organ with at least 25 pedals (32 are better) and 61 keys per manual. The cost of an instrument of this caliber starts at around $3,000 and sails right up to $12,000 with glissando ease.

In any event, classicist or cool cat, it does no harm to try to understand just a little of the labyrinthine mechanics of an organ. If you have studied, you will know that the Great Manual is the lower keyboard and the Swell Manual, the upper. The pedals—which produce the deep tones used for bass parts—consist of a fan of 32 (or less) wooden "keys" played with the feet. Stops are the controls for choosing voices, and couplers are devices which enable stops ordinarily associated with one manual to be used at pitch registers other than their normal ones—on the same manual or the pedals. Couplers are important in a small organ because they go a long way toward approximating the rich and complex sound of wide pitch which, on a large pipe organ, is gained only by playing many ranks of pipes at one time. But far, far more important than knowing the difference between a coupler and a rank of pipes is how the organ sounds. Like pianos or violins, organs have wide variance in personality, and until you find one that is dulcet to your ear, keep your money in your pocket. You will never be happy with a wrong-for-you (although perhaps quite right for someone else) instrument. There are certain tests you can make which will help you. First, if you can play at all:

- Try a fast passage. Is the response sluggish—which it shouldn't be, or trip-hammer quick—which it should be?
- Play a forte legato passage. Do you note any sounds of popping (bad), or are the keys quiet?
- Run a loud staccato scale. If there is a definite hiccup (unfortunately, that is what it sounds like) at the start of each note, the organ is at fault.
- Now pull out all the stops and play the house down. Is the sound rich and full of nuance, or strident and tinny? The inference is obvious.
- Try several voices simultaneously. Can you hear each of them distinctly? Or do they dissolve into one undistinguished blur? They should not.
- Next, sing a little with the organ. If it is difficult to get your pitch, the organ, harmonically, is poorly developed.
- Try something without the vibrato control (this, in an organ, is comparable to the pulsation of an accomplished violinist's fingers on a violin string). Is the sound, bereft of tremulousness, still pleasing? It should be—unless the room is acoustically dead.
- One at a time, try each stop. Do the flutes sound like flutes, the reeds like reeds, the strings like strings? The characteristic tonal differences should be absolute.
- Play two adjacent notes at the same time. Can you hear them both? If you can't, the organ is equipped with what is called a tone-sharing device. In plain talk, this means skimping. In fine electronic organs, each note of the scale has its own oscillator—a device that turns electrical vibrations into audible sound.
- Finally, play a scale over and over with the same setting of the swell shoe (the organ's equivalent of the piano's loud pedal), but with a change, each time, of stops and couplers. If the tone regulators for each note of the scale are properly adjusted, each note will have the same loudness or softness with no variation. If there is a discrepancy, something is askew.

If your prospective organ passes these tests to your satisfaction, and if the tone is your idea of aural enchantment, you are doing well. Just be certain—if you intend to play jazz (and jazz, if it is your meat, can be pretty spectacular on the organ), that you don't buy a classic type equipped with chimes, celeste and harp effects. They'll only gather dust. And if you intend to stick to Bach and Vivaldi, don't choose an organ equipped to reproduce the rattle of castanets and the twang of the banjo—the "Greats" did not write for these instruments. If your repertory is both classic and "pop," however, you can indulge it by buying an organ with the standard "celestial" stops, plus a separate attachment that will give you an astonishing series of effects ranging from a bagpipe to a zither. Or, if you like, there is an organ with a special pedal that reproduces the palm-tree-and-moonlight effect of Hawaiian guitars. Should this not be your dish, the same organ has an attachment that duplicates the brush and drum accompaniment of a combo. One can ask no more.

If you are buying an organ only for a lark and don't want to invest too heavily, you need not. There are plenty of instruments about (and plenty of salesmen to point out their charms) for as little as $275 that will make quite merry music. They will not, however, respond with any brilliance to the above tests and you have no right to ask them to. Any organ costing appreciably less than $900—give or take a little—is honestly and apparently not what organ manufacturers call a Cadillac: a top-flight instrument. Nevertheless, like a compact, such an organ can be pleasurable.

If you have progressed beyond the lark stage and want a really fine organ, then more power to you: you have a right to ask for the sky. Should you lack the guidance of an expert—and this means someone who understands both organs and you—you can avail yourself of the American Guild of Organists' Measurements of Standards by writing the Guild at 630 Fifth Avenue, New York City 22, and enclosing 25 cents with your plea for help. Armed with this rather formidable, but eminently trustworthy specification sheet, no harm can come to you. You may end up with a concert organ, but if it sings your tune, you will have found a friend for life.

Party Proof!

Party's over—first party since their brand new Selig furniture arrived. Now they can relax, without rushing to check for food stains or drink spills. No need to. The fabric was treated with "SCOTCHGARD" Brand Stain Repeller. It will keep that "just-bought" freshness, because spills —even oily ones—"sit" on the fabric till they blot them away. And even if a stain is forced into the fabric weave, it will spot-clean without leaving a ring. Incidentally, Selig offers hundreds of designs and fabrics that can be treated with "SCOTCHGARD" Repeller. Look into them—before your next party.

Choosing your mattress is more than a matter of taste

A mattress should be nice to look at. And ours is. Really though, the purpose of a mattress is to be on rather than seen. So the big consideration is construction and feel. Not all mattresses are made the same. That's why you should know about our Back Supporter model. It features the exclusive Karr Spring Unit, built with many kinds of coils, each with its own back-supporting function. We alternate left and right turn coils to counteract "leaning" when two people of different weights share a mattress. And our "Health Center" feature provides added support in the center of the mattress where 70% of your weight rests. The entire innerspring unit is heat-treated and lacquered after assembly, to give longer life, prevent rust, and eliminate noise. (P.S. When it comes to looks, you'll find our Candace cover to be in impeccably good taste.) All these features, and more, for only 79.50 (suggested retail price, foam rubber or innerspring, mattress or box spring, twin or full size; you can have the added luxury of Queen or King size at modest additional cost). See your Spring Air Dealer and let him show you that choosing your mattress is more than a matter of taste.

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

Driving back from the station yesterday morning, I noticed my favorite elm trees have become an arch of solid gold so brilliant I could almost feel the warmth of a midday sun although it wasn't even 8 o'clock. The trees are blazing and beautiful now and seem to be standing still—a quiet pause before they start to drop their leaves while the clear days slide into winter. It is colder; I find myself reaching into my pocket for my wool gloves. I see my neighbor Mr. Mitchell has moved a large section of his woodpile closer to his back door.

The people in our part of the world have their own way of celebrating the coming of autumn. Bright bunches of Indian corn are tied to the fences or gateposts of the farms along the country roads, or—in the little towns—are hung on the front doors, just below the knocker. Or you may see a willow letter basket filled with chrysanthemums. These are our vivid, silent notes of appreciation for the wonder of the changing seasons.

One housekeeping aid that is close to indispensable in this house is liquid cleaning wax. I keep finding more and more uses for it since it not only cleans all painted, enameled and other light finished surfaces, but it leaves a coating of wax that makes the area that much easier to clean next time. Recently, for instance, a small gremlin decorated the refrigerator door and some of the kitchen cabinets with crayon murals, so I got out the Johnson's Jubilee and was amazed all over again by its performance. Young Tommy borrowed it to clean the plastic upholstery in the station wagon and earned a dollar toward his new football. I've also discovered the stuff works wonders on such assorted items as pastel leather bedroom slippers, boxes I've covered with light-colored Contact, even the vellum spines of some of our old books.

Speaking of wax—a good hard paste wax is another pretty versatile staple to have on hand at all times. I use it for all sorts of things. A little wax rubbed along the edges of windows and drawers that stick makes them meek and co-operative. A few layers of hard paste wax rubbed into a porous or heavily embossed ashtray will speed up cleaning—you just dump the ashes and wipe the ashtray with a damp cloth. Tom even waxes the snow shovel in the winter—says it keeps the snow from sticking to it. Of course a thorough rubbing is necessary for good results with any paste wax.

Doing the laundry is no problem—it's the eternal collecting and the putting away afterward. For this my trusty machine is no help. However, we've initiated a new system which seems to work very well and certainly cuts down my mileage up and down the stairs. I got a laundry bag and a flat shallow vegetable basket for each member of the family and marked them with their names. Now each person takes his laundry in the bag down to the laundry room on an assigned day. Then as the laundry is folded and ironed, it is put in the proper basket to be collected by the owner on Thursday afternoon after the ironing has been finished for the week.

I'm sure everyone agrees that the hardest spot in the house to keep clean and neat is that little catch-all under the kitchen sink. Ours was a mess, but I think I've got it

This is the look of fine

An achievement of the same musical vision that creates the Baldwin Grand Piano, Baldwin-built organs offer you more profound satisfaction than others. So easy to play. Increasingly rewarding. Styled with a timeless grace equal to that of fine music itself, every cabinet is distinguished by its own special kind of elegance. Look—and listen. A Baldwin-built organ can be a source of lifetime joy for you in so many ways. Visit your Baldwin dealer for a personal demonstration.

tidied up once and for all. After throwing out everything that had collected in that place, I gave it a good scrubbing and airing. Then I lined the bottom with Rubbermaid Shelf-Kushion and installed a new 9½-inch wide Rubbermaid Roll-out Storage Drawer to hold the dishwashing supplies. This adds up to a 100 per cent improvement.

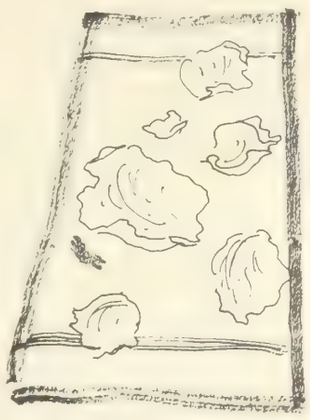
We hope that we've had our last birthday-party crisis. Children, of course, never remember until the eleventh hour that Susie's Halloween supper, for example, is also her birthday party. To avoid those frantic dashes downtown for presents and wrappings, we have installed a home gift center. The children were a great help in this project. They picked out some birthday cards (for all ages), pretty papers and ribbons, and each child selected four or five gifts for children of his or her own age and sex. Then, while we were at it, we added a few all-purpose gifts such as a box of fine soap, a small table-model thermometer, a pair of nice scissors in a red leather case and one of those self-charging flashlights.



The presents went into the top drawer of the unused chest in the utility room which I turned into a supply base. Next drawer holds the cards, scissors and a ball-point pen, magic tape and a box of ribbon bolts. The paper has a drawer to itself, and outside wrappings—including corrugated board—are stashed away in the biggest drawer at the bottom. We can use the top of the chest to wrap things on.

Tom and I went shopping Saturday for a heater for the guest bathroom, which is on the north side of the house. Our choice was an API radiant glass heater, a slim frosted glass rectangle about 15 by 21 inches, that's bound in brass and has a chrome safety grille over the glass. It's lightweight and soundless and has a thermostat control with ten settings. We were told that once it gets hot it draws very little current to maintain the required temperature. This little number should keep many a freshly bathed guest warm during the winters to come.

We always save our old worn bath towels to drain lettuce on. They are far more absorbent than dish towels. After the lettuce has been carefully washed, it is briskly shaken and spread out, leaf by leaf, on a clean towel. Then we cover it with another bath towel and roll it loosely for storage in the refrigerator. Lettuce washed this way is always crisp and perfectly dry.

One of our neighbors, an enterprising lady with many children and a bustling household, has found a way to cope with telephone calls when she is busy in the kitchen. She had the kitchen telephone equipped with an 18-foot cord (the curly kind that won't dangle) and a shoulder rest. Then, if the phone rings while she's cooking, she simply answers it and perches the phone on her shoulder so that both hands are free and she can still move back and forth across the kitchen.

"It's wonderful," she says. "I can let the cat out and the dog in and wash the lettuce for dinner while I'm giving my mother-in-law a progress report."

I found something much better than an old toothbrush to clean heavily engraved and embossed silver. It's the Goddard's Silver Brush, which looks like a toothbrush but is actually bigger and has thicker, softer bristles. You use it with any silver polish, and it works like a charm. You brush the polish in and out of all the little cracks, leaving them bright and clean.

At last—I finally got around to having some glass tops made for all the night tables in the house. It's something I've been trying to get at for ages, and now that it's done, I certainly wish I'd gotten busy sooner. The painted tables look more elegant under glass, and the fine wood tables are completely protected from scratches and mars or the rings a damp glass of water makes. I made paper patterns of each table and had the glazier cut them to fit from plate glass. The edges and corners have been beveled for complete safety.

WHAT'S NEW FOR LIVING

MODERN ART BUFFS will welcome a new pocket-size paperback art guide to Europe. The book confines itself to works produced after 1850, but lists 400 collections in twenty-seven countries. Even a small out-of-the-way country inn in the south of France which houses early paintings by Renoir, Modigliani and Matisse is included along with major museums in the 120-page "Guide to Modern Art in Europe." Each listing gives the address, telephone number, hours and admission fee, as well as a brief description of the collection. The guide, jointly published by the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West 53rd Street, New York, and Pan American World Airways, is distributed by these two sources and the Doubleday bookstores.

FOREIGN FOOD ENTHUSIASTS can occupy themselves with a new ten-part collection of recipes and menus from nine countries. Included are favorites from India, Italy, Greece, Spain, France, Germany, Japan, Israel and Sweden; the tenth volume suggests ways to form a dining club with friends who share your taste for international dishes, and tells festive ways to serve each meal. The booklets have colorful covers designed by Sister Mary Corita of Los Angeles. The complete set, $4 from Spice Islands Co., 505 Beach St., San Francisco 11, Calif.

WALNUT-PANELED ICEBOX: Destined to show up in many off-beat places in many a home is a full-sized refrigerator that looks like a piece of furniture—it's paneled in walnut on all sides, including the back. This nonutilitarian appearance makes it eligible as a freestanding room divider in just about any room. Called the Avanti, the new refrigerator has transparent smoked-glass sliding doors on the upper section and a fold-out salad board. There is a freezer in the lower section. By the Franklin Mfg. Div., Studebaker Co., 635 S. Main, South Bend, Ind.

LAMPS TO SPOTLIGHT PAINTINGS or hobby activities at your desk recently arrived here from Italy. All the lamps, whether floor or table models, are attached to rotation sockets so they can be focused in any direction you wish. Some are spheres mounted on brass stands—one is poised at mid-point on a 62-inch pole, for instance. Others are incased in metal cylinders or saucer shapes. Several could pass as slick sculptural decorations—a look we will see more of in the future. Black metal desk lamp, pictured above, $87.50 imported by Stiffel, 225 Fifth Ave., New York 10, N. Y.

FOR FIRESIDE AMBASSADORS: The first booklet of a series on entertaining foreign visitors has just come out, entitled "How to Cherish an Indian Guest." It offers suggestions on foods to serve, tactful conversation subjects, facets of American life that will interest a visitor from India. Written by Mollie and Russell Smart, it is available for 15 cents from the American Home Economics Association. In preparation are booklets on how to cherish Japanese and Israeli guests in your home. AHEA, 1600 Twentieth St., N.W., Washington 9, D.C.

REVOLVING BOOKCASES that permit you to set up your home library in the middle of a room might be the solution for book storage in a room with little space. The shelves are hung on brassplated floor-to-ceiling poles and revolve on ball bearings. You can choose round or square shelves in 18-, 20- and 24-inch sizes; you can select shelves finished in walnut, teak or mahogany or painted white, black or red. Freestanding models of these bookcases, with pedestal bases, are also available. Write Barney Feldman Interiors, 4356 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles 29, Calif.

SPACE-AGE DECORATING is well represented by the airways ticket office of the new Pan American Building in New York. The circular island ticket counters are about as compact as you can get. Everything required for ticketing—schedule books, telephones, typewriters, even seats for the agents—are built into a network of drawers within each counter, leaving the countertop clear. (Prophetic design for a home work center?) The nearby travel-planning lounge for people working out itineraries is furnished with round marble-top tables, next to which are travel folders in circular files that turn lazy-Susan style to bring all brochures within easy reach. Presumably this streamlined emporium of the jet era can quickly handle 300 travel-minded people on their lunch hours. Direct inquiries to Pan American World Airways, Pan-Am Building, New York 17.

Florentine Filigree Light Ball

☐ Got a bare, glaring bulb in house, porch, basement rec room or in the office? Turn it into a handsome light fixture with practically no expense! This beautiful filigree plastic light ball is in the feather baroque pattern. Ball is 8" in diameter, has a white insert that makes any bulb glow pleasingly. Screw the bulb into the ball, the ball into the socket — it's installed!

9434-6—Filigree Light Ball . $2.49

Citrus Fruit Peeler

☐ Here's a simple little gadget that lets you become a wizard in the art of fruit peeling. Start the rind by cutting a circle around the top with the cutter in the middle. Then, simply insert the wire loop into the fruit and run it around — the rind drops off and the procedure takes considerably less time than it took you to read about it! Now oranges and grapefruit for salads, lemon rinds for drinks are easily pared!

7376-6 — Citrus Peeler . . . . . 79¢

Filter Fry Pan Covers

☐ Fry the modern way — without grease spattering stove and walls, yet with foods thoroughly browned! Our new Filter Fry Pan Cover is made of sturdy aluminum mesh that traps spattering fat and allows steam to escape. When the cooking is done, dunk it into hot suds and every bit of grease vanishes. Two sizes — 11½" to fit 10" skillets or 9½" to fit 8" skillets. Kitchen walls stay cleaner!

If your child is a poor reader
—see how phonics can help him

Now your child can learn to read better in just a few weeks—with records that teach him by the phonics method at home. For complete information about The Sound Way to Easy Reading—and our money back guarantee—mail coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. H. M. Kilpatrick of Reno, Nevada writes: "After six weeks of work with The Sound Way to Easy Reading, my son improved not only in reading and spelling but in all of his lessons because he could read with understanding. He is in fourth grade but could only read at the second grade level. In just six weeks he advanced the two years."

Mrs. Kilpatrick is only one of over 50,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way to Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And over 3,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

Don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Send for full information. No salesman will call. Mail this coupon now!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

PARENTS DELIGHTED

Better marks—"Bobby has used the records for only three weeks, yet his reading and spelling grades have gone from Ds to C-plus and B. Now his teacher has borrowed the course to help other children." Mrs. W. H. Gregory, Calif.

Advanced two grades—"In ten weeks my son advanced from Second Grade level in reading to the Fourth Grade level. His spelling improved to the high Fourth Grade level. We feel fortunate in learning of The Sound Way To Easy Reading." Mrs. B. J. Smith, Concord, Calif.

Four sons—"In twelve weeks, two of our boys brought up their reading grades from D to B. And our other two came up from D to C. I'll never get more for my money than I already have with your course." Mr. John Gehde, Jr., Wisconsin

TEACHERS ENTHUSIASTIC

Recommends to parents—"Your course has been excellent in standardizing the teaching of phonics in our entire school system. I recommend it to parents as a home tutoring course for poor readers." R. B. Miller, Supervisor, Monterey, Va.

Even helps teachers—"Although I'm a first grade teacher, the records are doing more to make my Johnnie a solid reader than anything I can do when I'm bone-tired. They're great for teachers who don't really know how to teach phonics." Mrs. P. B. Winkie, Minneapolis

Helps high school student—"I've been tutoring a high school student who failed in English because of poor reading and spelling. After working with your records, he's reading fluently—and getting marks in the high 90's." Mrs. B. C. Starr, Florida

It takes a full year to prepare these rare fruit delicacies for you. Just the mist of honey sweetness surrounds each piece to blend with the natural flavor of freshly picked fruits . . . whole fruits. Repeated slow simmerings remove all water content and replace it with pure orange blossom honey and nectar syrups. You can't buy glacéd fruits like these in stores. So tasty . . . non-fattening, too! So inexpensive you can afford to add extra people to your gift list!

ENKA NYLON Yarns

Picture your own room around them

TOMLINSON designed this beautiful furniture to look great in any setting (just visualize it in your own!) This is from the new "Coulisse Collection," a classic in style and comfort. Tomlinson chose ENKA nylon for the warp to give the rayon-nylon upholstery fabric its fine texture and quiet radiance. And ENKA nylon warp puts strength into fine fabrics, makes them wear longer, resist stains and abrasions.

The sofa has a graceful Greek key outline and the new Doric kick pleat. Attached back cushions are softly tufted. The Tomlinson chairs are mobile, add convenience to the elegance of English Regency contemporary. Damask patterns in blue or green. Sofa about $695, chairs about $295 each. Furniture by Tomlinson, 305 High Avenue West, High Point, N. C.
